IT WAS A near-capacity crowd of Senior Citizens gathered at the American Legion post home Thursday evening for the dinner given in their honor by V.F.W. and American Legion posts.

Senior citizens dance night away at special dinner

"It was wonderful! One of the nicest parties I've ever attended. The food was superb, the entertainment great and the fellowship the best ever!" more than 200 of Charlevoix's Senior Citizens described the dinner in their honor Thursday night.

Hosting the event was the Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, American Legion, headed by James Willis and Charlevoix V.F.W. Post No. 1153, headed by Joseph Kortan.

Two-hundred and 15 roast beef dinners which included homemade bread made by Mrs. George Shearer were served. Following the dinner

IT'S OUTDOOR COOKING TIME

The curling smoke from chimneys of a few months ago has been replaced by smoke from the backyard barbecue. A favorite way of preparing food in the summer is the cookout. To insure faster cooking and easier cleaning line the grill with heavy duty aluminum foil. Stack the bricks in a pyramid for faster lighting, use a good starter and be patient. The coals should take between 20 to 40 minutes before they are ready for cooking.

One of the keys to successful outdoor grilling is knowing when the coals are ready. In the daylight you can judge readiness if they are covered by a layer of gray ash. At night they will have a bright red glow. When they are at this stage spread them on a single layer with tongs and start the food cooking.

Cooking temperature can be regulated by raising and lowering the grid. To lower the temperature on the food raise the grid or spread out the coals. To raise the temperature tap ash from the coals or push them together. If you need to add coals place them on the outer edge of hot coals. Fat flare-ups can be controlled by raising the grid, spreading out the coals or even removing a few. Always have a water bottle handy for dousing uncontrollable flames.

A non-stick coating can be sprayed on the grill before cooking to aid in easier clean up. A damp sponge sprinkled with baking soda makes a good scouring to remove grease and food particles. After you have cleaned your grill cover it and store in a clean dry place.

Add flair to your cooking fare with some interesting barbecue sauces. Combines catsup and applesauce flavored with honey, lemon, onion and various spices, such as garlic and ginger. Tastes great on ribs! Or give a Hawaiian flavor to your chicken with a basting of catsup, crushed pineapple and onion, seasoned with mustard, vinegar and Worcestershire sauce.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl Holmgren will make the missionary presentation. They served in Japan with the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society from 1969 to 1969. Holmgren is pastor of the Kalkaska church.

Jerallyn Goss headed for Mexico

It'll be off to sunny Mexico this summer for Jerallyn Goss, Charlevoix High School junior.

Jerallyn has been accepted as an exchange student in the Youth for Understanding summer program and will be leaving for Mexico June 26 where she will stay until Aug. 23.

The high school student said she had always had the thought of being an exchange student in the back of her mind. A trip to Mexico with her family during the last year made her determined to become an exchange student to that country.

"Since I've been down there I know what the country is like and what to expect," Jerallyn said. "But I want to meet the people and I want to see what it's really like to live there." Although the 17-year-old has taken two years of high school Spanish, she is not spending the last weeks before her trip brushing up on the language. Instead she is boning up on her American history.

"They can understand it if you don't know much about Mexico or if you can't speak the language," Jerallyn explained. "But if you don't know about your own country, they can't understand that."

The high school student, who is the only student from the school district to participate in an exchange program this year, said she currently has a history course and she is trying to read some other books about American history, too.

She's also gathering things about Mexico to take to Mexico with her. She has copies of pamphlets put out by the state and she plans on taking maple sugar candy, Pecoskie stones and a Charlevoix t-shirt or two with her.

She also wants to take cosmetics and records with her as gifts for the family she will be staying with.

Jerallyn feels adequately prepared to leave on her trip. She recently attended an orientation session held by Youth for Understanding and she said she has been getting information in the mail from the group almost every week since April.

The student said she hopes

her family will take in an exchange student next year, too.

"That way it will really be an exchange," she said. Youth for Understanding is a nonprofit international student exchange organization which has exchanged more than 35,000 students worldwide.

Beaver dams interesting to study

There are about a dozen beaver dams in the Jordan River Valley and felled trees can be seen by the hundreds. State Forester Bill Mittig points out, also, that it is most unusual for people to be able to drive along a road and look at beaver lodges from their automobiles. One can be seen off Marsh Road and one off the Jordan Valley Drive. There are signs indicating the locations.

It is almost impossible to look at the fallen trees and the stumps in the forest and realize that they are the work of a small animal, all for the protection of their own lives and those of their young. Half-cut trees show how chips are eaten out of one side to the center area, then from the other side to the center, causing the tree to fall. However, unlike human woodcutters, the beaver cannot tell trees in a desired direction.

The chips that fall to the ground also provide food for the beaver, as it eats the bark from the chips before discarding them.

Since the beaver works mostly at night, it is seldom seen during the day. And if one were to approach the water where a beaver is working, it would probably slap the water with its tail, signaling to the others in the colony that an intruder is approaching.

The biologist will tell you that the beaver is a member of the mammalian order Rodentia which also includes such well-known animals as the squirrel, rat and porcupine. It is the largest of the Rodentia in North America. An adult weighs from 40 to 70 pounds, with a few outside individuals weighing up to 100 pounds.

The beaver colony is very much a family setup. There is only one dominant male, which shows considerable aggressiveness toward the males in other colonies and also to young males in his own colony when they attain breeding age. In fact, the young males are eventually driven out when they are about two years old.

Leaving the lodge where they were born, they strike out on their own, searching for mates and new areas suitable for starting colonies. Most of the work of building the dams and lodges is done by the male beavers, but the females also help when they are not occupied with their young.

An interesting side light to care of the young is that the beaver carries its babies in its arms, much the same as a human. This erect posture is easy for cavers, which all up to gnaw trees.

As most students of Michigan history know, the beaver played an important role in the exploration and early settlement of North America, including Michigan, from the time when Nicollet first visited the Straits of Michilimackinac in 1635 until the first great influx of settlers two centuries later.

In 1660, explorers Radisson and Groselliers returned to Montreal after 18 months in the wilds of what would later be called Michigan, bringing with them 60 canoes laden with nearly a quarter of a million dollars worth of beaver fur. Fashion's whim had elevated the beaver hat to a position of exalted importance in Europe, where men of all walks of life could hardly ply their trade without a beaver hat to crown his wardrobe.

Lillian Bergmann receives Fassett award

By FRANK MARTIN
The first R. Dale Fassett Memorial Award for outstanding contributions for handicapped children was presented recently to a Charlevoix resident by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate Education Association.

Named as the first recipient of the award was Lillian Bergmann who is widely known for her work with the handicapped.

The presentation to Mrs. Bergmann was made by Ronald Moore of the Char-Em Intermediate Education Association during a luncheon held at the Westervane Inn and attended by members of the education association. The award is named for R.

Dale Fassett, who was director of special education for the Char-Em Intermediate District for six and one-half years prior to his untimely death in February 1974. Fassett was responsible for instituting the format for the special education program in the Char-Em district.

According to Moore, the award is to be given annually to an individual who has made a significant contribution to handicapped children in some field of endeavor.

Mrs. Bergmann's work with the mentally impaired began in 1967 when she taught in a day care center sponsored by the Charlevoix Association for Mentally Handicapped Children. As an outgrowth of the day care center, she initiated a sheltered workshop for the older clients in the program which was then expanded into Bergmann Center. The center was named in recognition of Mrs. Bergmann's work which proved to be a pilot program for the mentally handicapped in the state.

Later, Mrs. Bergmann was named a board member of the organization then known as the Michigan Association for Retarded Children and supervised services offered by this organization in 21 Northern Michigan counties. She has continued to work with Bergmann Center where more than 20 clients from throughout the north are employed. She is presently serving as chairman of the Act 258 Board which administers the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board. She was appointed to represent Charlevoix County on the four-county board on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

Mrs. Bergmann has also served as juvenile officer for the Charlevoix County Probate Court and is presently juvenile officer for the Boyne City Police Department. She has also been active in Girl Scouts, and the 4-H program and was recently the recipient of the Library Bell Award, given annually by the Charlevoix-Emmet Bar Association for significant contributions to the community.

GAIL WIEMER, Florence Ellison, Harry Scheid look on as Lillian Bergmann is presented the first R. Dale Fassett award by Sandy Fassett and Ron Moore.

Edmund Fitzgerald edition of Ratigan book off the presses

The sinking of the Carl D. Bradley off the shores of Gull Island on Nov. 18, 1958, gave birth to one of the first and most comprehensive chronologies of Great Lakes history.

Likewise, the sinking of the Edmund Fitzgerald on Nov. 10, 1975, in Lake Superior, has produced the third edition of the now well-known book, "Great Lakes Shipwrecks & Survivals," written by William O. Ratigan, Charlevoix resident.

Ratigan, a Great Lakes author and historian, said the latest edition of the book weaves too major issues about the Great Lakes into the book as well as discusses the Edmund Fitzgerald disaster.

"I don't just cover shipwrecks and survivals on the Great Lakes in the book, but I also try to cover other major things happening on the lakes," Doc, as he likes to be called, explained.

"I like to think of the book as a story of the lakes from the beginning of shipping that covers shipwrecks and survivals and events of the period," he said as he sat in his study surrounded by Great Lakes memorabilia.

The new edition discusses the appearance of the super long ships on the lakes and the controversy that surrounds them. Ratigan also mentions the attempt at year around navigation on the lakes and its progress and promises.

Ratigan said he decided to write the chronology following his involvement in extensive coverage of the Bradley wreck. A former NBC network newsmen, Ratigan got involved in coverage of the Bradley by chance.

"I remember sitting in the kitchen on the night the Bradley sank and looking out the window," he said. "I saw the Little Coast Guard Cutter Sunnew try and go out into the lake against the waves. The boat stood still as if it had hit a stone wall."

Later in the evening the

New York office of CBS called Ratigan and asked him about the shipwreck in the Charlevoix area.

"That was the first word I had heard about the shipwreck," Ratigan, whose weather-worn face looks like the faces of the sailors he has written so much about, recalled.

Ratigan spent the next several months turning in daily and then weekly reports about attempts to locate the missing sailors and plans, to salvage the freighter. Finally demands for news of the wreck ended and Ratigan was

Other Great Lakes books to Ratigan's credit include: "Sea Canals," "Straits of Mackinac," "Hawatia and America's Mightiest Mile," "Young Mister Big," "The Adventures of Captain McCargo," "The Long Crossing," and "Highways Over Board Waters."

DOC RATIGAN'S newest edition of "Great Lakes Shipwrecks & Survivals" has come out in print. Called the Edmund Fitzgerald Edition, the book discusses the shipwreck as well as other Great Lakes issues.

Graduation ceremony still the same, 1910 grad says

When Charlevoix High School graduation ceremonies begin Sunday in the high school gym, one member of the audience will be recalling his graduation from the high school 67 years ago.

Hubert "Cap" Paddock, a 1910 Charlevoix grad, often attends graduation ceremonies for the high school.

"He's my greatest critic," Vane Smith, high school principal and Paddock's stepson, said. "He lets me know when things aren't just right with the ceremony."

According to Paddock, graduation ceremonies haven't changed too much over the last 67 years. Paddock said his graduation was a typical one, however, it was held in a different location from the ceremonies of today.

Seniors in the 1910 class participated in graduation exercises held in the opera house located on the Pine River Channel.

While graduation ceremonies haven't changed since 1910, schools have, Paddock said.

For one thing, the graduation classes are a lot bigger now, the 1910 grad said. Only 15 students were in his graduating class, he recalled. And sometimes that smallness put a cramp on things.

The number of players eligible for the football team were pretty limited, Paddock said.

"If you were on the team you usually played the entire game," Paddock, who was captain of the 1909 squad, recalled. "We only had enough players for about two substitutes."

Commission seeks July 12 vote

Copies of charter available

Copies of condensed version of the proposed new charter for the City of Charlevoix are now available for review by the city's residents.

The Charlevoix Charter Commission has placed 1,000 copies of a synopsis of the proposed charter at Charlevoix City Hall, First State Bank of Charlevoix, Charlevoix County State Bank, Family Federal Savings and Loan, Charlevoix Federal Credit Union, Lieberman's, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, Central Drug Store and Williams Dockside Pharmacy.

The charter commission has requested that the proposed charter be put on the ballot for a July 12 election. It was expected that Charlevoix Common Council would set the date for the special election at its Tuesday meeting.

Mayor Edward Hansen, who openly opposed the proposed charter, has said that he will not block any attempt to have the charter placed on the ballot.

The charter commission is planning a series of four public meetings on the charter. A meeting will be held in each ward then a final meeting will be held for the entire city.

A series of articles discussing the changes in the charter will also appear in the Charlevoix Courier beginning next week.

The new charter maintains many of the provisions of the Fourth Class Cities Act under which Charlevoix has operated since 1906 including a 15-mill tax limit, the ward system and six-member council.

However, the proposed charter brings a corporate-type structure to city government in which the council acts as the board of directors establishing public policy. Day-to-day operations will be carried out under the supervision of a city manager who will have broad powers in the field of staffing and administration.

Candidates discuss views on school board seats

Want to find out more about the candidates running for school board positions in the upcoming June 13 election? On pages 6, 7 and 8 of this week's Charlevoix Courier, readers will find stories about the six candidates running for two positions on the Charlevoix Board of Education and the six candidates running for two seats on the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District

Board of Education.

The stories were written from information the candidates provided on questionnaires sent out by the Courier. The questions on the surveys asked the candidates what they thought the priorities of each school district should be, if they thought programs should be expanded and how they viewed building programs for the school districts.

High School, Paddock graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1915 and then served for 35 years as a career officer. He fought in two world wars and was a survivor of Pearl Harbor. After his retirement, Paddock kept busy as a justice of the peace and then took up gardening and traveling. Even now he spends half the year in Florida and half the year in Charlevoix.

1917 middle school class wrote poem

EDITOR'S NOTE: Activities connected with graduation from school go on year after year, but one that has become less popular is writing a class poem.

We present below the class poem for the 1917 eighth grade graduating class of the Charlevoix Public Schools. It was given to us by Bob Burns of Charlevoix, a member of the class.

We are the class of '17 with 35 enrolled,
We are going to climb to the very height, till we have reached the given goal.
We are going to work and going to strive for we're a class that's all alive.
To introduce each one we'll try, you'll know them better by and by.

Kate Geer and Nita Sheare to us all are very dear,
Lawrence Taylor and Lyman Brown are two of our boys that are never down, Alson Bugbee and Martin Halverson you'll always find brimful of fun, Esther Powell and Marjorie Myers are girls who's minds are bright as fires, Margaret Hull and Clara O'Neill will always give you the fairest deal, Edith Henshaw and Effie Gornell are two who are never naught but well, Alice Dixon and Iva Babcock are very good girls but sad to relate, they have no curls.

Richard Paddock and Doug King are good in school and very thin, Dick Hammet and Clarence Miles are ever running over with smiles, Margaret Milner and Thelma Reed are often ahead when it comes to speed, Hildegarde Wilkinson and Katherine Fitch we'll introduce to you, they do well in their lessons and help each other too.
Ruth Solomon and Marion Sears never miss their lesson nor cause us tears, Elinor Gravelin and Pearl Durance in their studies are too in advance, Vera Dutcher and Mamie Bennet if they keep on working they'll get in Senate.

Robert Burns our greatest poet, when he tells us anything we'll surely know it, Elmo Helms who rings the bell, his head is so big it couldn't swell,
Oh, Helen Webster with her pretty hair, she's not too dark nor yet too fair,
Now you've heard a little of each of our class and Vivian Hall and Fern Loper will come at last.
There is nothing left for poor little me, so in the farthest corner we'll be,
We'll do our best, our very best and to our teachers leave the rest.
So much for the class of 21 who's lesson has just begun.

SOMETIMES THINGS just need adjusting. This young child took time out to fix the flag above this grave during Memorial Day ceremonies in Charlevoix.

Memorial Day--- A time for remembering

KAY CURREY solemnly plays Taps at the conclusion of the Memorial Day program which included a parade and an address given by School Superintendent James McKimmy and a reading of the Gettysburg address by Julie Wannier.

PARADES ARE a delight to children and to the young at heart. This young cowboy spent several anxious minutes waiting for the parade to arrive at his viewing place on Bridge Street.

Life down on the farm

What's life like down on the farm? Ask any Charlevoix Elementary School first grader—they're experts.

The more than 100 students have been studying farm life during a special unit in their classrooms and last week to complete their studies, the students actually visited the farm of Dick and Marilyn Anderson on Faculik Road.

The students toured the barns and barnyard and got to meet the cows and chickens face to face. They also had a chance to taste 'raw' milk.

"Some of the children politely refused to taste it," Mrs. Anderson said. "But one little boy drank six Dixie cups full!"

The children also had a ride in a hay wagon pulled by the Anderson tractor to a nearby meadow where they had lunch, but not before a little excitement.

Some of the children found a baby field mouse which they let loose when one teacher came over to see what the excitement was all about. The mouse promptly ran up the inside of the teacher's pant leg and caused her to do a little jig—much to the delight of the children.

All in all it was a good day.

RICHARD ANDERSON warns curious first grade students not to get too close to the tractor during a recent visit to the farm by Charlevoix Elementary School students.

THERESA MANZER, Charlevoix Elementary School first grader, enjoys her lunch seated in a meadow of the Richard Anderson farm on Faculik Road.

SCOTT YOUNG, Jeff Arnold and Marry Joy investigated the calves on the Richard Anderson farm. The first grade class from the Charlevoix Elementary School visited the farm last week.

WITH A FEATHER in his cap, Philip Muma settles down for lunch during the Charlevoix Elementary School first grade trip to the Richard Anderson farm. Philip found the feather during the trip.

Study charter closely, it could improve city

Copies of a condensed version of the proposed new charter for the City of Charlevoix hit the streets this week. More than 1,000 copies of the new charter can be found at many businesses along Bridge Street and throughout the town as well as in Charlevoix City Hall.

City residents are urged to get a copy of the charter and study it thoroughly. This is no time for apathy. There is no room for the uninformed citizen on this issue. Emotional appeals should not be considered in this issue, only the facts are relevant and they should be studied at length.

The new charter maintains many of the provisions of the Fourth Class Cities Act which was written in 1895. These provisions include a 15-mill tax levy limit, the ward system and a six-member council.

However, the new charter also brings a corporate-type structure to the city government in which the council acts as the board of directors in establishing public policy.

Day-to-day city operations will be carried out under the supervision of a city manager who will have a broad range of duties including staffing and administration. The city manager will be responsible to the council for his actions and if he can't cut the mustard he'll be thrown out.

Although the ward system has been retained in the new charter, council members and clerk candidates will be nominated by ward but will be voted on by the city at large giving elected officials political responsibilities beyond their narrow ward boundaries.

Charter Commission members are enthusiastic about the new document and many of their changes. They see the charter creating a new interest in city government and operations that has been missing for several years.

And they see the new charter as helping the city become more efficient and effective now that it has grown to an almost $3 million business a year.

Legal drinking age should be increased

The battle line has been drawn and now everybody is starting to choose their side over Michigan's legal drinking age.

Even though many, like the Governor of Michigan, are still waiting for more conclusive evidence to roll in, we're looking strongly towards raising the present 18-year-old requirement.

There's been just too much evidence to indicate that the lower drinking age has had serious effect on young adult misbehavior.

Milliken has hedge on the topic for more than a year, when it was first seriously raised in the legislature.

The governor said he would not take a stance until the facts were in. And the facts, according to Milliken, would be revealed through two major studies: one by the Office of Highway Safety Planning and the other by the state Office of Substance Abuse.

The second of those studies was published a month ago.

Based on their findings, both those agencies recommended the legal age be left to 21. The most viable proposal in the legislature appears to be raising the legal age to 19.

But Milliken has not yet announced his decision, despite the dogged persistence of reporters, school administrators and supporters of the bill.

Aides to the governor say simply that the matter is still "under study."

Yet two Democratic candidates hoping to succeed Milliken in 1978 — or bump him out of office if he runs for reelection — went on record in favor of the measure to raise the legal age to 19 by voting for it in a Senate committee.

Some lawmakers say the legal age should be hiked all the way back to 21, but realistically speaking, we feel a compromise at 19 would be better.

That takes care of one major argument against 18-year-old drinking — that high school seniors are getting drunk in school or at school functions and are supplying booze to their younger class mates.

There now appears to be enough support to get the drinking age question through both the House and Senate and it looks like the proposal will go all the way to the governor's desk.

We hope the governor will join us in supporting the raising of the drinking age to 19.

"LOCAL DELEGATION WANTS TO SELL THEIR OWNERSHIP AND INFORMATION TO THE C.I.A. ON A REGULAR BASIS..."

Richard Nixon would have been further ahead if he had never met David Frost.

Ever since our former chief executive packed his bags and moved into exile at San Clemente, I have had a feeling that somehow Nixon might be able to at least explain himself — if not exonerate himself — before the American people.

After all, he was our president for more than six years. He served as vice president for eight years under Eisenhower. Before that he was elected to two terms of the House of Representatives and one term to the U.S. Senate from California. He has led at the national trough most of his adult life. Certainly some explanation for his grievous behavior would not have been out of order.

But when he did have a chance to tell his side of the story, he played his administration in four interviews with British TV personality David Frost, he emerged more imperial, more disdainful of public opinion, more arrogant toward the press and more willing to assault the intelligence of his constituents than ever before.

Does he really expect us to believe that his hand-picked vice president, who was forced to resign after he was caught accepting bribes and fudging on his income tax, was a "surgeon" and "honest" man who simply didn't know it was illegal to accept kickbacks from contributors doing business with the government?

Does he really feel that former Attorney General Elliot Richardson pressed charges against Spiro Agnew because he himself had "ambitions to be vice president or President in 1976 or earlier if somebody had picked him?" Does he really feel that the United States has come to such an awful state of affairs that the president should be allowed to commit crimes that would land ordinary mortals in the pokey?

The tragedy of Richard Nixon is more apparent today than it was in the tense summer of 1974 when the web of

As I was reflecting on something memorable to say about Memorial Day I recalled how I spent last Memorial Day and that made me think of a newspaper clipping I had seen on the bulletin board in the Office of Planning and Zoning in the county building.

By the way, if you don't read the things on bulletin boards you really ought to try it sometime, you never know what you might pick up.

Anyway the piece was entitled "I'd Pick More Dalais!" and it's written by Brother Jeremiah. It goes something like this:

If I had my life to live over again, I'd try to make more mistakes next time. I would relax. I would limber up. I would be sillier than I have been this trip. I know of very few things I would take seriously. I would take more trips. I would climb more mountains, swim more rivers, and watch more sunsets. I would do more walking and looking.

I would eat more ice cream and fewer beans. I would have more actual troubles and fewer imaginary ones. You see, I'm one of those people who live sensibly and sanely hour after hour, day after day. Oh, I've had my moments and I'll have it to do over again. I'd have more of them. In fact, I'd try to have nothing else. Just moments, one after another, instead of living so many years ahead each day.

I have been one of those people who never go anywhere without a thermometer, a hot water bottle, a gargoyle, a raincoat, a gas pump, and a parachute. If I had to do over again, I would go places, do things and travel lighter than I have.

If I had my life to live over, I would start barefooted earlier in the spring and stay that way later in the fall. I would play hooky more. I would ride on more merry-go-rounds. I'd pick more daisies.

How does all that tie in with Memorial Day? Well, I'm a lot like Brother Jeremiah, much too much sensible for my own good. Anyway, last Memorial Day I was asked to chaperone a group of 36 high school students during a backpacking-camping trip on Beaver Island.

I'd been camping before but never backpacking. I'm one of those campers, by the way, who really only enjoys camping when there aren't any bugs, it doesn't rain, there's no dirt and the latrines, if they don't have modern plumbing at least don't smell.

Well when I got to Beaver Island it started out to be beautiful but as we approached the campground it began to sprinkle and then to pour rain and of course that brought the bugs out of hiding along with the mud.

We didn't have enough tents to go around, so this chaponeer bravely agreed to sleep in a makeshift lean-to constructed out of two rain ponchos and some plastic garbage bags.

The latrines did not have modern plumbing, but they didn't smell. One out of four isn't bad.

With all that going wrong you probably think that was the worst weekend of my life, right. Wrong. I never had such a good time and it was the same for the people I was with. I guess I learned that if you live your life in a planned, orderly fashion you'll never experience the pleasure or the joy of the unexpected.

How does that tie in with Memorial Day? Well, I guess that as we remember the dead, we should take note that what we remember about them is the unexpected, the unplanned things they did before they died. We should remember that life is worth living and not let our spirits die before our bodies do.

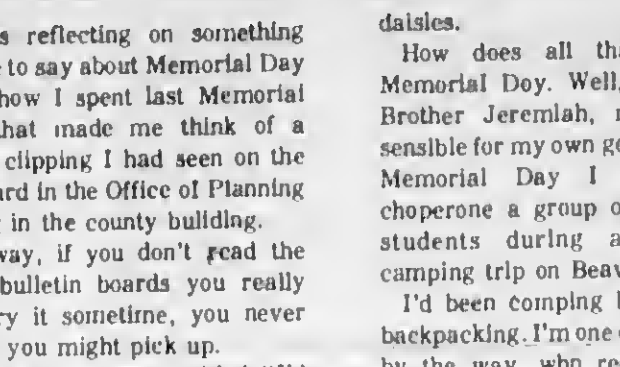

The humility, the common touch, which are the hallmark of great leaders, were missing in Richard Nixon. He dressed his palace guard in tunics and straight out of the Dark Ages. He equipped his court musicians with long trumpets to herald his arrival with flourishes. He brought a rigid, sterile formality to the nation's highest office that didn't sit well with most Americans.

Although he was born on U.S. soil, studied law at Duke University and pledged both at vice president and president to defend the U.S. Constitution, Nixon somehow was saturated with the philosophy of "the divine rights of kings."

That was the reason for his downfall in 1974. And it is nothing short of tragic today, three years later, that he remains incapable of understanding how abominable such thinking is to his fellow citizens.

"Where have you been?" asked my husband as I locked the front door. "To my parent-without-partners meeting."

"Since when are you a single parent?"

"Since Howard Cosell found his voice. Parents-without-partners is a group of 200 women who discuss how we can compete with televised sports. Tonight was an important meeting. We were pressing the heads of networks to either release our husbands from their grip or list them as legally dead so all of us will be free to probate the estates and remarry."

"You talk ridiculous."

"Believe me, we are not talking ridiculous. I read a story where next January, the Super Bowl is going to telecast the game during the dinner hour."

"Of course they are," said my husband. "Why that game is expected to draw the highest ratings since 'Roots.'"

"I don't care if KuntaKinte is playing quarterback, that game is not going to interfere with our dinner again."

"Answer me one question," he said. "Why is it women get so uptight when men watch a football game?"

"We read a poem tonight at the meeting from Melanie Lader in Nederland, Texas, that says it all. Pay attention."

Erma Bombeck

"When we stood at the altar and said, 'I do.'"

I don't recall a football being too, too. When you needed some help to get your degree.

Did football pitch in? No, friend, it was me.

When you sprained your ankle or got the flu.

Was football around to wait on you? And what did football have to do with the kids who live here and look like you?

Football cares not if you live or you die. Yet I rate so low it rates so high.

"You know what you sound like? A jealous shrew. You cannot believe there is something else on this earth that would bring pleasure to a husband, other than yourself."

I tossed him a football. "Okay. Bionic Kidneys, you win. Here's your new roommate. You got four tries to make a first down. Incomplete passes, fumbles, and out of bounds all count."

get arrested for contributing to delinquency and I already gave at home.

But why couldn't a medical man with Dr. Godfrey's credentials look into golf? It would be better if he were a psychiatrist. There is no denying that golf drives people nuts, especially little kids.

Certainly the sanity of this nation's merchants and leaders is as important as the elbow of some little league. How much commerce has been stalled because a duffer has become so deranged he still believes that, after 30 years of banana balls, he can cure his slice if he just plays enough?

Remember when Spiro Agnew was a breath away from David Frost? Spiro was a celebrity chaser and he was continually playing in golf tournaments with Arnold Palmer. Agnew's game was so lousy that he should have been teeing up at 4 a.m. on drizzly mornings while the rest of the world was safe in bed. But he insisted upon hitting the ball while thousands of star-struck fans surrounded the fairways and looked over his shoulder.

In a Bob Hope tourney, Agnew's first

DEAN: Fish. I love to fish, especially for bass. My dog and I go out on the railroad bridge to fish. We have a nice group of people out there. I use white leaches for bait for bass.

COURIER: How much time do you spend here and in Florida?

DEAN: About half and half. I take a month off at each end. COURIER: How do you get back and forth?

DEAN: I drive myself with my dog. It takes me three or four days.

COURIER: Do you have a lot of company in Florida?

DEAN: Everybody has my address and phone number. The college kids go down there and run out of money for lodging. Lots of them visit me. The Pompano Beach house is really my home. I leave all my personal things there. I rent out the Charlevoix house in the winter. This year Stanley Floyd of Beaver Island rented it.

COURIER: Do you have relatives in the area?

DEAN: My sister, Helen Scott, lives here, so do my cousins, Josephine Bindi and Allie Nowakowski. My cousin, Frank Jaskieski, lives in Barnard on my mother's old farm. My son, Ronald, and his family live in Corunna.

COURIER: Do you remember any exciting incidents in your life?

DEAN: I remember the time, in 1949, when I won a five-and-a-half ounce gold brick at the Prospectors' Development Association convention in Toronto. I couldn't bring it back because we were off the gold standard.

COURIER: What is the crime situation in your area of Florida compared to Charlevoix?

DEAN: Crime here is mild compared to Florida.

COURIER: Do you like to cook?

DEAN: Yes, but when you're waiting tables, you don't get much time. My favorite recipe is for pumpkin cake. I make bread and butter pickles, dill pickles, currant jelly and other jellies to take to Florida for Christmas gifts.

Connie Ford chosen Teacher of Year

By LAURA GLASS
Charlevoix High School
Connie Ford, Charlevoix High School speech and forensics coach, has been named Teacher of the Year for her work with the state competitive theater program.

Mrs. Ford was honored during the annual Michigan Week Youth Arts Festival at Central Michigan University along with teachers from across the state in the field of music, art, theater and creative writing. The teachers were selected for the award by members of their various professional organizations. The speech and forensics coach has been a teacher in the Charlevoix Public School system for nine years. She is director of debate and individual drama events as well as advisor to the school newspaper and yearbook.

Mrs. Ford is the co-chairman of Theater Interpretation for the Michigan Speech Association and a member of the State Committee for Drama Competition under the Michigan Inter-scholastic Forensics Association.

The awards were presented at the end of a day-long program that included what had been selected as the best of student talent in the areas represented by the awarded teachers.

Those students who participated in the program came from among approximately 30,000 state high school students who gained recognition of their debate and forensics talents in festivals, competitions and auditions throughout the past debate season.

Bill Peters seeks school board seat

Willis Peters

A five-point program is the platform Willis (Bill) Peters is running on for a Charlevoix Board of Education position. If he is elected during the June 13 vote, Peters said he would encourage the school board not to acquire any land for future school sites without a vote from the taxpayers on the issue. The 18-year resident would also try to give the taxpayers a more reasonable cost to repair and modify the present high school.

Peters also said he would "encourage the board to make sure the 3 Hs are not obscured with Mickey Mouse curriculum such as hanky-panky under the guise of sex education."

He would also make an effort to abolish automatic pay raises to teachers who did not produce results in their classes and he would try to encourage the school board to refrain from taking over more parent's responsibilities such as feeding the students breakfast and lunch.

Peters, who with his wife Helen has six children, said the priority of the school district should be education and the hiring of the highest moral teachers to impart all curriculum.

Peters, 50, said he was running for school board because he felt the board should have at least two members who have "the guts to stand up to the state, teachers, MEA and administration without backing down on any issue that would take away local control of our schools."

Look at what is new in Charlevoix

DAVID MURRAY, manager of the Wharf Arcade, and Bob Murray, his father, look over the pinball machines in their new business.

Wharf Arcade provides amusement for young, old

Charlevoix residents and visitors will have a chance to become pinball wizards during their spare time from now on.

The Wharf Arcade, located at the foot of Mason Street by the city docks, has opened its doors for business complete with pool tables, pinball, foosball and arcade pieces, David Murray, manager, said.

The 20-year-old businessman said he got the idea for the arcade when he came to Charlevoix a year ago.

"I saw a lot of kids around town with nothing to do," Murray recalled. "I had been in arcades downstate and I thought it would be a good idea to put one in here."

So with his father Bob Murray, he opened the Wharf Arcade with eight pinball machines, four foosball games, four pool tables, and four arcade pieces. Murray is still expecting more equipment including an air hockey table.

He also plans to open a concession stand with sandwiches and pop.

The hours of the new arcade are currently noon to midnight. As soon as school is out they will switch to 10 a.m. to midnight.

By FRANK MARTIN
The Charlevoix Rayders came through in great style last week to capture the Class C title in the Petoskey Relays Rogers City was the defending champions.

In winning the title, the Rayders captured three first plus the 7-8 grade relay and a third in the high hurdles.

Participation in the State Class C meet at Ithaca June 4 will close out the track season for this year.

Coach Plas Pencil had only praise for his team that definitely was the underdog going into the meet. "We finally got it all together," he added. Even then, he was without one of his regulars, Neil Dziedzic, who has been ill.

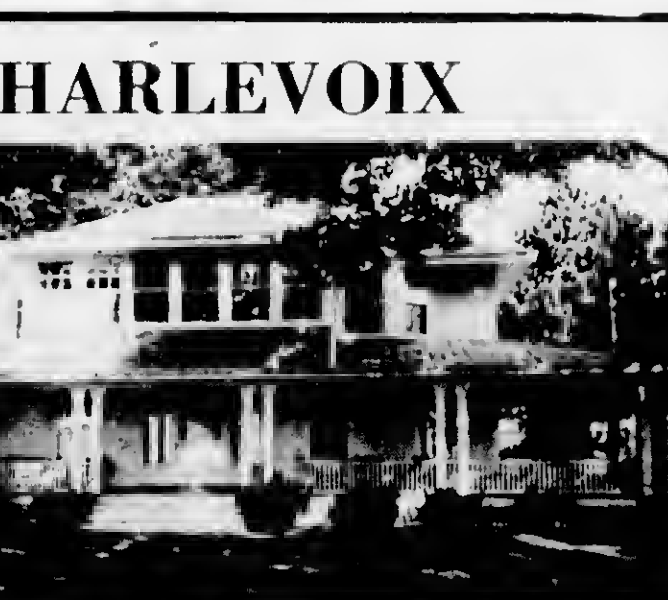

Charlevoix had a total of 51 points followed by Rudyard with 44; Rogers City with 36 and Boyne City with 18. The Hurons and the Hamblers had been strong contenders for the title. Ten teams were entered in Class C. Hale with 54 points was the winner in Class D and Petoskey with 52 points took Class B honors.

Relay teams that captured:

Historical Society to study old pictures at meet

Two collections of pictures taken in the Charlevoix area during the 1890's will be on display at the meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 7, in the Community Room of the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

Edith Gilbert will relate how these pictures were received, and Bob Miles will provide certain historical data. All who are interested in the early history of Charlevoix are invited to view these pictures, and, if possible, contribute information which will be helpful in developing caption material.

Preceding the program, the nominating committee will report on a suggested slate of Society officers for the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Horvath Carole Jean Pence Weds Paul Horvath

The Community Reformed Church was the scene recently of the early evening wedding of Carole Jean Pence and Paul Horvath of Grand Rapids.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pence of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Horvath of Allen Park.

The Rev. Mark Schoon of the Atwood Reformed church officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 150 guests on May 21. Arrangements of yellow and white muslin and carnations and lighted candelabra formed a setting for the ceremony. Lauri Doubtstein of Wayland, accompanied by Dan Robinson on the piano sang "Wedding Song," "Evergreen" and "Only With You."

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, chose a white gown of tulle and tulle with a high neckline and sheer yoke trimmed with white lace. She carried a single red rose and baby's breath tied with white ribbon. The bride's veil was of tulle and lace, edged with a single red rose and baby's breath tied with white ribbon. The bride's veil was of tulle and lace, edged with a single red rose and baby's breath tied with white ribbon.

The bride is a student and bookkeeper at Grand Valley State College. The bridegroom, graduate of Grand Valley State College, is a professional photographer. Wedding guests were present from Michigan, Illinois, Florida and California. A rehearsal dinner at the Argonne Friday evening was hosted by the bridegroom's parents.

On the question of raising the drinking age, I say "yes" they should.

Another Yes
Yes, I think the legal age for drinking and sale of liquor should be raised.

Shouldn't Have Been Lowered
I wish to express my opinion on the Hotline about the drinking age. It should never have been lowered from 21 to 18. And raising it only one year is hardly worth the trouble. Let's have it back to 21. Giving the 18 year olds the vote was good but lowering the drinking age was not. It was wrong all the way.

Drinking Tragedies
Every summer we are reminded of the tragedies that happen, just one did just recently, when young people are served too much to drink. I'd like to ask if there isn't some degree of responsibility by establishments who continue to serve these young people beyond what they are able to manage. They drive home in their cars with tragic results and it just makes one wonder whether there isn't a certain amount of responsibility with those who are serving people, even though they themselves are not ordering. There should be some ruling on this, some checking on the establishments who practice this.

Yes Again
Yes, I think the drinking age should be raised. I've seen all too often that there are instances where establishments serve young people who are at the legal age and unable to make the judgement of when they have had too much. I believe that unless these places that serve liquor do not start to assume some responsibility for these people, perhaps it is wiser to raise that age so they are at a year where they can make their own wise judgement.

Still Yes
Yes, the legal drinking age should be raised. Why has the age of proscribed alcoholics come lower in recent years?

The Higher, the Better
I say yes to raising the legal drinking age. I don't know if you mean to 19 or the 21, but the higher the better, as far as I'm concerned.

She's for it
I am calling about the drinking age being raised to 19 or 20. I am sure for it. I wish they would raise it because we hear that most of the younger kids are involved in accidents. My daughter is in college and she said it is a pathetic sight the way the young people are drinking in college and don't do their studies. My name is Rosa Rosenthal.

Stroud for Mayor?
Is Oscar Stroud trying to get to be mayor of Charlevoix now that the Charter may go to a vote. He sure acts like it right in front of our Mayor, Ed Hansen, the only one who ever did anything for Charlevoix.

Agrees about dogcatcher
I agree completely with the person that wrote about the dogs running loose in town. It's a real nuisance when you have to go out in your own yard and clean up the mess that another person's dog makes. Especially when you don't own a dog yourself.

What really burns me up is when they get in your garbage and you have to clean it up uses extra garbage bags that don't come free. Plus trying endlessly to tell the owner and they don't listen and won't keep their dog on a leash.

There are a great deal of dogs running around and apparently the owners don't care what happens to their pets. If something isn't done soon, a lot of people are going to start taking care of these dogs in their own way.

In the long run what happened to our money that pays for a dog catcher. Is he always on vacation?

Just Pickups
We get so little for our money here in Charlevoix compared to other communities. I am wondering why the City can't allow for a one month pickup of junk during the month of June, July and August as they do for every spring cleanup. I think it's something that's needed during the summer months when we have a lot of summer visitors here.

School board seeks approval of another mill

The Charlevoix Board of Education will be seeking approval of an additional 1 mill for operations in Monday's election.

The 1 mill request for one year will permit the board of education to meet the increased costs of school operation due to inflation. The school board would also like to add a special reading service for middle school students to its curriculum. James A. McKinney, superintendent of schools, said.

Following a survey in the middle school, the board of education found that a small percentage of students needed more assistance in reading after the sixth grade, where formal instruction in the subject ends. The proposed program would help students as they advance through seventh and eighth grade.

McKinney pointed out that the school district has operated for two years without an increase in the operational millage levy. He said this has been possible because expenses were covered by a rise in property values which increased the amount of tax dollars each mill could raise and because of State Aid. The superintendent said it was no longer to cover the increase in the cost of operations with the revenues from these sources.

The average millage levy in the state during the 1976-77 school year was 26.95 mills, McKinney said. The millage rate in the Charlevoix district was 24.35 mills.

The superintendent said the school board has attempted to conduct a sound program in the district with the confidence of the community in the sound management of and the conduct of affairs in the school district. The school board believes the additional 1 mill levy for one year is necessary for the continued operation of a sound program, he said.

Only one township considering challenge of equalization

By PAULA HOLMES
Harry Griffin, Melrose Township supervisor and assessor, will have to stand alone if he decides to contest the 1977 Charlevoix County equalized valuation.

Griffin contends the factor applied to his township's assessed valuation is unfair and he is thinking about protesting it before the State Tax Commission. No other government unit in the county is considering protesting its assessed valuation.

Melrose Township along with Charlevoix Township, the City of Charlevoix and the City of East Jordan needed factors to value up to 50 percent and to insure the four units were carrying their fair share of the total county assessed valuation, according to Jean Blanchard, county equalization director.

City working to collect overdue bills

By PAULA HOLMES
"It's a heck of a way to run a railroad," Alderman Joe Morris said.

"I'm concerned about it and we're working on it," Mayor Edward Hansen said.

Both Morris and Hansen were speaking about the City of Charlevoix's accounts receivable. Various residents and businesses owe the city about $24,000 in overdue bills, which is not too bad for a $3 million business, according to many businessmen and accountants.

What is bad is that of that $24,000, approximately three-quarters of the bills or $18,000 has been due to the city for more than a year.

According to records in the city clerk's office over 84 bills ranging in amounts from $5 to more than $3,000 are more than a year overdue to the city.

For 1974, $4,997 worth of bills are still due with $7,888 due from 1975, $7,478 due from 1976 and $1,377 due as of Feb. 1 for this year.

The largest dollar amount of overdue bills is in the sewer fund with the ambulance service, general fund, electric fund, water fund and cemetery fund right behind it.

More than $5,000 is still due to the city for sewer work with struggle to pay their bills. "The city is a business operation. We could have had that money due us invested and earning interest for us."

"The longer we wait to collect these bills the more difficult it will be. We need a system for collecting these accounts receivable."

Mayor Hansen said he had been working on collecting several of the overdue accounts and had collected more than $30,000 in back bills this year. The mayor said quite a few of the bills were in question and he is working to get them cleared up and collected.

"But it's a matter of priorities and I know this is no question and he is working to get them cleared up and collected."

department and file a fee by June 12. They also sent a letter to the equalization department saying that I was planning a protest.

"The letter was really just an inquiry, but since all this has happened I've been getting a lot of telephone calls from township residents saying they're glad I'm doing it."

Griffin said the factor recommended in the equalization report added 7 percent to township assessed valuation.

"I'm considering protesting because there will be properties in the township over 50 percent assessed valuation when the 7 percent factor is added on top of the present valuation," he added.

Griffin said he had an experienced board of review that knew what it was doing. He said $300,000 had been to the township's valuation and that the board of review agreed with that amount.

Mrs. Blanchard said the outcome of the appeal of county equalization could result in one of three things. The county assessed valuation may remain the same, Melrose Township may be increased in its assessed valuation and all other units in the county lowered or Melrose Township could be lowered and all other units will be raised.

The equalization director said the burden of proof in the case would be on the township and its assessor. She said the case would involve several trips to Lansing for both sides and would cost taxpayer's money.

Mrs. Blanchard said there had never been an appeal of county equalization since she joined the department. She has been with the department 13 years—three years as assistant director and 10 years as director.

Council sets city salaries
 The Charlevoix Common Council set salaries for nonunion personnel at its meeting May 31.
 At the recommendation of the Salary Commission, the council approved $50 raises for five positions. The new salaries are: fire chief, $10,900 up from $10,650; police chief, $13,450 up from $12,600; waste water plant superintendent, $13,200 up from $12,350; city attorney, $7,400 up from $6,550; and city assessor $11,350 up from $10,500.
 The city administrator's salary was left at $17,000 with no increase. The commission said that since the new administrator Allen Sandberg had only been in the job for five months that a raise was not warranted.

MARK RUSSELL of Charlevoix High School, Jeff Johnston, Charlevoix Middle School, and Jeff Orenth of Charlevoix High School, were the first three participants in the Big Brothers, Big Sisters Walkathon to complete the 32-mile course. The boys received prizes this week for their top place finishes.

NANCY WOOD, of Big Brothers, Big Sisters, hands a transistor radio to Alan Bergmann of the Charlevoix Middle School. Bergmann won the radio through a drawing. All of the participants in the recent Big Brothers, Big Sisters Walkathon were eligible for the prize.

City to get more CET A men
 The City of Charlevoix had a pleasant surprise recently. The city found out it would be receiving enough CET A (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) funds to employ seven workers instead of the four workers the city had planned on hiring, Allen Sandberg, city administrator, said.
 Sandberg said four workers will be used to complete the project at Lake Michigan Beach park and the additional three men will be used to look after the newly planted shade trees and the golf course as well as working on other projects.

Red tape catches candidates
 By PEG OHLE
 Governmental paperwork has caught up with candidates for public office.
 People now running for the Charlevoix and Intermediate School District Boards are the first to come under the new state law requiring a pre-election Statement of Organization and a post-election Financial Report of their campaign activities.
 The Statement of Organization of school board candidates must be filed with the Charlevoix County Clerk by June 10. The forms and instructions on filling them out have been sent to all school superintendents in the county, to be made available to the candidates. They may also be picked up at the Clerk's office.
 The law requires that every candidate for and every officeholder in an elective office, regardless of how much he receives or expends, file a Statement of Organization. Also any group acting jointly to influence an election and which receives or extends in excess of $200 in a calendar year must file a Statement of Organization. Such groups are known as "Committees."
 All candidates, officeholders and groups must function through one of five types of committees: Candidate, Ballot Question, Political Party, Independent, or Other. Each type of committee is defined by law.
 County Clerk Clarence Habach is also making the Statement of Organization forms available to present elected officeholders through township and city clerks.

Charter commissioners explain changes

To help Charlevoix residents become acquainted with the proposed new charter, the Charlevoix Courier will be offering a series of four articles discussing the charter beginning today.
 The articles will contain condensed versions of various parts of the proposed charter, which were written by the charter commission and have been distributed throughout the city, followed by comments from Richard Fichtman, charter commission chairman, and John Michael, charter commission member, about the thinking behind the recommended changes in the charter.
 In the remaining weeks before the special election of the proposed charter July 12, the Courier will also be carrying letters to the editor supporting or opposing the new charter and a question and answer column containing questions most often asked about the proposed charter.
 Writing a charter is no easy thing. It took the nine members of the Charlevoix Charter Commission approximately 75 meetings to complete work on the proposed new charter.
 Those 75 meetings involved approximately four months of educational preparation before the commissioners started to write the charter with the remaining 20 months or so spent in the actual writing and rewriting of the document.
 During the educational period, the charter commissioners, who were elected to their posts, listened to comments about city government from officials from Charlevoix and other cities. These people included Mayor Ed Hansen, Robert Westfall, former acting city administrator, and Ida Heise, former city clerk. Others were: Tom Garlock, Boyne City Clerk, Richard Gorman, Petoskey city manager, and Larry Savage, Traverse City manager.
 The commissioners also read materials from the Michigan Municipal League and the charters of Mt. Pleasant, Boyne City, St. Joe, Garden City, Traverse City and Scottville. They also visited Petoskey to see how the ward conventions operated.
 The results of their hard work, which was all at their own expense, follows.
ARTICLE 1—Establishment of City Government
 The City has the comprehensive home rule power conferred upon it by the Michigan Constitution.
 The first article basically switches Charlevoix from a Fourth Class City to a Home Rule City, Fichtman explained. He said that fourth class cities operate under a charter set up by the state legislature in the 1800s.
 Home rule cities, on the other hand, write their own charters must include certain things mandated by the state legislature. Michael added that a great majority of the cities in Michigan have elected to switch to a home rule-type city.
ARTICLE 2—Form of Government
 The form of government provided for in this Charter shall be known as the council-manager plan.
 The Council shall consist of six members, two elected from each of the wards of the City on a nonpartisan basis by the electors of the City at large. Charlevoix members shall be elected for a period of two years.
 At the first meeting in January of each year, the Council shall elect one of its members to serve as Mayor and one of its members to serve as Deputy Mayor, each to serve for a period of one year.
 The Mayor shall be the president of the Council for all purposes and shall have other duties as prescribed by this Charter. The Mayor shall preside at all meetings of the Council and shall have an equal vote and vote in all proceedings of the Council.
 A vote of the Council shall constitute rejection of the issue voted upon.
 Any elected official provided for in this Charter may be recalled by the voters of the City.
 Meetings of the Council shall be held at least twice each month.
 Council and its members shall deal solely through the City Manager with officials and employees of the City whom the City Manager is empowered to appoint or remove.
 The Council shall not have the power to sell, divide, lease, petition, plat, subdivide or dispose of any City park or real estate lying within 100 feet of Lake Michigan, Round Lake, or Lake Charlevoix unless approved by a majority of the electors of the City voting at an election.
 Fichtman said the charter commission selected the council-manager form of government because it was looking for a corporate structure for city government.
 "Under the corporate structure you have one man that is responsible to the board of directors, which sets policy," Fichtman said.
 "With the council-manager form of government, the council is the board of directors and the city manager is responsible to them."
 The commission chairman said the group had considered the mayor-council form of government, which the city has now, and the commission form of government.
 "With the mayor-council form of government, the mayor can countermand what the council told the city manager to do," Fichtman explained. "We wanted to make sure that wouldn't happen."

 "With the commission form of government, I am always reminded of the story about the camel. A camel is a horse put together by committee," Michael pointed out that the city is a $3 million business and needs to be run like a business. He said the city manager under the proposed charter would act as the president of the corporation with the council acting as the board of directors and the residents acting as stockholders.
 The charter commission member also pointed out that the council can not sell any public land without the vote of the people under the provisions of this article.
 "This was written well before the thing with the Beaver Island Boat Company came up," Michael said. "It was written to protect the people. The lake property is too valuable to be lost without it being the people's choice."

Close study of the picture reveals a ring, a tea set, pieces of silver, including a spoon holder, an oil painting, a vase, "throw", crocheted coverlet and pillow, framed mirror, oil painting, knick knacks, and several books. Books, especially those with line bindings, were once popular wedding gifts because they helped to fill the ever present bookshelves.

Many exciting challenges face 1977 graduates in their futures

Graduation from high school is an exciting time of life. It is a time of new beginnings, a milestone, a coming of age. Graduation is a time like no other.

Charlevoix High School graduates should be proud of their accomplishments and they should look forward to what life may bring them—further education at the college or trade school of their choice or an entrance into the work force.

But the Class of 1977 and their parents should remember that the students are leaving the familiar surroundings of high school and the educational system that has occupied most of their life for 13 years at a time unlike any other in the history of this nation.

The Class of 1977 is one of the few high school graduation classes in the last 50 years that has graduated during a time of peace. Our nation is not involved in conflict anywhere on the globe and graduating students do not have to worry about their future being interrupted by a call to serve the nation.

However, high school and college graduates across the nation will have to face a battle of a different kind. They must fight an energy crisis that is forcing citizens of the United States to make changes in their lifestyles just as any military battles.

No longer is the United States the land of plenty without end. Studies show that in addition to oil and natural gas, the world is also fast running out of several other natural resources.

And as resources and energy sources dwindle, jobs in our country's jobbing nation are also diminishing with record high unemployment rates the result.

That looks like pretty dismal prospects for the new graduates. But it doesn't have to look so dismal. In the new graduate we may find the answers to some of these problems.

The new graduate has a fresh approach to life and to its problems. As the graduates gain more education and more skills some of them will no doubt confront these problems of an energy and natural resource shortage.

Perhaps the scientists in the group will discover new synthetic elements to replace the one the world is fast running out of. The mechanics among this new crop of graduates may uncover a means of conserving energy or of efficiently and economically harnessing sun, wind and water.

Perhaps these mechanics will also come up with a means of making our automobiles more efficient, too. The philosophers in the group may be able to change our thinking and bring us around to a more energy conscious attitude.

The future is not dismal for the new graduates. It is bright with prospects and benefits for us all.

Cancer. What an ominous word and terrible disease.

People seem to know innately that the word can only mean the worst and yet at the same time people don't seem to really be aware of what the disease is and what it can do until cancer strikes home.

Statistics predict more than one-half million people will be diagnosed as having cancer of some sort this year. Yet very few people take the time to learn what the warning signals are for the dreaded disease. The statistics also show that of six people who will die of cancer this year, four could have been saved if they had detected the cancer earlier.

Cancer struck my family many years ago while I was in my early teens. A doctor discovered that my father had skin cancer, a relatively mild version of cancer which is usually curable.

The cell destroying disease had already started spreading by the time it was discovered my father had it, however, and he had to go to the hospital to have some tissue as well as the mole removed from his chest and his side underneath his ribs.

I didn't know what the word cancer meant at that time, but I knew it was bad because of the reaction around my home. How bad I didn't know until I came home one day after my father had returned from the hospital. Pale and drawn, he was sitting at the dining room table, himself and not himself in my young eyes.

Since that time, Dad and the rest of the family have been very much aware of cancer and some of its warning signals. Dad has been in and out of the doctor's office for checkups and he has watched for signs of the disease himself.

Recently he was back in the hospital for the removal of a small tumor he had found in his chest. He was out of the hospital the same day with a preliminary report saying the tumor was benign.

But it put a scare into all of us reminding us that one has to be ever aware of the disease and its signs.

So won't you please take the time this week to learn what the seven warning signals of cancer are. And then won't you start a program of regular self-examination.

It could save your life—or your dad's.

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

If the Social Security fund is going broke, the United States might well look into tightening up some extremely liberal regulations that allow foreigners to work as little as six years in the U.S., return home and live like King Tut on Social Security pensions averaging $200 a month.

The situation becomes even more interesting when Joe Immigrant returns home, marries the village floozy, spawns a half a dozen kids and dies. His widow and progeny—although they have never set foot on U.S. soil—will remain beneficiaries of U.S. Social Security until the youngest child reaches 18. If the widow is 62 at this juncture, she will continue to receive SS benefits until she dies.

How did we get in to such a mess? It wasn't difficult, Uncle Sam being the big-hearted buffoon that he is.

Obviously in the beginning there had to be a minimum time for anyone to make contributions before being eligible for Social Security, not only for those who were nearing retirement age when the plan went into effect in 1937 but also for classifications of employees who were admitted to membership in the plan over the years.

So the powers that be decided on six years—or 24 quarters, or however you choose to break it down. There were bound to be some inequities at the start-up and whenever new members of relatively advanced age became eligible for membership. But they appeared inevitable.

Furthermore, shucks-holy-moses-golly-gee, we all belong to the same club don't we? We were all born under the same flag, and we've all paid our taxes and done time in the army, right? Wrong! The Social Security drafters either didn't consider the impact of immigration, or they did and found it to be so minuscule that it was not worth

Since that time, Dad and the rest of the family have been very much aware of cancer and some of its warning signals. Dad has been in and out of the doctor's office for checkups and he has watched for signs of the disease himself.

Recently he was back in the hospital for the removal of a small tumor he had found in his chest. He was out of the hospital the same day with a preliminary report saying the tumor was benign.

But it put a scare into all of us reminding us that one has to be ever aware of the disease and its signs.

special provisions in the law. So immigrants are treated just the same as U.S. citizens under the Social Security system.

As a result, a fellow could live and work in Italy or Poland until he is 59 years old, move to the United States to ply his trade for six years, and return to the old country as a pensioner with handsome Social Security checks showing up in his mailbox every month.

From this corner, the system appears patently unfair. To native born Americans who pay Social Security taxes from boyhood until advanced old age. To allow the nationals of other countries to work here for as little as six years before drawing benefits is a rip-off of the first order.

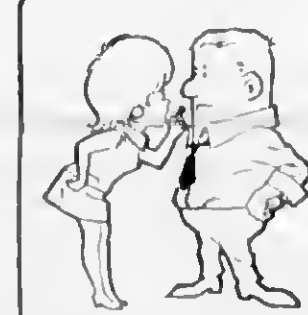

Of course, it is too late to do anything about the thousands of foreign nationals now drawing benefits. We already have made our promise to them and we must keep it.

However it is not too late to change the Social Security law to prevent other short time immigrants from making a sucker of Uncle Sam.

I propose that immigrants be required to work at least 25 years under Social Security before they become eligible for benefits. Then, if Joe Immigrant wants to return to his homeland to spend his declining years, well and good. At least he has paid his way.

Immigrants who arrive in the U.S. too late to work a full 25 years should either be made exempt from the Social Security law or they should contribute while they are here and be reimbursed the amount of their contributions and nothing more when they leave.

The present situation not only is unfair to the average American worker but makes the United States government appear totally irresponsible in the eyes of the outside world.

If it Fittz

by Jim Fitzgerald

As my wife would surely tell you, I am usually a sweet, even-tempered fellow. But there are a couple of things that really bug me.

Michigan Secretary of State Richard Austin wants to sell me a magazine subscription so I will know the best places to hunt and fish. I want Austin to sell his stuff.

Stuffers are the advertising messages regularly stuffed inside the envelopes with bills from the gasoline companies. All I want to know is how much I owe for gas. But Standard Oil wants me to know I can use their credit card to buy a microwave oven for only $20 a month for the rest of my life.

It isn't only the gasoline companies who surround their monthly bills with brochures full of sales pitches. All types of merchants use the gimmick to sneak their advertising into your view. Finding your bill in all that clutter is similar to looking for the ace of spades in a deck of cards. You just keep dealing until you come to it.

The crafty advertisers know you can't simply dump their fat envelopes into the trash unopened, along with the regular junk mail. There is a bill in there somewhere and it must be found and paid, lest your life-style be repossessed. While looking for the bill you might fall victim to a four-color picture of a 52-piece leisure suit.

That's the American way. Salesmanship made this nation great. You might find it irritating, but you don't have to buy. That envelope full of buckshot doesn't have to cost you a cent more than if your bill had arrived nude. Stand firm, and quit your bellyaching.

But wait. Here comes a notice from the secretary of state. He says my driver's license will soon expire. Fair enough. That's what we taxpayers are paying him to do. However, there is something else in the envelope.

It's a sales pitch. "Have We Got a Colorful Magazine for You." It says in 5 colors, "Michigan's Best Outdoor Magazine," published by the Department of Natural Resources. I can get 6 issues for $5, 12 for $9, or 18 for $13. Money back guarantee.

This is no irritation from a gasoline company. This is self-flagellation. I am irritating myself. As a taxpayer, I am paying state employees to stuff subscription advertising into envelopes with license-renewal notices.

Ratigan corrects article

Dear Editor:

For any readers who might not have read the correction themselves, the following lines in the June 1st Courier article about my third edition (Edmund Fitzgerald) of Great Lakes Shipwrecks & Survivals, properly referred to the 36-foot Coast Guard Boat and not the C.G. Cutter Sundew.

"I saw the little (vessel) try to go out into the Lake against the waves. The boat stood still as if it had hit a stone wall."

Obviously the Sundew is neither little nor stoppable by a mere stone wall, of whatever construction, ice or steel. I saw her go out into the raging seas (along with uncounted other Charlevoix watchers) shortly after the brave 36-footer had to return to harbor.

With a hastily recalled skeleton crew, the doughty icebreaker cut into the storm had killed a ship more than three times her size and, in the roaring wilderness of darkness lit by an occasional flare, she stayed out there all night in a hopeless search that finally rescued the only two survivors at dawn.

A gallant ship and a proud crew—our very own SUNDEW.

The quickest way I know to be by myself is to walk out of a beauty shop. Here I am—my hair of a halo of sprayed confection... perfectly coiffed and immune to wind. At the peak of my wonderfulness, the streets look like the quiet before an ambush. There are no signs or sounds or human activity... all forms of transportation have ceased. The wind rustles through the cornucopia that goes with being alone.

Let me stop outside of the house with cutlery and it's like an episode out of "This is Your Life."

Old girlfriends of my husband's appear like an apparition and say, "So you're Erma." New neighbors introduce themselves and make a quick exit saying, "We'll call you. We're not in the book." My husband appears during his working hours with a camera and the kids to take the picture for our Christmas card. A boy who was quite serious about me in high school recognized me and looks relieved when I tell him I found someone else. The minister drops by to bless the house—and everything in it. My son's teacher appears to talk with me about his grubby appearance, and then thinks better of it. The Avon Lady makes an appointment—for an estimate.

For the last 30 years or so, I have been searching for that magic moment when you can put your hair without fear of being discovered. There is no such time.

I remember the first time my husband came home and saw me frosting my hair. I was standing over the stove wearing a bathing cap with strands of hair pulled through that had been stripped white and were standing straight out from my head.

He straddled himself against to door. "Don't tell me! You've just heard we're being audited."

"Don't be cute," I said. "I'm frosting my hair."

Supports legalizing Laetrile

To The Editor:

Having read the news article "Laetrile is a cure for cancer" by Paula Holmes, I thought that a few comments were in order.

State Senator Welborn is correct when he stated that "Laetrile is a freedom of choice issue." The Food and Drug Administration lacks Constitutional authority to prevent people from using Laetrile. This is but another example of "Big Government" hiding rough shod over the people with total disregard for their rights.

Laetrile is not a cure for cancer. The proponents of Laetrile have never claimed it to be a cancer cure, but have said that it is the best weapon against cancer since it is not toxic and can control cancer.

The effectiveness of Laetrile depends on the type of cancer and the degree of malignancy. Effectiveness also depends on adhering to a strict diet and the taking of digestive enzymes, vitamins and minerals, as needed.

Some inaccuracies of fact were presented in your Laetrile article. It was stated that "test conducted by the National Cancer Institute and Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center have turned up no evidence that Laetrile is a cancer fighting drug."

Dr. Dean Burke, a man who spent 45 years doing cancer research, who helped found the National Cancer Institute and who for many years was the head of the Institutes Cytochemistry Division, has stated time and time again that the truth is not being told about Laetrile. Dr. Burke has further stated that Laetrile tests conducted at NCI gave positive results on animals and should be used on people.

At Sloan-Kettering, Dr. Kanematsu Sugita obtained positive results in using Laetrile on mice in 1974. Thousands of people have testified that they have been helped by Laetrile. No one I don't think that a person who goes to a Laetrile treatment clinic on a stretcher or in a wheel chair and comes walking out of the clinic a month or two later is only imagining that their condition has improved.

There have been just too many people who have claimed Laetrile helped them to say that it is quackery. Dr. Ernst Krebs Jr., the man most responsible for developing Laetrile was recently sentenced to six months in jail for testifying at the FDA hearing on Laetrile in Kansas City. Dr. Krebs had been under a court gag order not to promote Laetrile, but he thought it was more important to testify in Kansas City, than remain silent on the issue. Just how rotten can our government get?

The comments of Dr. Pettit concerning Laetrile are mere speculation, I would like to see him document just a fraction of everything that he stated about Laetrile.

A widely known area man is undergoing a new cancer treatment that does not have the blessing of the FDA or the AMA. This treatment appears to be the best weapon against cancer and may well be the final solution for a cancer cure. The treatment is not toxic so cannot kill a person like so much chemotherapy does. FDA harassment has driven the clinic out of the country. Every person who is concerned about their personal liberties should write to their U.S. Senators and Representatives urging them to pass the Medical Freedom of Choice Bill. People should also write to their State Senator and Representatives urging them to legalize Laetrile in Michigan.

I am enclosing the main portion of the reply I received from Congressman Philip Ruppe in regards to the Medical Freedom of Choice Bill now pending before the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I knew you would want to know that I have co-sponsored the Medical Freedom of Choice Bill, H.R. 4061. I share your belief that as long as a drug is proven safe and is properly labeled, it should be made available to patients and physicians who wish to use it. In addition to the basic question of the right of individuals to exercise freedom of choice of safe medical treatment, there is considerable evidence that interest problems at FDA and overly stringent product requirements under the law have made it virtually impossible to meet efficiency standards in a timely fashion. Hence, this country suffers from a "drug lab" as compared to other developed nations."

Amysgoldin, also known as Laetrile and B-17 is on the government's "Generally Recognized As Safe" list of additives.

Generosity abounds here

To The Editor:

The generosity, cooperativeness and enthusiasm of the people of Charlevoix County is unlike any other locale. I found this evident during the recent American Cancer Society campaign.

I express my deepest gratitude to every person in Charlevoix County who served in the following capacity: City Chairmen, Rural Chairmen and Business Chairmen. Captains, Crusade workers, donations to the bake sale and to those who sold tickets for the T.V. Drawing and the Grocery Drawing. A special thank you to Mr. Louis Hollow and the First State Bank of Charlevoix, Charlevoix County State Bank, V.F.W. Post, American Legion, Grey Gables Inn, Olson's Food Store, Charlevoix Floral, McPhillips Flying Service, Puff's Appliance, Charlevoix High School student council and Charlevoix school and business.

The campaign received exceptional publicity from the Charlevoix Courier with the wonderful assists of Miss Paula Holmes and Mr. Bob Clock of the Petoskey News-Review. I also express gratitude to WVOY and WJML radio stations for the excellent coverage they gave.

To all the people who served under these capacities I say a special "thank you" for your willingness to give unselfishly of your time by going out and soliciting funds for the American Cancer Society.

All of these were a vital part of the success of the drive, but without the contributions from the business, schools and residents our efforts would have been in vain. I am especially proud that the people of Charlevoix County are still carrying on the fine tradition of helping their fellow man through such worthy causes.

My sincere thanks for your excellent support in making our drive a success.

Meet Charlevoix

...Marilyn Blauman

Marilyn Blauman is Clerk Magistrate in the 9th District Court in Charlevoix. This week the Courier talks with her about her work and a few other things.

COURIER: How long have you held this job?

BLAUMAN: I was appointed by Judge Fershee June 11, 1976. I came to District Court as a Deputy Clerk May 9, 1975.

COURIER: Are you the first woman Magistrate we've had in Charlevoix County?

BLAUMAN: As far as I know, yes.

COURIER: There are other Magistrates in the County, aren't there?

BLAUMAN: Yes, Howard Johnson in Boyne City, and Gilbert Sturgell in East Jordan.

COURIER: What other jobs have you held?

BLAUMAN: I started out working for Vickers, Inc. in Detroit after high school. Then I attended the IBM Institute, graduated from there and worked there for a year. In 1963, I went to work for the Municipal Court in Berkley for four and a half years. After that I married and moved up here and was a "domestic engineer" for a while.

COURIER: What are your duties as Magistrate?

BLAUMAN: Many. All felonies are brought before the Magistrate to post bond. The Magistrate arraigns and sentences people for misdemeanors on plea of guilty or nolo contendere. This includes traffic violations, Conservation Act violations concerning hunting and fishing, Marine Safety Act violations, Motor Carriers Safety Act violations, snowmobile violations, dog law violations, minors in possession of alcohol, furnishing alcohol to minors, consumption of alcohol on a public highway, littering of property and waters — to name a few.

COURIER: What happens when a defendant pleads not guilty?

BLAUMAN: He is set for arraignment in District Court. Felons are then either bound over to Circuit Court or dismissed, rarely the latter. All misdemeanor cases are handled entirely in District Court.

COURIER: What do you do as Court Clerk?

BLAUMAN: I'm the administrator. I oversee the office, train personnel, keep records, report to the State Court Administrator each month, keep the bank accounts, and turn money over to the County Treasurer at the end of each month.

COURIER: How much money did you turn over to the County last year?

BLAUMAN: Over $74,000. We also sent almost $15,000 to the State Library Fund.

COURIER: When fines and costs are assessed, how are they divided up?

BLAUMAN: By State law, they are divided one-third fine and three-fourths costs.

COURIER: You seem to like your work.

BLAUMAN: I do, because it's interesting and varied. I fill in for the Court Recorder and other people so I know how they all operate. I call in jurors selected by the Jury Board, swear them in and see that they appear on time. I perform marriage ceremonies — 20 of them in the last year. I issue search warrants and suspend driver's licenses. There are so many things, I know I haven't mentioned some of them.

COURIER: Are you a native of Charlevoix?

BLAUMAN: No, I grew up in Royal Oak and went to school there. My family, the Stonehams, moved up here in 1964. I have six sisters and three brothers and they all live around here except one sister who lives in Pontiac.

COURIER: What about your own family?

BLAUMAN: My husband Richard and I have five sons, ages 19 to 23, but only Tom is home now. He works for the City of Charlevoix.

COURIER: Where do you live?

BLAUMAN: In Hayes Township. We have two palomino horses, chickens, a dog, cats and a garden.

COURIER: Do you have any hobbies?

BLAUMAN: Horseback riding, golfing, and fishing

United Way board holds hearing

The United Way of Charlevoix Board of Directors met last week for its annual budget and admissions hearing.

Held up the board this year is John Lachman. He is being assisted by Richard Pajtas, vice president; Elaine Martin, treasurer; and Betty LaRouche, secretary.

Barbara Berlage, Vincent Chew, Donald Voisin and Jack Grubaugh.

During the meeting the eight board members heard requests from 14 different nonprofit agencies for funding during the coming year. The agencies were each allowed 15 minutes to make a presentation explaining their operations and how the funds from United Way would be used in their 1978 budgets.

The board members will now discuss the appeals and set a budget based on the various requests for funding. A fundraising campaign, which is being held in the fall to raise funds to meet the United Way budget.

is to raise funds to support the entire operation and working in the front end," he explained. Mrs. Aull will help with the hosting and work in the business office. "People will be seeing a lot of us," Aull said.

Dale's Photo Shop has a new owner. Paul Maue, owner of Ye Olde Coin and Stamp Shop located inside Dale's Photo, has purchased the business from Dale Meredith.

However, cameras and photo supplies are not new to Maue, who has been in business in Charlevoix since Nov. 15, 1976. He formerly owned three photography studios in the Flint area.

"The hobby has changed a lot in the last 10 years," Maue said. "You can do now with a 35 mm camera what 10 years ago took a twin lens reflex camera to do."

Maue said he wasn't planning on expanding the business right away, but instead would build on what Meredith had started. He plans to continue using Kenart for film development and will also continue selling film, camera batteries, darkroom supplies, photo albums, frames, matting material and framed photos.

The framed photos are all of local points of interest and will be taken by young Dale Meredith and other photographers in the area. Maue said. He also plans to begin taking wedding pictures.

Maue also plans to expand his line of darkroom equipment to include used as well as new equipment.

"I want to be able to supply everything the hobbyist will need in the way of darkroom supplies and equipment, film and cameras," Maue said.

Coffee house to open soon

The opening of a Coffee House to be known as Que Pasa (What's Happening?) has been announced by the director, Steve Stargardt.

It will be open at 9 a.m. Saturday on the lower level of the Kentucky Fried Chicken shop overlooking Round Lake and, for the present, will remain open through the evening when there will be live entertainment. In announcing the opening, Stargardt, who is a vocal music instructor in the Charlevoix Public Schools, said the Coffee House represents a non-denominational effort presently supported by three local churches, the Assembly of God, the Community Reformed Church and the United Methodist Church.

Look what's new in Charlevoix

Charlevoix Agency has new location

The Charlevoix Agency has come a long way, baby. Out of a conglomeration of small agencies has come the efficient, independent insurance agency Charlevoix area residents know today.

And now the Charlevoix Agency has a new look. Dick Martin and Don Voisin, owners of the agency, have moved their business from its 224 Bridge St. location into Dr. C. B. Saltonstall's former offices at 112 Clinton St.

Just as they put a lot of energy into helping their clients, Martin and Voisin have put a lot of energy into remodeling their new offices to provide more efficiency in their business. The building is being remodeled in two phases. The interior redecoration has just recently been completed and the exterior phase is slated for completion next summer.

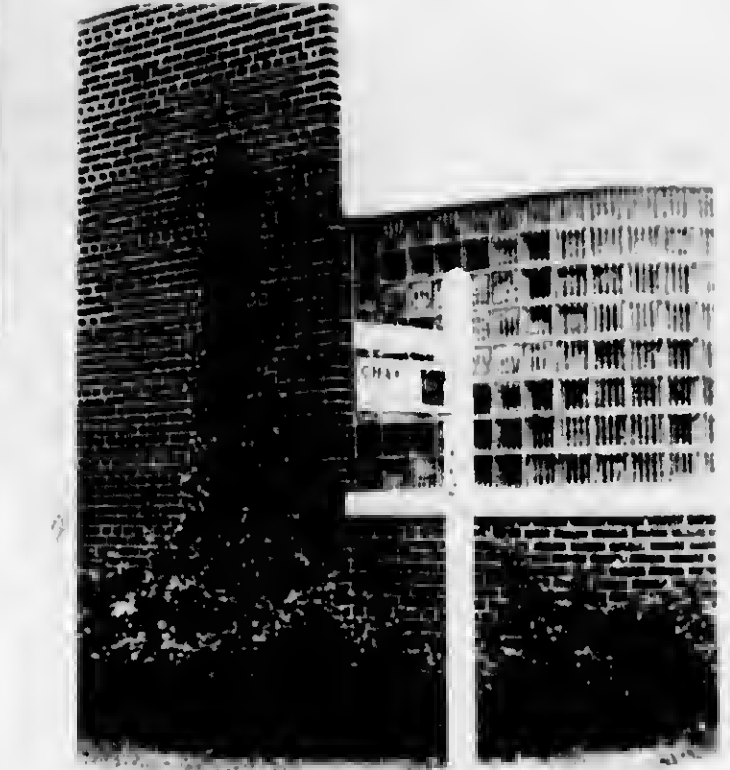

Charlevoix Agency is almost as much a part of Charlevoix as Bridge Street.

The agency can trace its roots to many other agencies that once served the area.

The Myrtle Young and Son Agency, the Sloan Agency, Bridge and Hawley Agency, Hamlin Agency, Carey Agency, Livingston Agency and the Novak Agency are all a part of the history of the Charlevoix Agency, which Martin founded in 1969. Voisin later joined the agency in 1974. Martin came from Grand Rapids where he had worked in various capacities with insurance agencies since 1965. Voisin came to Charlevoix from Cheboygan following 10 years of agency work. Aiding Martin and Voisin are Roy Moran, auto and homeowners underwriter; Virginia Berg, bookkeeper; and Marcie Cherry, clerical employee.

THE CHARLEVOIX AGENCY has moved from its offices on Bridge Street into Dr. Saltonstall's former offices on Clinton Street.

Marilyn, Dick Aull buy Weathervane

Some changes have been made at the Weathervane Inn and working in the front end," he explained. Mrs. Aull will help with the hosting and work in the business office.

Richardson and Aull had owned the restaurant jointly since they purchased it from Earl Young 10 years ago. Other than the changes in ownership, Weathervane visitors won't be seeing too many other changes, Aull said. However, Aull, who has been the chef of the restaurant will no longer be working in the kitchen.

"I'll be overseeing the entire operation and working in the front end," he explained. Mrs. Aull will help with the hosting and work in the business office. "People will be seeing a lot of us," Aull said.

Jim Miller purchases Staley Hardware

A new owner has taken over the operation of Staley Hardware on Bridge Street.

Jim Miller, a seven-year resident of Charlevoix, is the new man in charge at the store.

Miller said he made the switch from real estate salesman to hardware owner because he likes the personal contact he can get in the store and he likes serving the public. Miller managed a hardware store downtown several years ago.

Miller, who moved here with his wife Dorothy and daughters Sandra, Susan and Cheryl from Ludington, said he isn't planning any changes for the store.

In addition to keeping Staley's operating, Miller is also working as an associate broker for Charlevoix Properties.

Miller has served in several positions since coming to Charlevoix. He was a purchasing agent for Freedman Aircraft, yardmanager for Irish Boat Shop and salesman for Ski and Shore.

He enjoys sailing, skiing, hunting and fishing.

JIM MILLER is the new owner of Staley's Hardware on Bridge Street.

Jeryl Anne Carey marries Mark Stanley

Christ Episcopal Church was the scene recently of the wedding of Jeryl Anne Carey and Mark Joseph Stanley.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald G. Carey of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stanley of Vernon, Conn.

The Rev. Robert Wilson officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 175 guests on May 28. White wicker baskets of iris, lilacs and baby's breath and lighted tapers in brass candelabra tied with lilacs formed the setting for the ceremony. Blue satin bows and lilacs marked the pews. Mrs. Marion Lehman, at the organ, played a program of traditional and contemporary music and the wedding march and accompanied Thomas Carey, uncle of the bride, who sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. For her wedding she chose a gown of white organza styled with a flower appliqued bodice. V-neckline and long sheer sleeves accented at the wrists with ruffles and bands of appliqued matching the bodice. The skirt fell from an empire waist and was trimmed with sprigs of the apple as was the hem. Her sheer veil of nylon tulle was secured by a picture hat covered with the same appliqued fabric. Her bridal bouquet was of white daisies, blue carnations and baby's breath.

Marjorie Jane Carey attended her sister as maid of honor and Kathy Larson of East Jordan as bridesmaid.

Saginaw, Kim Muncy of Indiana, Ohio, Maryland, Massachusetts and Connecticut. They wore identical sleeveless gowns of blue polyester, and long-sleeved floral chiffon over-blouses and matching blue picture hats. They carried bouquets of blue and white daisies and baby's breath tied with blue ribbons.

John Hoffman assisted the bridegroom as best man. James Slater, Glen Andrews and Timothy Carey, brother of the bride, were groomsmen and ushers. All were former classmates of the bridegroom at Ferris State College.

Mrs. Carey selected a sleeveless, green and brown floral print on white polyester gown and flowing chiffon cape for her daughter's wedding. Her wrist corsage was of miniature roses and baby's breath with green accents. Mrs. Stanley, mother of the bridegroom, wore a slim, green gown fashioned with a cowl neckline. Her purse corsage was of laburnum roses.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed at the Weatherlane Inn. Jean Carey served the wedding cake. Helen Carey of Cincinnati, Ohio, tended the guest book and Christine Carey of Cincinnati, Ohio, was in charge of the gift table.

The couple left on a wedding trip through the East including a visit to Vernon, Conn.

Wedding guests were present from several Michigan cities, Colorado, Indiana, Ohio, Maryland, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Clinton-Bridge intersection accident prone

THE CORNER of Bridge and Clinton streets is the most dangerous one in the county according to state police statistics. More than 20 accidents took place there last year.

By PAULA HOLMES

Next time you drive through the intersection of Bridge Street and Clinton Street in Charlevoix be careful.

According to Michigan State Police statistics, that intersection is the most dangerous one in Charlevoix County.

Last year, 22 accidents occurred in the intersection, which is the site of the only stop light in town, or within a 150-foot radius of the area. Twelve more accidents occurred at that intersection than at any other intersection in the county.

You don't have to fear for your life when you drive through the Bridge-Clinton intersection, however, not one person was injured in all of the accidents that occurred at the intersection.

Sgt. M. J. Richter, of the state police traffic and safety division, said:

Richter said the second most dangerous intersection in the county is at the corner of M-75 and U.S. 131 in Melrose Township, which is also the site of a traffic light. Last year, 10 accidents took place at the intersection including 4 accidents where 10 people were injured.

The statistics about Charlevoix County traffic accidents are a part of the new Michigan Accident Location Index System operated by the state police. The system started as a pilot project in Kalamazoo County six years ago in response to one of 18 federal government traffic safety standards that required states to know where their high accident locations were.

"We were already getting reports from all of the law enforcement agencies about the types of accidents that were happening, but we didn't know where they were happening," Richter said. "And we couldn't really set up a program to reduce accidents if we didn't know where they were."

So the state police decided to set up a computer program that indexed all of the roads in the state and included measurements of the roads from intersection to intersection.

Now when an officer fills out an accident report, he can state how many feet the accident occurred from which intersection and that information will be fed into the computer and a running tally will be kept on the number of accidents occurring in that location.

The police are hoping that this information can be used to work out a program that would reduce accidents at the most dangerous intersections.

The computer is not set up to handle accident locations for all of the roads in Charlevoix County yet. Only those roads that intersect with state trunklines have been indexed on the computer. But the department is working on adding the local roads to the index system and anticipates that the work on the Charlevoix County road system should be completed next year.

Richter said that most of the dangerous intersections in the county were located in the City of Charlevoix, however, Charlevoix is the only city in the county with a major federal highway running through it.

Other dangerous intersections in the city include: the corner of Petoskey Avenue and Nichols Street where nine accidents took place including one with one person injured; the corner of Bridge Street and Belvedere Avenue where eight accidents occurred including one where three people were injured; the corner of Bridge Street and Park Avenue where eight accidents took place with no injuries; the corner of Bridge and State streets where six accidents took place including two where two people were injured; the corner of Bridge and Antrim Streets where six accidents took place with no injuries; the corner of Bridge and Upright streets where five accidents took place with no injuries; the corner of Bridge and Mason streets where five accidents occurred with no injuries; and the corner of Michigan and Dixon avenues where five accidents occurred including two where three persons were injured.

Richter said statistics showed 813 accidents took place in Charlevoix county in 1976 including six fatal accidents that involved the death of eight people. There were 208 accidents involving the injury of 327 people.

Of the 813 accidents 107 accidents involved animals, 14 involved motorcycles, 10 were roll overs, 9 were bicycles and 3 involved pedestrians. In 120 of the accidents someone had been drinking.

Of 1,202 drivers involved in the 813 accidents, 204 drivers were between 20 to 24 years old and 261 were between 25 to 34 years old. Approximately 780 of the drivers were county residents with 340 Michigan residents from other counties involved in the accidents and 36 from out of state. About 45 driver's home residents were not known. Of the fatal accidents, five of the nine drivers were county residents.

Of the 1,202 drivers involved in accidents, only 349 were female, which is about the state average, Richter said.

Auto accidents cost $1.2 million in county in 1976

Getting into an automobile accident can be pretty expensive.

The latest figures from the Highway Users Federation and others show the annual cost of accidents in Charlevoix County is about $1,271,000 for the 8,950 passenger cars in operation locally. Included in the cost are: medical expenses, loss of earnings, loss of production and property damage.

For the State of Michigan, the total cost of automobile accidents annually is given as $410 million, equivalent to $142 per registered motor vehicle in the state. This compares with an average of $114 per vehicle throughout the United States as a whole and with $132 in the East North Central states.

The overall cost of automobile accidents amounts to about $20 billion a year nationally.

Living in a rural area doesn't necessarily mean your chances of getting into an automobile accident are any less, either. Insurance statistics indicate that one car in every ten is involved in a traffic accident each year.

And according to the National Safety Council, about two out of every three motor vehicle deaths occur in places classified as rural. The victims, in the rural cases, are usually the occupants of the cars. In urban areas, on the other hand, two out of five victims are pedestrians.

I am a mother of five living in Charlevoix and I would like to give you my opinion on something. There is no place in Charlevoix that sells cigarettes that won't sell them to minors. I've seen and heard of middle school children spending their lunch money on cigarettes. A cigarette and a candy bar is what their lunch is, I guess. Please don't say "it's the parents fault," because that's a cop-out for the greedy merchant. Parents can't follow their children around all over town, every waking hour. We preach, we beg, we threaten them not to smoke. But our words don't mean one thing when they can go anywhere and buy cigarettes. I asked one merchant about this and she said she doesn't have time to check I.D.'s. It's really a shame that she can't tell the difference between an 11 year old and an 18 year old. Our show is the same way. No youngster is ever turned away from an 11-rated movie if he or she pays the full price. Also, if the drinking age is raised to 19, so what? One store, in particular, has been selling beer to minors for years and we all know that. Our police department must know all about this, but why hasn't something been done about it? Laws are being broken, crimes are being committed! My youngest children don't smoke or drink yet, but let them tell you about all the burn-outs in the middle school and high school. It's true. Ask the teachers. It's truly pathetic. And we allow this to happen. So, come on folks, help us all to help our kids. Is a sale like that so important to you merchants or is greed the name of the game, even here in Charlevoix.

P.S.

has been named superintendent of the Charlevoix Public Schools.

Gordon W. VanWieren, 44, was selected from among 100 applicants for the position being vacated by James A. McKinnis, superintendent for the past three years. McKinnis is leaving Charlevoix to become superintendent of the Cadillac Public Schools.

VanWieren was hired for the position by the Charlevoix Board of Education Monday night. He will receive a three-year contract which was expected to be mailed to him Tuesday for his signature. The terms of the contract include a salary of $25,545, a car allowance of $2,400 (using his own vehicle) and the fringe benefits offered all school administrators.

The new superintendent of schools will take office July 1.

In accepting his new position, VanWieren said he and his family had wanted to return to Northern Michigan since living in Indian River where he was a teacher-coach, principal and superintendent.

He explained he had set out for himself to earn his doctorate degree and he had gone to southern Michigan to be near universities where he could work toward obtaining his degree. Now that he will receive his Ph. D. this summer, VanWieren said he wanted to return to the area he liked best.

regarding salaries, VanWieren said he was willing to take a cut in salary if necessary in order to return to the north country. He added that he had found the "biggest is not always the best" and that he was anxious to return to an area and a smaller school where he felt he would be happier.

A native of Cadillac, VanWieren received his B.A. degree from Central Michigan University in 1958; his M.A. degree in counseling and guidance from Michigan State University in 1962; Ed. S. degree from CMU and will complete his doctorate in education this summer.

His wife, Jean, has a masters degree in reading and is a member of the Reading Association.

They have four children, three daughters and a son. Two daughters are in college, another is in high school and the son will enter high school this fall.

Bus schedules revamped, kids can take it to Ferry Avenue beach

By PAULA HOLMES

Take a bus to the beach? That's right, Charlevoix residents will be able to take a bus from Veterans Memorial Park on Bridge Street to Ferry Avenue Beach for a mere two-bits, thanks to the revised summer schedule of Wolverine Stages.

Pelletier-based bus company that has been running a mass transit system in Northern Michigan from Mackinaw City to Charlevoix to Petoskey a year ago with two runs at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. from Veterans Memorial Park and the Charlevoix Airport.

In addition to the meager revenues the bus run has made, it is supported by a $34,000 grant from the Department of State Highways and Transportation out of the gasoline tax fund.

Beginning next Wednesday, area residents will be able to ride to the beach from downtown Charlevoix at 11 a.m. and to return to the downtown area at 3 p.m.

"We're adding the beach run as a means of introducing the bus system to Charlevoix residents and visitors," J.J. Rudnick, of the Bureau of Urban Transportation in Lansing, explained. "We thought this run would also help parents who usually have to cart their kids to the beach. This summer the kids can take the bus."

The bus will also be leaving Charlevoix at 7:30 a.m., 11:25 a.m. and 3 p.m. and returning to town at 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 5:27 p.m. beginning next Wednesday.

"We felt the basic needs of Charlevoix residents for a bus system centered around the college, getting to the doctor's office and shopping," Rudnick explained. "So we tried to adjust our schedule to the travel habits of the majority of the people."

"We're still open to suggestions, however."

The state official stressed the importance of using the bus system.

"The state will subsidize the bus run for two years," Rudnick explained. "After that if the run isn't self-supporting it will be dropped. "You know what they say—use it or lose it."

Rudnick said the Mackinac City to Boyne City run is now more than two years old and is self-supporting.

"With the energy crisis, buses are going to become more and more important," Rudnick said. "Michigan is way ahead of many other states because we have mass transit systems already in place. We're not like other states who have yet to set the systems up."

"All we're asking people to do is on one out of every 10 trips they take, take the bus. This would represent a fuel savings of 10 percent in our state."

"Some day we may need that fuel."

reading program for students in the middle school who need extra attention was turned down by a vote of 494 to 484 with six ballots spoiled.

The 5 mill tax levy for five years to underwrite the cost of operating the Charlevoix Public Library was renewed by a margin of 26 votes with 502 casting yes votes and 476 casting no votes with six ballots spoiled.

The school district voters also cast their ballots for three trustees to the Charlevoix-Ennet Intermediate School District Board of Education.

The candidates leading in the intermediate school board race at press time were: Clayton Healey, current president of the board, and two newcomers Mary Ann McCullough of Petoskey and Frederick Bruce Bergmann of Charlevoix.

Intermediate school district candidates and the votes they received in the Charlevoix School District follow: Frederick Bruce Bergmann, 11; Clayton Healey, 10; Mary Ann McCullough, 9.

Three public meetings on the proposed charter for the city of Charlevoix have been scheduled by the Charlevoix Charter Commission, according to Chairman Richard Fochtman.

Fochtman said the meetings have been called by ward to familiarize voters with the ward convention system provided for in the new home-rule document.

All of the meetings have been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the High School study hall. Ward III voters will meet Tuesday, June 21; Ward II Wednesday, June 22; and Ward I Tuesday, June 28.

Fochtman said voters who are unable to attend their own ward meeting are welcome to sit in on any of the three meetings.

A special city-wide election on the charter will be held July 12 at the city hall from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Absent voter applications are available from the city clerk.

If approved, the first ward conventions to nominate aldermen and the city clerk will be held in September, followed by a general city election in November. Terms of office under the new charter begin Jan. 1.

William Fochtman did not seek re-election.

A total of 964 votes including 50 absentee ballots out of a possible 4,000 votes were cast in Monday's election.

Phyllis Loucks joins staff at Charlevoix city hall

A new face will be greeting visitors to the city administrators office from now on.

Phyllis L. Loucks has been hired as secretary to the administrator to replace Barbara Black, who is moving out of the state. Mrs. Black had held the position for one year.

Mrs. Loucks is no stranger to the Charlevoix area. She grew up here, attended Charlevoix schools and has also worked in the area at House Furnishings in Petoskey, at Haskins.

City crews busy working on street lights

City of Charlevoix electric crews have been busy working on street lights and electric outlets throughout the city.

Crews completed work on replacing bulbs in all but two outlets on Lincoln Street last week. The old bulbs were replaced with high pressure sodium lights, Allen Sandburg, city administrator, said.

During this week the crews will be working on Dixon Avenue and Meek and Prospect Streets installing new posts and eliminating the temporary overhead wires hanging along the streets.

The lights will also be on individual circuits so that if one light goes bad, all of the street lights won't be affected as is now the case.

City crews also installed electrical outlets on the light posts in East Park, Sandberg said. This will eliminate the need to string overhead wires in the park for the special events that will be held in the park this summer.

In the past the wires were needed to bring electricity to the park. Now each pole will be a power source.

Grant for Mt. McSaubia awarded

The Mt. McSaubia recreation area may have a new look this winter or even late this summer.

The City of Charlevoix has received a $17,000 grant from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, part of the federal Department of Interior, Rep. Philip Ruppe, R-Houghton, has announced.

The grant funds, which must be matched with $17,000 of city funds, will be used to construct hockey and ice skating rinks, a multipurpose building with restroom and shower facilities and a road in the recreation area.

Dwight Boss, recreation director, said he hadn't been notified about the grant yet, but that he would like to get construction started as soon as possible.

Mayor names new standing committees

New standing committees for the Charlevoix Common Council have been appointed by Mayor Edward Hansen.

The committees and their members are: Finance and Budget, George Plumm, chairman, Ivan Whitley, Sue Erber, Utilities and Streets, Joe Morris, George Plumm, Haywood, chairman, George Plumm, Ivan Whitley, Police, Fire and Ordinance, Sue Erber, chairman, Jeanne Wallace, Joe Morris, Marina, Recreation, Public Buildings, Planning, Joe Morris, Jeanne Wallace.

The aldermen will serve on the committees for the 1977-78 fiscal year.

Evangelist to address Assembly of God members

A special series of services will be held at the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church this week.

Council met for 90 minutes as the board of appeals before granting a 25-foot backyard setback variance for William Kusina allowing him to build the second phase of his proposed office building at the corner of Bridge and Hurst streets.

Council members said it would be a waste of land not to build the variance, however, they wanted to see a site plan before granting the variance so that they would know exactly what Kusina was planning to do with the property.

Kusina said he wasn't going to have a site plan prepared until he got the variance because of the expense of having one made.

Mayor Edward Hansen urged council to grant the variance so that Kusina would repair the wall along Bridge Street, which Kusina said he would do if he got the variance. Kusina is planning to construct a poured concrete wall which will be up to 17 feet higher in places than the current wall. The new wall will also be topped with a green, plasticized chain link fence.

In other action, council discussed land owned by Robert Dyksterhouse. Dyksterhouse had originally purchased two parcels of land from the city with an agreement that he would build

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of four articles discussing the proposed new charter and the changes it would make in the operation of government in the City of Charlevoix. This story will cover Article 3 and 4 of the charter which deals with administration and registration, nominations and elections.

The format will be the same as last week including a condensed version of the charter followed by comments from Richard Fochtman, charter commission chairman, and John Michael, charter commission member.

Article 3—Administration
 The administrative officials of the City shall be the City Manager, City Clerk, City Assessor and City Treasurer. All appointments, promotions, and compensation of administrative officials of the City shall be made solely on evidence of merit.

The City Manager shall be appointed by a majority vote of the entire Council for an indefinite term. The appointment shall be subject to the approval of the City Manager, City Clerk, City Assessor and City Treasurer. All appointments, promotions, and compensation of administrative officials of the City shall be made solely on evidence of merit.

The City Manager shall prepare and submit the Annual Operating Budget and Capital program to the Council. The City Manager shall submit to the Council and make available to the public a complete report on the financial and administrative activities of the City for the past year at the annual ward conventions.

The City Clerk shall be elected by a majority vote of the electors at large. The City Attorney shall be appointed by a majority vote of the entire Council.

The City Treasurer shall be appointed by the City Manager with a majority consent of the entire Council. The City Treasurer shall be appointed by a majority vote of the entire Council.

Several changes have been made in the duties of city officials in Article 3, Fochtman and Michael pointed out. The city manager's powers are broadened and the clerk and treasurer's duties are modified.

The two charter commissioners said the city manager's duties and responsibilities have been changed in line with the changes in the charter that make the operation of city government more like the operation of a business.

The city manager's responsibilities are broadened so that he may act like the president of a corporation, the two men explained. Under the new charter, "When you appoint someone you can set qualifications they must meet," Fochtman said.

Fochtman said many people might argue that Richard Austin does not have qualifications to be Secretary of State, but his department runs well and he was elected to his position.

Other officials with changed duties include the clerk and treasurer. Under the new charter, the city clerk will be elected by the people to serve as the clerk of the council, Fochtman explained. The clerk will sign ordinances and bonds and keep the minutes of the council.

The city treasurer would become an appointed official and would be the chief financial officer of the city. "When you elect someone you can't set up any qualifications they must meet," Fochtman said.

Fochtman said many people might argue that Richard Austin does not have qualifications to be Secretary of State, but his department runs well and he was elected to his position.

As Secretary of State he can hire professionals to do the job that needs being done," the charter commission chairman said. "The city of Charlevoix cannot afford to hire the number of professionals it needs and pay the salary of an elected official in that department."

The City Clerk shall be elected by a majority vote of the electors at large. The City Attorney shall be appointed by a majority vote of the entire Council.

Michael said the reasoning of the charter commission behind having everyone in the city vote for the ward representatives instead of just the ward residents was that all aldermen would then feel responsibility toward doing what was best for the city as well as their ward.

"This way a ward can't control the council, either," Fochtman said.

The charter commission chairman explained the reason for the nonpartisan ballot was to encourage more qualified people to run.

"Charlevoix is basically a Republican town," he pointed out. "So if a person runs as a Democrat he or she doesn't have a chance of winning even though they might be a qualified candidate. The nonpartisan ballot could change that."

The election of city officials will also be changed from April to November. Fochtman said the charter commission felt this would help the city save money on election costs and it would also create more interest in the elections because they would be held in conjunction with other elections.

Council grants variance

Real estate matters kept the Charlevoix Common Council tied up for much of its meeting Monday night.

Council met for 90 minutes as the board of appeals before granting a 25-foot backyard setback variance for William Kusina allowing him to build the second phase of his proposed office building at the corner of Bridge and Hurst streets.

Council members said it would be a waste of land not to build the variance, however, they wanted to see a site plan before granting the variance so that they would know exactly what Kusina was planning to do with the property.

Kusina is planning to construct a poured concrete wall which will be up to 17 feet higher in places than the current wall. The new wall will also be topped with a green, plasticized chain link fence.

In other action, council discussed land owned by Robert Dyksterhouse. Dyksterhouse had originally purchased two parcels of land from the city with an agreement that he would build some sort of business on the land within a year or it would revert back to the city.

He did build two buildings, but there is some question about where the buildings are located and if they are on two parcels of land.

Dyksterhouse would now like to sell some of the land to Paul Hufford for the relocation of an industry from East Jordan, but it is now clear who owns the land and the city or Dyksterhouse, according to the title company.

Council is continuing study of the issue.

Council also hired Robert Patter, Marion Township supervisor and assessor, to work part time as city assessor, for $6,500 a year.

TWO STUDENTS were awarded $150 scholarships by the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild this year. Theresa Russell and Laurie Barry receive checks from Janet Friedinger, chairman of the scholarship committee, as other members of the committee, Anne Georgi and Pat Bickerteth look on. Miss Russell will be entering a medical assistant program at North Western Michigan Community College in Traverse City and Miss Barry will study nursing in a four year baccalaureate program at Northern Michigan University in Marquette.

Editorials/Opinions

It's time to review need for county-wide zoning in Charlevoix

Charlevoix County should mourn the resignation of County Planner Bill Mercer. Mercer has worked hard to protect the county not only from downstate developers and others who saw Charlevoix County as a place to make a quick buck, but also from itself through forward-looking planning and zoning ideas.

At the instruction of the county board of commissioners, Mercer and the county planning commission wrote a county zoning ordinance in 1972 which was in effect for approximately nine months and then was thrown out following a referendum vote.

Since the defeat of county-wide zoning, all of the townships in the county have adopted their own ordinances and with the help of the Office of Planning and Zoning are attempting to administer and enforce them.

Mercer has worked hard to educate the various zoning officials in the county, holding many workshops for them as well as spending long hours on the phone and in person working with individual zoning administrators.

The county planner has also worked hard with the members of the county planning commission trying to help them find an effective direction to follow as they work with planning and zoning projects in the county.

Now as the planning commissioners and the county commissioners prepare to look for a new county planner and zoning administrator, perhaps it is time for all county residents as well as the officials to take a hard look at the state of planning and zoning in the county.

Residents and officials should ask themselves if planning and zoning the way it is currently being handled is doing what it was designed to do. The answer will probably be no.

Because each township has its own ordinance, someone wishing to build a home or bring a business into the area must run hither and high searching for the proper zoning ordinance for each different parcel of land the buyer may look at. Instead of making it easier for a buyer to find land suited to his or her purpose, this type of zoning makes it harder.

Also because each township has its own ordinance there is some inequity for people who may be living right across the street from each other but in different townships. One township has the land zoned for one use and another township has it zoned for something else. There is no continuity of zoning from township to township.

Administration of the zoning ordinance at the township is also difficult not only because few of the administrators have had any training in planning and zoning but also because many of the administrators and zoning board members are related to people they have to make decisions about. Their decisions are muddled by these conflicts and definite inconsistencies arise in administering the zoning ordinance that probably would not arise if it were done on a county level.

And as people begin to challenge zoning more and more because of the inequities in the administration and enforcement of the ordinances, townships will face financial hardships as they pile up legal bills defending the zoning ordinance. A county at least has more resources to fall back on when a zoning ordinance is challenged.

But the zoning and planning situation in Charlevoix County can never be changed merely by the whim of officials. The changes must come from the people. People who are concerned about protecting the county and make it a place where farmers, businessmen, industrialists, schools and families can live together in harmony in the best use of the land.

At least think about it.

Clockwise by Bob Clock

Back in the winter of 1973-74, when Clockwise was still at the altar of the Charlevoix Courier, clouds of economic uncertainty were fast gathering on the horizon.

Inflation was rampant and getting worse. Jobs were becoming fewer and fewer. Interest rates were climbing to record levels. And taxes had started their long march upward.

As the editor of a country weekly I had daily reminders that all was not well on the economic front. I remember one reader calling to say she would have to cancel her subscription after 25 years. "There's just no money left!" she complained.

Others would call the office or drop in looking for a shoulder to cry on. Breadwinners were laid off. Ungodly medical bills had wiped out the savings of a lifetime. A cripple in his seventies was in the process of repairing his own second story roof because he couldn't afford to hire it done. His wife with a failing heart was supposed to stand on the ground and hold the ladder.

"Holy Moses!" I said to Advertising Manager Cheryl Gail one day after a particularly heartrending recitation of economic bills. "Unless they get some help, some of these people are going to go hungry before long."

One immediate effect of the burgeoning recession was a special reduced senior citizens rate for the Courier. But someone that didn't seem to be helped was the disabled. The little savings wouldn't buy a good meal for a midday.

Then we started kicking around the idea of a community garden, sponsored either by the county or the city. Folks at the county building weren't too hot on the idea, the county being as big and as sparsely populated as it is. But city fathers were interested. Hooray!

The Courier arranged a meeting between members of the council and County Agent Ed Rebanan to discuss details of a community garden project. We ran several back-to-back editorials endorsing, honest toll and the

Paula Holmes... Speaking Her Mind

I love children. I think they're really neat no matter what age, size, shape or form they come in.

It's incredible to watch as children begin learning about the world I have lived in for so long. Everything is fresh and new in their eyes. They see something special in things I have walked by many times without even a blink of an eye.

Most of the children I know have a wonderful outlook on life. They usually pick out a good thing and are totally oblivious to the bad. Children have a type of joy about life that is unequalled. Not all children are this way, however, and that's too bad. These few children shouldn't be deprived of a chance to satisfy their curiosity and test their wings as they grow into adults.

I was a tutor once to a first grade boy that had been neglected by his parents. He wasn't beaten or bruised, he was just forgotten. His parents didn't like him or want him.

And this lack of love had turned a mere six-year-old into an emotional wreck. He couldn't do his schoolwork like the other children because he couldn't concentrate on the subject long enough to get the work done.

It was painful to watch as he struggled to prove he could be like the other children and do the work. And he could have done the work, he was actually quite a bright child. But he found it hard to believe in himself because nobody else did.

It's because of this small boy I tutored

Erma Bombeck

One of the chores that was never mentioned in my job description when I became a wife and mother was that of mediator between the Family Doctor and the Family Sicker.

You know how it goes. Your child comes in from play and says, "I don't feel well. My legs feel like they got little ants crawling over them, my head hurts real bad, I got a big pain right here on my side, and I can't see real well. Everything turns black and I'm dizzy and burning up and then I got this real chill and sometimes there's a ringing in my ears and..."

As you herd the child into bed, your blood turns to ice as you hurriedly call the doctor.

"Could you bring him to my office around 3:00?" he asks.

There's not one of them who go, "No, he stands up. 'You are assuming that he will last until 3:00. I want you to come here!'"

Sometimes my performance is so convincing a doctor will actually stop off on his way home, he enters the room of the Sicker.

At the sight of the doctor the kid starts to move about like a Japanese volleyball team. He springs into the air, falls on the mattress on his face, giggling and laughing, hiding behind the pillow, brings out his puppets, turning on the record player, dancing and singing into the doctor's stethoscope.

"Is this the child who is going to that big playroom in the sky?" he asks

Meet Charlevoix ...Mickey Grooters

Mickey Grooters is a newcomer to Charlevoix. She and her husband, the Reverend Larry Grooters of the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix, arrived February 6 from Scottsdale, Arizona. This week we introduce her to our readers.

COURIER: February wasn't a very good time to come to Northern Michigan from Arizona, was it?

GROOTERS: Well, we left a major part of our income at the mall in Grand Rapids buying jackets, boots and sweaters. Our two youngest children had never seen snow, either. However, the people at Community Reformed have been just super warm and very friendly. Their warmth helped make up for the cold when we arrived and they were patient with me complaining about the cold.

GROOTERS: John is 15, Laura is 11, and Jeff is 10.

COURIER: Tell us something about yourself.

GROOTERS: I grew up in Grand Rapids and graduated from Hope College. I taught English for two years, in Hamilton, Michigan, and Morrison, Illinois. Then we served a church in Rockford, and from there went to Scottsdale, while in Scottsdale I received a Master's degree in English from Arizona State University and taught at Scottsdale Community College.

COURIER: What are your special interests?

GROOTERS: I enjoy teaching the Bible and English and dabbling in small group possibilities. My interests tend to run toward the academic. However, I did take tennis lessons and enjoyed them.

COURIER: What is it like to be a minister's wife?

GROOTERS: It depends on what day you ask. Basically, it does not have to be any different from that of a wife of any other professional man. Doctors' wives have certain functions they must perform, as do lawyers' wives and others. I'm committed to being a minister's wife. I interpret my own role as a minister's wife as that of any other involved lay person. I resist being put on a pedestal. Sometimes I get excited about teaching the Bible or serving the ministry or having my own ministry because I believe that psychology, education, and politics are not the whole answer. Faith in Christ can touch man or society where there is the greatest need. Psychology, education, politics and social action alone are diminutive gods, as Lloyd Ogilvie would say. In the ministry we can use the best of these and add the teachings of Christ.

COURIER: What are the frustrations?

GROOTERS: What plans do you have for the future? I want to be to other people what Jesus has been to me. I want to share where I am with the Lord and show how the Bible is operative in my life.

COURIER: What plans do your husband and you have for the church?

GROOTERS: Larry would like to see the church move in three areas — Bible study, small group experiences, and offering tools to help people be Christians in parenting, at work, and in other day to day activities — psychological and sociological tools. We will institute the Bethel Bible

Mickey Grooters

Series in the Fall. It is an intensive Bible study course, given in groups of eight to 10 people requiring eight to 40 hours of preparation a week. It starts with Genesis and ends with Revelations two years later. Then the people who have taken the course will commit themselves to teach for two years. When we came here we started a small sharing group with the church board. They meet once a week, using the material "Ideas of Adventure" — family prayers, Bible study, etc. We hope the Board members will lead the congregation in the same material. We are going to have a course in parenting, to be taught by a member who is a psychologist. Certain psychological techniques are helpful. Right now I'm going around to see what the resources of the community are — job possibilities, community people to come into the church and share their expertise, for instance. I went to Women's Resource Center in Potosky to see what it has to offer. I think there are many real needs women have and the Bible is the bottom line and you build from there. Larry has always given me freedom to be myself. It's something I'll always treasure.

COURIER: What about the new coffee house?

GROOTERS: Our church, the Methodist church, and the Assembly of God sponsor the coffee house, called Quaker Pass, in the lower level of Kentucky Fried Chicken Saturday nights. We started last Saturday, and each Saturday there will be Christian musical groups. It's one way to serve.

COURIER: What do you see as the task of the church?

GROOTERS: It should be a place for people to come in and find love and acceptance as unique people.

Energy code adds restrictions

By PEG OILE

The Michigan Energy Code, which becomes effective June 22, brings another restriction on homebuilding.

It will require that builders of all one or two-family dwellings to fill in a calculation sheet indicating insulation values for all spaces of the house—walls, windows and doors, ceilings and roofs, and floor assemblies—any space where cold can come in.

The building will then be inspected by the County Building Inspector before covering the walls to determine that enough insulation, according to a formula set by law, has been put in the building.

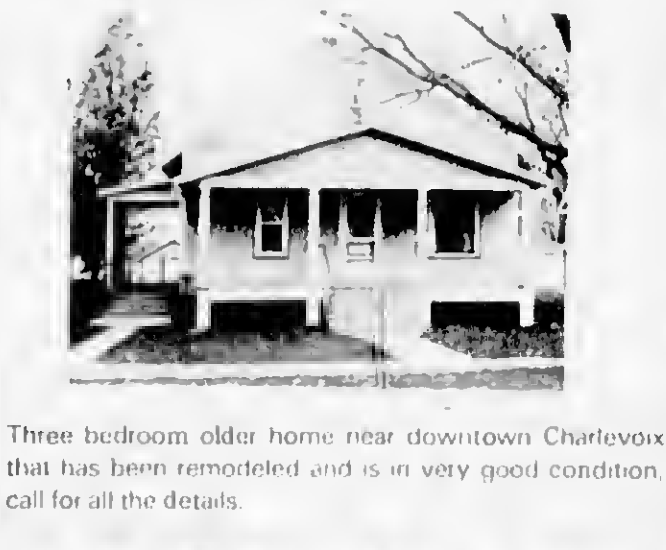

Purpose of the Energy Code is to conserve fuel. Although it applies to one and two-family dwellings, those homes which are heated solely by wood are exempt.

Larger residential buildings such as apartments and condominiums are covered through other regulations.

Presently, the building inspector is making inspections, the rough-in, foundations, the rough-in, and finished buildings. In addition, each building is inspected by a state plumbing inspector, and effective November 11, electrical inspection will become mandatory.

County Building Inspector Dick Mayhew says his office will try to make the calculating of insulation needs as simple as possible.

If it Fitz
by Jim Fitzgerald

Dear Cousin Al:

Uncle Hank was in Detroit yesterday and he told me the dumb things you said about my column against boxing. You said if I knew how to box, maybe I could protect myself against muggers. You also said you hoped Chuck Davey punched me out.

You always were a jerk, Al, especially when it came to fighting. I can still remember when we were little kids and Joe Louis whipped Jimmy Braddock. You swore Louis had horseshoes in his gloves, otherwise how could a black man beat an Irishman? I told you a lot of good Irishmen were poets and it would be a better world if there were more poetry and less fighting. You said I was a nutty sissy.

That was more than 40 years ago but I still feel the same way today. But you've changed, Al. Last year when we went to Las Vegas, you practically kissed Joe Louis' tanny when you asked for his autograph. Maybe you don't think his tanny is black.

Anyway, Al, I know you'll be interested to know that I had lunch last week with Chuck Davey, one of your favorite Irish fighters. He didn't like my anti-boxing column any more than you did, but he was more polite about it. Davey had good reason to be peeved at me. I wrote that professional prizefighting is barbaric and crooked. As you know, Davey is not only a former boxer, he is Michigan's commissioner of boxing. And I wrote that he had to be a lousy commissioner because it would be impossible to have a good commissioner of boxing, just as it would be impossible to have a good commissioner of cockfighting or mugging.

So, when Davey invited me to lunch, I'll admit I flinched before accepting. I kept remembering what he did a few years ago when he was 50 years old. He looked out his office window and saw some punk trying to steal his car. Davey didn't call the cops. He chased the thief down and made the arrest himself, without breathing hard. That punk would have had an easier time stealing Cobo Hall.

Our lunch was 2 days after Muhammad Ali's dance with that Argentine bum on TV. I asked Davey if he agreed with the experts who claimed Ali had carried his hapless opponent to his knees so the network could show all the commercials it had sold. My point was that such a maneuver could be crooked. If a baseball team can score 10 runs in the first inning, it does, no matter how much beer and hot dogs you don't let to bored spectators who go home early. If Ali could have flattened the Argentine in the first round, he should have done it. Otherwise, the fight was a fraud, not a sport.

Davey said the so-called experts are nuts. He claimed that the Argentine was better than expected and that Ali didn't knock him out early because he couldn't.

Davey also insisted that there was nothing smelly about his long-ago fight with Graziano. And he denied my contention that all boxers want to kill each other. Davey said he fought to score points, like an electronic fence, and never cared about knocking out his opponent. He said boxing is a fine way for young men to gain confidence, to compete against people their own size, and to escape trouble in the streets.

So there you are, Al. Don't ever say I never give space to the other guy's opinion. Chuck Davey refutes the old wheeze about the fighters ending up with ugly faces and scrambled brains. He is sharp, and he is a nice guy.

After lunch, Davey even offered me a ride back to the office. But I refused. I told him I had to keep walking until I found a mugger to send home to my dumb cousin, speaker of scrambled brains. I promised Davey I wouldn't go for a knockout.

-Your Cousin

Permit rules changed

Charlevoix County residents will no longer need a Building Code permit for residential construction work costing under $500, except for structural work on chimneys.

They also will not have to pay fees for permits to demolish residential class buildings. However, permits must be secured.

These changes in the Building Code schedule of fees were made last week by the County Board of Commissioners.

Commissioners taste jail fair

Members of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners ate jail fare for lunch last Wednesday.

During the lunch break in their regular monthly meeting they traveled to the County Jail, where they were served the same meal served to prisoners that day.

The meal consisted of chili dogs, complete with condiments, potato salad, chocolate tarts with topping, and coffee or lemonade. The county officials all agreed "it was a darned good meal."

Chuck Bentley named to ACT board

A Charlevoix High School teacher has been appointed to the Michigan Secondary School Council for ACT, a college testing service.

Charles Bentley, high school counselor, will serve with seven other high school counselors on the board providing input into ACT programs.

Bentley explained that almost all high school seniors in this state have to take the ACT college board tests in order to get into college. ACT also provides other services such as financial aid programs and career planning.

Trial reset for Bulmann

The trial of Irving Way Bulmann, 39, Detroit police sergeant, scheduled to begin last Wednesday, has been postponed to Friday Roy C. Hayes, Charlevoix County prosecutor, has announced.

Bulmann is expected to plead no contest (no contest) when he appears before Judge Martin B. Breighner on Friday. This would eliminate the necessity of a trial. Bulmann would then be sentenced following a pre-trial investigation by the probation officer.

Bulmann is charged with shooting William Teller, 21, of Berkeley in the parking lot of the Country House in South Arm township following an argument in the bar during a Hunter's Ball. Teller was hospitalized at Little Traverse Hospital and later was transferred to a Berkeley hospital for treatment of the abdominal wound.

In city slo-pitch play Kit Carson team leads men's league

By KIP CINNAMON
In City Men's Slo-Pitch action on June 10th, the Kit Carson team won an extra innings victory over the Credit Union 10 to 9. Mike Brunett was tagged with the loss giving up 14 hits plus one home run to Terry Miller. Bob Holtzman picked up the win.

The following contest saw the Hawks trounce Erber Auto 15 to 2. Sam McCellan allowed only 10 hits to Erber, while John Greene parted with 17 hits including a homer to Steve McCellan.

Wojan Aluminum barely beat Fred Taylor Inc. in a slugfest that ended 22 to 20. Bill Supermax picked up his second win of the season's letting up 23 hits including a homer to Butch Potter, Ron Kooyer jd Rick Vanstedum. Taking the loss for Taylor, Inc. was Jack Danbert, who gave away 19 hits and 3 home runs struck out by Steve Dunkelberg and 1 by Dean Mikulski.

Erber Auto nicked the Credit Union in a defensive battle 4 to 2 on June 9th. John Greene earned the victory allowing 9 hits, while Mike Bennett took the loss giving away 13 hits. Bob Alger smashed over the left field fence for Erber's.

On the same night, the hospital beat Medusa 10 to 8. This game was called at the 10th inning. Barney Roeder picked up the win, while Hank Archery went down with a loss.

Kit Carson continued their unbeaten streak by dumping the Townhouse 14 to 5. Jim Marsh was tagged with the loss giving up 15 hits including home runs to Bernie DeVries, Terry Bissett and winning pitcher Tim Dean.

Murdick's Fudge has perfect record in township league

By KIP CINNAMON
After last week's play in the new township league, only one undefeated team remained. This team was Murdick's Fudge, which nearly lost that distinction as it barely nipped McArts 8 to 7. In taking the loss for McArts, Stan Johnston allowed only 4 hits, one of which was a homer punched out by Mike Bartz. Jack Niswander pitched another impressive game for Murdick's to pick up the win.

Later that evening, V.F.W. blew over Koozt Construction 10 to 4. Don Wells, pitching for V.F.W., allowed 7 hits, while Pete Culver took the loss for Koozt giving away 6 hits.

On the following night, June 7th, the Air Force sunk last place Coast Guard, 21 to 14. Ray Daltun gave up 14 hits, most of which were in a last inning rally by the Coast Guard, to keep the Air Force in the running out at the township field. Richard Selissen gave away 25 hits to earn his third loss in as many starts.

Tri-County Well Drilling relied on superior infield play by Jim Alger and Bob Warner, a tremendous debut by Glenn Taylor, and a well balanced hitting attack to upset previously unbeaten Chester's Boat Livery 11 to 7. The game was close until the final inning, when Tri-Co. went on a hitting spree which put them ahead for good. Harold Thorum evened his record at 2 and 2 allowing Chester's 18 hits and one homer to John Hutchinson while Greg Revoir picked up his first loss of the season.

On the next evening, V.F.W. picked up its second victory of the week edging McArts 11 to 10. Don Wells allowed McArts only 9 hits, while Stan Johnston took his second loss of the week giving up 12 hits.

Murdick's continued leading the league in style by trouncing Koozt Construction 13 to 1. Murdick's power bats went to work on Jerry Derocher, who parted with 17 hits including one round-tripper apiece by Jim Moore, Bob Sandall and Mike Bartz. Jack Niswander gave only 7 hits to keep Murdick's in the win column.

The last two scheduled games were played on Thursday. The first contest saw the Air Force erase Tri-County Well Drilling 27 to 12. In one of his less spectacular performances, Harold Thorum gave 22 hits to the Air Force plus two homers to Frank Noa and Jerome Harris. George Dutton parted with 17 hits to pick up his second win this week.

The hapless Coast Guard in their finest performance this year scared Chester's by coming within one run of extra innings. Greg Revoir earned the win by allowing 14 runs off 18 hits. Losing pitcher Richard Selissen allowed just one more run off as many hits. Hopefully, the Coast Guard is pulling out of their early season scoring slump.

Commissioners agree to purchase markers

Property lines for land owners in Charlevoix County should be easier to find when the survey marker replacement system recently authorized by the county board of commissioners is implemented.

Some time ago, the County Surveyor's office brought to the attention of the Commissioners that many of the old government land markers have been lost or destroyed, resulting in considerable costs to land owners for replacement in order to establish their boundaries.

The loss of these public land survey corner markers also results in direct expenditures by the Charlevoix County Road Commission to relocate corners in order to maintain road right-of-ways.

The county will purchase 100 monument markers and caps and 12 monument boxes for distribution to surveyors on request for them from the County Surveyor. They will be employed in marking public land survey corners and center quarter corners. The monument boxes will be used by the Road Commission to protect markers set within a paved roadway area, under the supervision of the registered surveyor doing the work.

The markers will be available to all Registered Land Surveyors upon written request, giving information as to where each corner is to be set.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Charter Commission will hold public hearings on the proposed new charter on the following dates:

June 21--Third Ward

June 22--Second Ward

June 28--First Ward

All meetings will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School study hall.

FAITH TEACHES HONOR AND RESPECT FOR FATHERHOOD

Your father was your first line of defense against the perils and hardships of the outside world, yet from your earliest recollections of childhood you always had a dual image of him. You loved and trusted him, while at the same time you feared him as a symbol of authority and a source of punishment, even though your own transgressions were so minor. What you were not aware of then was the burden of care and anxiety he undoubtedly carried with him about the material and spiritual well-being of his family, then and in the future. You learned only in later years that the seemingly harsh, rigid rules he laid down for you were all to the good. Your Church will teach you to appreciate your father's wisdom and to thank him for all the love he has bestowed on you.

"My son, hear the instruction of thy father."
--Proverbs 1:8

One father is more than a hundred school-teachers.

County farmers fight fire with fire

COUNTY EXTENSION Agent Ed Rebman opens a container of parasitized cereal leaf beetles after their arrival from Niles by plane.

By PAULA HOLMES

"Fight fire with fire," the old saying goes.

But in Charlevoix County the battle cry is, "Fight nature with nature."

It sounds like a contradiction, but with one of the worst infestations of cereal leaf beetle in the Northern Michigan area, according to Ed Rehman, director of the Charlevoix County Extension Service.

Rehman says bugs prey on small grain plants such as oats, barley, wheat and rye, scraping and eating the leaves until it takes all of the chlorophyll (the green stuff) out of the plants leaving the fields "frosted" or completely white.

Rehman said:

The bug problem has been so bad in the area that the Plant Protection and Quarantine Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture called on Rehman up and offered to help set up a battle plan.

In a type of biological warfare, the fields of ax farmers were planted with cereal leaf beetles containing a parasite which the USDA scientists planted in the bug.

The parasitized beetle will lay its eggs next to those of a normal insect in the fields, Rehman explained, when the eggs hatch, the parasite will eat the larva from the regular cereal leaf beetle and from the USDA brand of the bug ending the life cycle of the pest.

"It's like a biological control," Rehman explained. "We're trying to build up a good supply of the parasite so that we can control the insects.

"The parasite will only feed on the host insects so there's no danger of other bugs in the area. And once the problem of cereal leaf beetles drops the number of parasites will drop, too."

"It's like the cat-and-mouse game when there are a lot of rabbits you can see a lot of foxes around. When the rabbit population drops off, you'll see a decrease in the number of foxes. Too many said the parasite would have eventually run out of food," Charles Rehrman said.

Man and began feeding on the cereal leaf beetle, but by planting the parasites with the help of the USDA years of waiting had been eliminated and money saved, too.

"I'm not trying to get away from relying on just one means of insect control," Rehrman said. "We use a combination of parasites, crop rotation and spraying right now."

Rehrman said that while spraying for insects is quite effective, it can be costly which is why the other two methods of insect control are being used more and more.

The county extension director said officials think the cereal leaf beetle got into Michigan aboard some foreign ships.

"These insects are hitchhikers as they may have come into the country on some other type of plant," Rehrman explained. "Then they worked the way up here."

Rehrman said he has a good year for insects all the way around."

An appeal of the 1977 Charlevoix County equalized valuation has been filed with the State Tax Tribunal.

Harry Griffin, Melrose Township supervisor and assessor, has registered a formal appeal with the tax body. It is the first appeal of county equalization

The burden of proof in the appeal will be on the township and its assessor, she said.

Griffin had been considering making the appeal earlier in the month, but he didn't know at the time if he would complete filing the appeal by the June 15 deadline.

not there. We're being assessed for values that are not there."

Griffin said the factor recommended for Melrose Township in the 1977 equalization report added 7 percent to the township's assessed property valuation. He contends the factor will push the property valuation of the valuation.

The equalization director's recommendation to place factors on four units was approved by Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners when it approved the 1977 equalization report.

A preliminary hearing on the appeal has been slated for sometime the week of July 5 before the tribunal in Lansing. At that hearing it will be determined if there is enough evidence to warrant a full fledged hearing on the appeal, Mrs. Blanchard said.

Mrs. Blanchard said the outcome of the Melrose Township appeal could result in one of three things. The county assessed valuation may remain the same, Melrose Township may increase in its assessed valuation as all other units in the county lowered, Melrose Township valuation could be lowered and all other units will be raised.

Ordinances and Resolutions
All legislation of the City shall be by ordinance or by resolution.
All proposed ordinances shall be published in a local newspaper together with a notice setting forth the time and place of a public hearing on said ordinance.
Within three years after the effective date of this Charter, and at least every ten years thereafter, the Council shall provide for a general codification of all City ordinances having the effect of law. The codification shall be known as the Charlevoix City Code, and copies shall be furnished to the public.

Richard Fochtman, charter commission chairman, said the purpose of this section in the new charter was simply to clean up the ordinances and get them organized and printed in a booklet form so that city residents will know what the rules and regulations of the city are.
John Michael, charter commission member, explained that the codification or organization of city ordinances is important to the smooth operation of the city.
"As far as I know, the ordinances in the city have never been codified or organized so that they can be found easily," Michael, a former city attorney, said. "Nobody really knows what the laws of the city are."
"Also about 75 percent of the ordinances are outdated because they haven't been reviewed in several years. We still have ordinances on the books that talk about where to tie up horses."

Article 7—General Finances
Capital Budget
On or before Sept. 1 each year the City Manager shall submit to the Council a Capital Budget for the next five years, which shall state:
1. A clear summary of all its contents.
2. A list of all major capital improvements which are proposed to be undertaken during the ensuing five years, with appropriate supporting information relative to necessity of such improvements.
3. Cost estimates and methods of financing such improvements.
4. Estimated general cost of operating and maintaining the facilities to be constructed or acquired.
Operating Budget
On or before Feb. 15 of each year, the City Manager shall submit to the Council a proposed Annual Operating Budget for the next fiscal year.
The proposed Annual Operating

Budget shall provide a complete financial plan for the next fiscal year of all City funds and activities including Capital expenditures, and, except as required by law or this Charter, shall be in such form as the City Manager deems desirable or the Council may require. The proposed Annual Operating Budget shall begin with a clear summary of its contents, shall show in detail all estimated income, including the proposed property tax levy and all proposed expenditures, including debts for the next fiscal year, and shall be so arranged as to show comparative figures of estimated income and expenditures for the preceding fiscal year, and shall provide such other information as may be required by the Council.
The Council shall provide by resolution appropriate methods and safeguards for the expenditure of funds and the payment of obligations so as to insure that no payment shall be made or obligation incurred without an appropriation having first been approved by the Council, without a sufficient unencumbered balance in the appropriation, and without insuring that sufficient funds are or will be available to cover the claim or meet the obligation when it becomes due and payable. However, except where prohibited by law, nothing in this Charter shall be construed to prevent the making or authorizing of payments or the making of contracts for Capital improvements to be financed wholly or partly by the issuance of bonds, or to prevent the making of any contract or lease providing for payments beyond the end of the fiscal year. Any such action must be approved by ordinance.

The Council shall prescribe by resolution a general framework of necessary procedures governing financial and contractual dealings with the City. Such resolution shall include a maximum consideration below which purchases may be made by the City officials and employees either without the specific authorization from the Council or without the necessity of competitive bidding, or both. In addition, such resolution shall include a requirement that in all cases of contract by competitive bidding, the Council shall reserve the right to reject any and all bids submitted, and provisions shall be incorporated in all requests for bids.
The main changes the charter commission made in the writing of this budget were in the date of the city's fiscal year, the creation of a separate capital budget and the date that the operating budget must be approved by Fochtman said.
The city's fiscal year was changed so that it ends on a regular quarter, Fochtman said.
"This was just to simplify the accounting for the city employees, he explained.

The establishment of a capital budget is important because it forces the city to do some long range planning for improvements within the city, Michael said.
The capital budget, which will be written to cover five years, sets up a plan for financing improvements on the airport, streets and sewers and also for the purchase of equipment such as firetrucks and snowplows.
"Having a five year capital budget makes it easier to plan to budget now for things that might be needed next year or in two years," Fochtman said. "And then you won't have to come up with the money needed for the improvements all at once, either."
"If needed, the budget can be revised from year to year but at least some planning will be taking place."
Having the operating budget approved before the start of the fiscal year is in line with the charter commission's other attempts to have the city run more like a business, Fochtman explained. Currently the budget doesn't have to be approved before the fiscal year begins.
"Under the new charter, council members will take office in January. That will give them three months to review the operating budget and have it approved by March 1 before the fiscal year begins. "Why have a budget if you don't have it before the fiscal year begins?"
"It just is good business to do it this way," Michael added.

Old shoes get new lift from Charlevoix repairman

Do you have a favorite pair of shoes that is headed for the garbage can because you can't find any place to get them repaired? Hold on to those shoes and take them over to Ray Browne at Potter's Appliance on Lincoln Street in Charlevoix.
Browne is in the shoe repair business from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the appliance store. While Browne is in and out, someone will usually be there to take your shoes.
Browne, 29, said he got into the shoe repair business about nine months ago when he was looking for an extra job. A friend mentioned that a local man was thinking of selling his shoe repair equipment and Browne decided to buy it.
A former cobbler, then showed Browne how to use the equipment and gave the aspiring cobbler a book that explained how to make almost any type of repair.
"The books show you how to do all the things you need to know," Browne said, leafing through the pages. "It explains everything including how to set up and work the machines."
Browne also visited other shoe repair stores in the area to get an idea of supplies he might need and to see how they worked their business.

Horton Bay receives marker indicating historical site

The marker designating Horton Bay as a State Historical Site is now in place in front of the Bay Township Hall in Horton Bay.
The community was awarded the recognition last year on the occasion of its Centennial celebration.
The legend on the marker reads:
"Named for pioneer settler Samuel Horton, this village was founded as a lumbering community in 1876, complete with sawmill, shanty boys, boarding house, company store, blacksmith shop, and draft horses. The store and many early buildings still stand. After the timber was gone, three fine restaurants opened: Dilworth's, The Waffle Shop, and The Red Fox Inn. Young Ernest Hemingway frequently came here to fish and camp on 'The Point.' This area is the setting for several of his famous 'Nick Adams' short stories. Hemingway was married here in 1921."

Englishman visits boyhood home

By PAULA HOLMES
What could make an Englishman come to the United States during the Queen of England's Jubilee celebration?
Why the 80th birthday of one American cousin and the high school graduation of another.
Franklin Edwards of Horton Bay in Kent County, England, is in the Charlevoix area for the next few weeks visiting with relatives and retracing his boyhood.
Edwards, a first cousin to Albert Edwards, who recently celebrated his 80th birthday, is no stranger to the Charlevoix area. The Englishman lived here until 1922 when his family moved back to the mother country after a brief stay in the States, leaving behind a set of cousins. He was 12 years old at the time.

Now, 55 years later, a new and different Charlevoix greeted the charter commission chairman. The former resident commented through a lilted British accent, "They took me over to see the place where I lived, but I don't think I could find it again by myself things have changed so much."

Open-minded study of charter necessary before casting vote

Apathy is nowhere to be found as far as the new proposed charter for the City of Charlevoix is concerned. And perhaps politics and single-mindedness will stay out of the issue, too.

Many citizens have picked up copies of the condensed version of the charter and others have gone to the expense of having copies made of the uncut version so that they can study the document even more thoroughly.

A group of interested citizens even had a meeting last week to organize and discuss the questions they had about the charter. The group is talking about meeting again during this week to go over more questions.

Hopefully, members of this citizens group will also attend the meetings the charter commission is planning to hold at 7:30 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School study hall on Tuesday, Wednesday and next Thursday.

The charter commissioners have worked hard on the charter for the last two years and they should be given the chance to explain the ideas behind the document, how they arrived at certain decisions and what their intentions were. They can also clear up any misconceptions people may have about the charter because they know the charter and have studied it thoroughly.

Citizens who have reviewed the charter and those who will be attending the informational meetings with the charter commissioners should also remember to keep an open mind.

Just because the charter commissioners did not write or prepare the charter the way someone else thinks they should have doesn't necessarily mean the charter commissioners didn't know what they were doing when they wrote the proposed charter. Everyone approaches a problem differently.

Also, just because the charter is new and different does not mean it is bad. Give the charter a chance and remember that it has been different ideas that have shaped the United States of America.

When the colonists decided to write the U.S. Constitution 201 years ago they made some radical changes. Many people at that time asked what was wrong with the English Constitution and why the new country shouldn't use the old document. England has been around a long time and has operated very well under its constitution, they argued. The colonies have even operated fairly smoothly under the English charter, and economically, too.

But the members of the Constitutional convention went ahead and wrote a new document. They wrote something that was specially suited to the ideas of the new country and they wrote a document that would take the country from the growing it had done under the English constitution and help it develop into the great nation it has become today.

In essence this is what the charter commission would like to do with Charlevoix. The present Fourth Class Cities Act has helped Charlevoix grow. And the present strong mayor form of government has helped the city operate economically and efficiently. But the Fourth Class Cities Act is becoming outdated and it no longer meets the needs of the city.

The commissioners tried to write the new charter to incorporate the ideas of Charlevoix residents about what is needed in their town. They also tried to write a document that would help Charlevoix grow into an even better place and into a city that would operate even more economically and efficiently.

Lawman praises Sheriff Lasater

Dear Editor: While attending the National Sheriff's Institute in Los Angeles, in April of this year, I had the opportunity to meet your local sheriff, a real gentleman in Mr. George T. Lasater.

Sheriff Lasater was my roommate for approximately 14 days. I was very much impressed by his personal conduct in and out of the classroom, and his interest in law enforcement.

I honestly believe that the people of Charlevoix County are extremely lucky to have a man of the calibre of Sheriff Lasater. He will make your county an outstanding sheriff.

Respectfully yours,

...Speaking Her Mind

I always like visiting my family for the weekend, not only because it's nice to see my parents and brothers and sister, but also because they almost always provide me with column material.

Visiting my family means a four-hour trip to Lansing. I dread the drive downstate, but without fail it is worth those long, hot hours on the road when I get there. This last trip for Father's Day was no exception.

A few hours after my arrival Friday night I received the astounding news that one of my three siblings had been named the recipient of an athletic scholarship from the University of Michigan.

What's so unusual or astounding about that, you may ask. Lots of people have siblings that get athletic scholarships to the U of M as well as to many other universities. Why write a whole column on that?

I would be inclined to agree with you if this were an ordinary scholarship going to an ordinary sibling for an ordinary sport. But as it turned out my sister, who just finished her freshman year as a physical therapy major at the Ann Arbor school, was the one who got the scholarship. She was a starter on the maize and blue's varsity women's volleyball team during the last season.

The family had learned some time ago that Lisa might be in line for a scholarship, but we were still surprised when it came.

Want me to make your day?

There are 22 million women over size 16 in America.

Although it has been my experience that there's never one around when you need them, I have to believe that somewhere in the world there is a size 16 in the pool. Never encountered another one in the fitting room. Never played tennis with another one or ever shared a loaf of bread personally with one.

However, designers and department stores are finally acknowledging the fact that size 16-and-overs do exist, and like taxes and "I Love Lucy" reruns, will be with us always.

I've seen several ads of clothing designers that have started to put some size 16 in half sizes and department stores are finally getting around to style shows for the woman who regards bathroom scales as art objects.

I don't know if some of you get the impact of this trend, but I do. It means that size 16s are finally coming into their own. And that if 22 million of them would come out of the closets, they could turn this country around. You don't believe it? Listen to this.

In the last election, there were 40 million votes cast for President Carter and 38 million for former President Ford. Realistically, 22 million chubby votes could swing the election one way or another. The 16-and-overs' vote could be one of the most influential single blocks of votes in the country, and don't think the candidates wouldn't come 'a-courting'.

For the first time, women with thighs and hips could have some demands met before they committed themselves.

1. Legwear. Women are sick and tired of carrying it out of stores in plain brown wrappers.

2. Abolish mirrors in bath houses. There is no need to see oneself with one's skin blemishes.

3. Luxury tax on yogurt. I say put the burden of supporting this nation's programs on the shoulders of those who can afford it - the size 5s.

4. Repeat the A-line dress. When letters of the alphabet were passed out, the women over size 16 got the first letter out of the bag. We'd like to try for an S or an I for a change.

5. Appoint a committee to change the language referring to women size 18 and over. The use of the words "stout," "full-figured," "well-endowed," "matronly" would be a federal offense.

6. A size 16 or over first lady. We haven't had one since Dolly Madison, and we lost ice cream for breakfast and used to eat omelets.

7. An amendment saying that there is life after size 16 and improving the quality of it. (Copyright 1977 Field Enterprises, Inc.)

If it Fits

by Jim Fitzgerald

A judge has decreed that the trouble with this nation is most people are so selfish that they would rather go to the bathroom than go to court.

The Lapeer County Press recently surveyed its readers, asking them which they wanted to spend tax money on—a public toilet or a new courthouse. The toilet won by a 3-to-1 margin.

District Judge John Spies was outraged. In a letter to the editor, he said:

...Human beings are, for the most part, incapable of seeing beyond their own little egocentric world. They cannot take the broad view, looking to the best interests of their community and the nation. They sit on the throne of their water closet and see only the contents of the bathroom, with no conception of things beyond those four walls. And it is this shortcoming of human nature which will ultimately lead to the destruction of our democracy."

Wow.

In case you haven't been paying attention, Lapeer County is where I used to live and work. It's 80 miles north of Detroit, I still have strong ties there, including a son who swipes the ties and a house I can't sell. I still care about what happens to the people there.

And I must confess that one of the things I always have cared most about is what happens to the people in downtown Lapeer who have to go to the bathroom but can't find one.

I worry more about them than I do about lawyers and drunks who might sweat on each other because there's no air conditioning in an old court room.

I always figured that my preference for public plumbing over new court rooms was an innocent—even noble—choice, caused by an ordinary compassion for the human condition. I didn't think I was doing any great harm beyond prompting court room employees to grind their teeth at me.

But now Judge Spies says my preference for Johns can lead to the destruction of our democracy. As I said earlier, wow.

Lapeer has the oldest courthouse still in use in Michigan. A distinction noted by a historical marker on the front lawn. Most residents of Lapeer are proud of the wooden building, and they guard it jealously against whippersnappers who would replace it with a monument of bricks and mortar.

It generally is agreed that the ancient courthouse, built in 1839, will always stand and will someday be a museum, after the judges have been moved into new chambers.

But when will that move be made? The judges say it is years overdue. The state's oldest courthouse may be quaint, but it also is cramped and cold in the winter and hot in the summer. When juries need a rest room, they must be marched across the street to a restaurant.

Years ago there was a public rest room in the courthouse basement, but it was closed because of vandalism.

The space was converted into offices for Judge Spies and his staff. One night a troubled soul, irked by the absence of public facilities, used the judge's carport.

The downtown area was renewed recently with millions of federal dollars, but public toilets were not included. The last gas station has closed. A couple of bars offer Johns, but many women go not to parade through their squirming children through Arnold ("Arnie") Loper is one of Charlevoix' "telephone men". This week the Courier talks with him about his job, his family, and himself.

COURIER: What exactly is your job with the Telephone Company?

LOPER: I'm an installer-repairman out of Charlevoix. There are three other men who do the same work here.

COURIER: What kinds of trouble do most people call about?

LOPER: Our biggest problems are no dial tone, can't call out, bad cords, etc. Once in a while we'll find a phone left off the hook.

COURIER: How can telephone equipment be damaged?

LOPER: The worst thing that can be done is drop it on the floor. This is bad for the dials and switch hooks. Also, people shouldn't try to stretch cords any farther than they will go.

COURIER: Are you making more installations than you used to?

LOPER: Yes, when I came here in 1969, there were only two installers-repairmen. Most homes now have two phones, and many of the larger ones have three-two upstairs and one in the basement.

COURIER: How many phones are there in the Charlevoix area?

LOPER: About 4,300 in the city and surrounding area. Of course this drops in the winter time.

COURIER: Do you leave the actual phone equipment in the homes of seasonal residents?

LOPER: Yes, we connect and disconnect from the office. We don't have to go out and do it.

COURIER: By the way, what is in the Telephone Company building downtown?

LOPER: Just equipment. It's not a business office.

COURIER: What about business installations?

LOPER: Of course the number of phones they have depends on the size of the company. The larger ones have PBX switchboards. Probably the biggest switchboard is at Big Rock, which might handle as many as 30 or 35 phones.

COURIER: Do you also do outside repair work?

LOPER: Yes, on the lines and poles. Our biggest problem outdoors is damage done by ice and sleet.

COURIER: Aren't you burying some wires now?

LOPER: We're burying as many as we can. This eliminates storm damage and looks better, too.

COURIER: Do you work only in the Charlevoix area?

LOPER: Most of the time. Sometimes I go to Boyne City or East Jordan, and once in a great while to Petokey.

COURIER: How do you schedule your day's work?

LOPER: I report to the Ferry Avenue garage every morning at eight o'clock and receive my work orders for the day.

COURIER: How many installations do you make a day?

LOPER: Well, today I have 10. This is a busy time of year for us. I probably average 10 or 12 repair orders a day, too.

COURIER: Do most people want colored telephone lines?

LOPER: Yes, they do. COURIER: When are we going to have touch tone telephones in the Charlevoix area?

LOPER: It will be a long time, maybe as long as 12 years. They require all new equipment.

COURIER: How did you receive the training you need for your job?

LOPER: I spent four years in the Air Force as a communications man. That's where I got my basic training. When I got out and went to work for the Telephone Company, they sent me to school in Grand Rapids for 10 days and then I got on-the-job training by working with other installers.

COURIER: Do you have to go back to school occasionally to keep up with the new equipment?

LOPER: No, they supply us with diagrams for the new phones so we can keep up with repair techniques. Probably on some of the new PBX boards we'd have to go back to school.

COURIER: How long have you worked for the Telephone Company?

LOPER: I've been in Charlevoix since 1969 and before that I worked for 14 years in Petokey.

COURIER: Are you a native of Charlevoix?

LOPER: No, I moved here with my family in 1955 when I was five years old. I was born in Flint. I graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1949, spent one year on the farm with my dad, then joined the Air Force.

In front of the Congregational Church is the Lev Blanchard home and in the center of the picture, the A. T. Washburn home. The white building just beyond the Congregational Church is the school house that burned in 1886. Barely visible in the left center of the picture is a windmill. Number of businesses in area higher than national average According to a Government report, just released, the number of business establishments in Charlevoix County is relatively large.

There are more businesses in being locally, in proportion to population, than in many areas of the country.

The report, which is entitled "County Business Patterns," was compiled by the Department of Commerce in cooperation with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Essentially, the data in it is based upon tax reports submitted by employers under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act. It provides information on the number of working people in each community who are covered by Social Security, the amount they earn and the size of the establishments that employ them.

Listed in Charlevoix County are a total of 482 business firms that employ one or more persons. The number is exclusive of "Mom and Pop" operations that are self-conducted. Of the total, 319 have 4 employees or less, 67 have from 5 to 9 and 34 have 10 to 19.

The predominance of moderate-size businesses in the local area conforms to the pattern in most parts of the country.

Their durability in the face of competition is indicated by the figures, which show that no less than 93 percent of the local establishments have fewer than 20 employees.

With respect to the employment situation, the findings are that Charlevoix County's business firms provide gainful employment for 4,306 people in jobs covered by Social Security.

Not included are farm workers, self-employed persons, domestic workers and people on government payrolls.

Despite the number of people unemployed, wage scales have been on the rise. At the same time, more workers have been coming out of the Social Security umbrella. As a result, payrolls have been going up locally.

The current report lists the annual payroll for covered workers at $33,621,000. In 1973, when a similar study was made, it was $24,708,000.

Sheriff urges boaters to batten hatches on equipment, vessels

Arnie Loper

Boaters are urged to batten down their craft to help prevent theft, Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said.

Lasater said a rash of thefts of boating equipment, small boat engines and the boats themselves have been reported in the county.

Lasater said the sheriff's department recently recovered three boats worth $5,000 including one boat containing $1,000 worth of fishing equipment. That boat was reported stolen at 8 a.m. Wednesday and recovered by midnight.

To deter theft, Lasater suggested county residents and visitors always remove miscellaneous equipment from their boats when they are through using the articles. He also suggested the people with smaller boat engines invest in a motor lock device which would make it almost impossible for thieves to remove the motor and carry it away.

He also suggested that people who own lake front property but live somewhere else chain their boats to trees or other objects when they are away from the property.

"This won't prevent theft entirely," Lasater pointed out. "But it will make it harder."

Ninety-two permits were issued by the County Department of Building Inspection during May, a report from the Department indicates.

This compares with 75 permits issued during the same period last year. The various categories for which permits were supplied were 27 new homes, 18 residential additions, six residential remodeling jobs, 10 garages, four decks and porches, one new commercial building (the Medical Clinic in East Jordan), three commercial additions, two demolitions, one sign, one location, eight mobile homes or additions thereto, eight residential outbuildings (sheds, and barns).

Jury duty--key to running Democratic system of justice

By PEG OHLE

If you are ever summoned to serve on a jury, you should feel honored because the function of a jury is an extremely important one. The property or the liberty of another human being or group of human beings is at stake and you must make sure that the jury on which you sit returns a verdict which is as fair and impartial as possible.

How are those chosen for jury duty selected? It is really a lottery system, run by the County Jury Board, which is presently made up of Charles Carey, Fran Martin and Ann Hite. The Jury Board is appointed by the Governor, with representation from both major political parties.

The process begins each year when all the township and city clerks in the county turn in their lists of registered voters to the Jury Board. Then the Circuit and District Judges request that the Jury Board select a given number of jurors to serve during the coming term of court.

This is done by dividing the required number of jurors into the number of registered voters for a "key" number. If the key number is, say, 20, then every 20th named person on the voting list is sent a questionnaire containing such questions as occupation, age, whether or not the person has ever been convicted of a felony, physical handicaps, medical problems, and other pertinent facts which might exempt the person from serving on a jury.

Among those automatically exempt are law enforcement officers, elected public officials, lawyers, and convicted felons. Also, those over 70 years of age have the prerogative of not serving; those with several small children may ask to be excused; those with medical problems such as high blood pressure, heart disease, and some others may, upon presenting a doctor's certificate, request an exemption; those who spend a large part of the year out of the county are usually not called; students attending school away from home also are usually not called.

After all such people are removed from the list of possible jurors, the remaining number are sent another, more lengthy, questionnaire, and it is from the list of these returned questionnaires that the next selection of jurors is made.

As of May of this year, there were 11,815 registered voters in Charlevoix County. The courts requested that they be supplied the names of 300 prospective jurors. The Jury Board decided that to ensure getting that required number of qualified jurors they would draw 650 names, so they took the list of registered voters, started at a chosen number, say 4, and drew the names of every 20th voter on the list. These were the people who received the first questionnaire.

The final selection of jurors is made by putting the 350 names in a barrel-like container, from which panels of 25 are drawn as requested by the courts. Six jurors are needed for jury trials in civil cases and 12 for jury trials in criminal cases. Those called from "the panels" may be dismissed by the judge, the prosecutor, or the attorneys if for any reason it is determined they could not reach a fair and impartial decision in the case.

The importance of the jury system is stressed by Circuit

Judge Martin B. Breighner when he says: "The jury is an important part of this court. In criminal cases, the constitution of both the United States and Michigan provide for the right to be heard by a jury of 12 impartial persons. Ancient tradition and part of our heritage is that a person accused of a crime be afforded the opportunity to be judged not by one person but by a group of 12 of his fellow citizens selected to be impartial and fair."

District Judge David B.

Fershee agrees: "Jury duty is one of the most serious duties that members of a free society are called upon to perform. Self government could not exist without juries."

And as far back as 1779, Thomas Paine, in a letter to Thomas Jefferson, wrote: "I consider trial by jury as the only anchor ever yet imagined by man, by which a government can be held to the principles of its constitution."

Yes, it is an honor to serve on a jury.

Dog catcher's job thankless position

"It's one of the most thankless jobs there is. If the officer does a good job, people complain. And if he doesn't do his job they complain," Sheriff George Lasater said describing some of the difficulties the animal control officer faces.

Lasater said the sheriff department's philosophy toward animal control is to maintain tight control over stray dogs and cats in order to prevent more serious problems from occurring.

"I have read in many downstate newspapers about cases where children have been mauled and killed by stray dogs," Lasater said. "We haven't had any problems like that in our county, but I feel by maintaining tight control over the stray problem we can prevent this."

"We are trying to be firm but fair."

The animal control officer's duties are varied. Harold Thumure, the current animal control officer (ACO), said. The main responsibility is to investigate complaints from county residents about stray dogs and cats. The animal control officer also investigates all cases of dog and cat bites in the county.

In addition, he makes sure dogs are licensed and works closely with the Charlevoix County Humane Society in maintaining the dog pound facilities. Thumure is responsible for the feeding and cleaning of the large dogs brought into the pound.

Sheriff Lasater pointed out that when the animal control officer is on patrol in the county he is also on patrol as a deputy sheriff.

"All animal control officers are also certified deputy sheriffs," Lasater explained.

"So when the ACO is on patrol the county also has the services of an additional officer on patrol. His truck is completely equipped with lights, radio and siren and he can answer any calls."

Lasater said it is his philosophy to rotate the sheriff's deputies between the road, jail, desk and animal control so that they are better rounded in the various operations of the department.

Thumure, who has served as the animal control officer since Jan. 1, said that most of the complaints he has received are about stray animals and most of the stray animals are dogs.

The most common complaints are about dogs running, barking, destroying property or being in heat and running loose. The majority of the complaints come from the East Jordan and Boyne City areas, Thumure said.

Problems usually start when owners let their dogs run loose without supervision, the six-year veteran said.

"I think a lot of people own dogs that don't care about other people's property," Thumure explained. "They let their dogs run loose and then they disturb dogs that are tied up or they get into gardens and sometimes they will bite people."

Not all dogs running loose were let out intentionally, however, the animal control officer pointed out.

"You have to use common sense when issuing a summons for a stray dog," he said. "I know that dogs sometimes get out."

Thumure said in these cases the owner is usually out looking for the dog, too.

Thumure said there had been several incidences of dog bites in the county recently, in addition to the complaints about strays.

"The children getting bit are usually between 6 and 12 years old," he said. "And they are the friends of the dog owner's kids."

The deputy said it is required by law that all dog bites be reported. The complaint is then investigated and the animal must be kept in confinement for a certain period of time to make sure it doesn't have rabies.

Usually dogs can be kept in confinement in the house, although sometimes Thumure will bring them into the dog pound. Cats are usually brought into the pound because they are harder to confine at home.

Dog bites are investigated 24 hours a day. If the animal control officer is off duty, a road officer answers the call, Sheriff Lasater said. Other complaints wait until the animal control officer is on duty.

July 7 Mercer's last meet

Charlevoix County Planner Bill Mercer will attend his last meeting of the Planning Commission on July 7.

Although Mercer's resignation becomes effective July 1, he will attend the meeting to present an up-to-date report on the work of the Planning Department. The Planning Commission has appointed a committee to hire a replacement for Mercer. It consists of Chairman Walter Thorsen, Arthur Steinbrecher, Thomas Weiland, and Dennis Jason. Ed Rehman will serve as secretary to the committee.

There's plenty to do in Charlevoix

Charlevoix is full of fun things to do during the summer, even if there isn't a special event going on. All you have to do is look around and you'll be swamped with things to do, according to Jaqueline Merta, director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Merta often gets inquiries at the chamber office from tourists about what there is for them to do while they are visiting Charlevoix, and many of her suggestions could be used by local people as well.

The chamber director said she usually starts by suggesting sports activities.

"I always mention the beaches," Mrs. Merta said. "You know Charlevoix is lucky to have three really nice public beaches. We're probably one of the few communities in this area with that many public beaches."

Not only do Charlevoix residents and tourists enjoy the three beaches, but you can often catch residents from other local communities catching some rays from Charlevoix shores.

Fishing is next on the list of things to do. Mrs. Merta said she always mentions the pier and the railroad bridge as good fishing sites. She added that there are many charter fishing boats and other boats for rent in the city.

Golfing, bicycle riding and horseback riding are also available to residents and visitors to the area. And if you aren't interested in any of that, there is always a good old Petoskey stone hunt for exercise.

Shopping is another suggestion Mrs. Merta often makes to visitors. Once people are through visiting the central business area, the chamber director often suggests that they make a tour of the art stores in the area.

An Arts and Crafts Trials brochure is available at the chamber listing the names and addresses of local artists.

activity," Mrs. Merta said.

She said she also suggests visits to local points of interest such as the Ironport Ferry, where people can get a ride across the south arm of Lake Charlevoix. People don't necessarily need a car for this trip. Enthusiastic bicyclists might enjoy it, too.

She also suggested visits to Greensky Hill Mission Church.

Many special events will be held in Charlevoix throughout the summer through the sponsorship of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. A rundown of events follows:

This week—Tues.—Sat.—Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament.

July 4—Champagne Cruise to see Boyne City fireworks.

July 9—9th Annual Lakeside Hobbycraft Show.

July 21-24—47th Annual Venetian Festival.

Aug. 5-6—Sidewalk Sale Days.

Old-fashioned games can keep kids busy

School's been out just a short while, but already young voices can be heard asking, "What can I do? There's nothing to do."

On some of those days parents or babysitters may be hard pressed to think of anything the kids can do. But if they dig deep into their own childhood, they could probably come up with many games they once played during long summer afternoons that can keep the children of the 1970s busy, too.

In case parents have forgotten some of those games which have been passed along for generations, a unique book, Adah Parker Strobel's "Colonial Games 'N' Fun Handbook" offers a potpourri of games and activities to please a wide variety of ages and interests.

Here are a few games for those long afternoons:

COCK FIGHTING
AGE GROUP: 6 or older
PARTICIPANTS: 2 or more DIRECTIONS: Each player stands on one foot and holds his other leg in one hand; all players hop around and bump into each other, trying to knock each other down. The winner of a round is that player who stays on his feet after the other players are straddling him. When all are lying on their backs, the one at the rear of the feet on the ground.

VARIATION 1: Players hop on one foot with their arms folded across their chests.

VARIATION 2: Players squat putting their arms around their knees and clasping their hands firmly; players hop, trying to unbalance each other.

SKIN THE SNAKE RELAY
AGE GROUP: 8 or older
DIRECTIONS: Divide players into equal teams, no more than 8 to a team, and line up in file formation. Each player extends his left hand backward between his legs and at the same time grasps, with his right hand, the left hand of the player in front of him. At a signal, members of each file start moving backward. The rear player of each file, as the backward movement starts, lies down on his back, retaining the hand grasp with the player in front of him. The second rear player, after moving backward by straddling the last player, lies down, still maintaining the grasp with his two hands. The backward movement is continued, each player lying down after he passes over the other players by straddling them. When all are lying on their backs, the one at the rear of the file (the captain) arises and, straddling the prone players, moves forward, pulling the second player from the rear to his feet. This continues until the third player. Action continues until all are on their feet once more. The team wins whose captain first returns all the members of his file to the standing position, provided no hand grasps are broken.

Each player, as he lies down, should keep his legs close against the body of the player in front of him, and turn his toes in. Players who are moving backward should move their legs well apart while straddling. Practice in slow motion before using as a race.

TIERS
AGE GROUP: 10 or older
PARTICIPANTS: 6-20
DIRECTIONS: This game was popular with the Indians of the plains and the Northwest coastal areas. A circle of players is formed, about 50 feet in diameter. One player stands in the center blindfolded. A referee designates which player on the outside circle should proceed slowly toward the center man. The object of the stalker is to touch the center man before he can be detected. If the centerman points to the stalker, the referee indicates right and the stalker must sit in that spot. The referee then points to another stalker to begin his advance. This continues until a stalker reaches the center man; if no one reaches him, the closest man to the center after everyone has had a turn is declared the winner.

Neddy Noople nipped his neighbor's nutmeg.
Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers and put them on a preased pewter platter.

Cancer society inches toward goal

Charlevoix County's American Cancer Crusade is only $281 short of its record $13,900 goal, according to Mrs. Patty Muma, county Crusade chairman.

Mrs. Muma is confident that the remainder of the money will be donated in the next few days to put the county over the top.

As of June 17, door-to-door solicitations, fund-raising projects, memorial contributions and other gifts totaled $13,618.12, all of which will be used for research into the cause and cure of cancer.

and to relieve the financial burden of cancer victims in Charlevoix County.

The City of Charlevoix paced the campaign divisions, with total contributions of $7,422.46, followed by Boyne City with $3,318.98; East Jordan, $2,325.66 and Beaver Island, $550.

Assisting Mrs. Muma as chairman were Mrs. Freda Kulik, Boyne Falls; Mrs. Joy Green, St. James; Jane Russell and Jean Zoulek, East Jordan; Mrs. Harvey Varnum, Boyne City; and Mrs. Chris Robinson, Walloon.

Lake, in addition to acting as county chairman, Mrs. Muma also served as Charlevoix chairman.

Mrs. Muma said all of the area chairmen are continuing to accept donations in an effort to meet the 1977 goal. Checks made out to the American Cancer Society also may be sent to Mrs. Dorothy Dixon, County Crusade treasurer, in care of the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

Board of Review, the City Assessor shall give notice to each such property owner of the decision of the Board of Review. This notice shall be mailed to the address of each owner not later than seven (7) days before the second meeting of the Board of Review.

Section 8.11 Board of Review - Second Meeting.

Section 8.12 Board of Review - Endorsement of Roll.

After the Board of Review completes its review of the assessment roll, the majority of its members shall immediately endorse thereon and sign a statement to the effect that the same is the assessment roll of the City for the year in which it has been prepared. The omission of this endorsement shall not affect the validity of this roll. Upon completion, the roll shall be the assessment roll of the City for County, School, and City taxes and for any other taxes on real or personal property that may be authorized by law. The assessment roll shall be conclusively presumed by all Courts and tribunals to be valid and shall not be set aside except for causes set forth in general tax laws of the State.

Section 8.13 Certification to Assessor.

After the Council has adopted the budget for the ensuing year, the City Clerk shall certify to the City Assessor the total amount which the Council determines shall be raised by general taxes, all amounts of special assessments which the Council requires to be assessed or reassessed upon any property or against any person, and all other amounts which the Council may determine shall be charged, assessed, or reassessed against any person or property.

Section 8.14 Spreading of the Taxes.

After the confirmation of the assessment roll, the City Assessor shall certify a copy of the assessment to the City Treasurer. The assessment roll shall be delivered to the Treasurer before May 1st each year. Thereafter, the City Treasurer shall spread the several taxes to be raised upon this certified copy of the assessment roll and this shall constitute the City tax roll for the current year. To avoid fractions and computations on any tax roll, the City Treasurer may add to the amount of the several taxes to be raised an amount prescribed by statute. This added amount, when collected, shall belong to the City.

Section 8.15 Taxes - Collection of.

After spreading the taxes, the City Treasurer shall collect from the persons named in the tax roll the various sums stated. The City Treasurer is granted, for the purpose of collecting the taxes, assessments, and charges on the tax roll, all the powers and immunities possessed by township treasurers for the collection of taxes under the general tax laws of the State. The City Council may provide for the collection of delinquent taxes by ordinance.

Section 8.16 Taxes - Due - Liens.

The City taxes assessed shall become due on June 1st of each year, and the amounts assessed on any interest in real property shall become a lien upon such property at the time provided by the federal tax laws of the State, and the lien for these amounts and for all interest and other charges shall continue until these sums are paid. All personal property taxes shall be a first lien, prior, superior, and paramount, upon all personal property of the persons assessed at the time provided by the general tax laws of the State and shall necessary to protect the lien of the City for taxes or special assessments. The City may hold, lease, or sell this property. Any such procedure exercised by the City in the protection of its lien shall be deemed to be public purpose.

Section 8.22 Tax Collection - County, School, and State.

For the purpose of assessing and collecting taxes in the City for State, County and School purposes, the City shall be considered the same as a Township and shall collect and account for these taxes, penalties and interest in the method provided by the general tax laws of the State.

Section 8.17 Taxes - Power of Treasurer.

The City Treasurer shall have the same power and authority as conferred by law upon township treasurers for collecting taxes by suit, by distraint, or by the sale of goods and chattels. All proceedings for the return and collection of unpaid taxes, the sale of goods and chattels, and all other proceedings necessary in the enforcement of these taxes, shall be in all respects, so far as applicable, the same as are set by the general tax laws of the State.

Section 8.23 Changes - Additions.

In all matters where this Charter does not fully or adequately provide for the levy and collection of the City, County, School, and other taxes, the City Council shall have the power and authority to adopt additional ordinances necessary to carry out and enforce the general tax laws of the State.

ARTICLE IX

LeFavour considering suit

A fired Charlevoix city policeman says he may sue the city for dismissing him last week.

Peter C. LeFavour claims he was treated unjustly when City Police Chief Jack Mol fired him Thursday for conduct unbecoming a police officer.

In the Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament at the Belvedere Club Golf Course last week.

It was also the sentiment of two Charlevoix High School students, the only local players in the amateur tournament.

"Oh, I'm going to try again next year, definitely," Pat Paul, 16, said following his first exposure to the weeklong tournament.

"I think we could make the cut next year," Mike Custer, 15, added. "We could have made it this year."

For both young men, playing in the Michigan Am was something they have always wanted to do.

"I live up here and I wanted to try it," Paul explained. "And that's the whole idea behind getting a season ticket to the Belvedere Club. Get your handicaps down so that you can qualify for the Michigan Am."

The two members of the Charlevoix High School golf team said they were a little surprised at the difference between playing in the Michigan Am and playing in high school golf matches.

"During a high school match, if you mess up that doesn't mean you've lost the game," Paul said. "There's usually someone else on the team who can make up for what you lost."

"But when you're in a match, you have to do it. It's all yours."

Custer pointed out that the Michigan Am had many golfers of a higher caliber than the high school teams he had played.

"You're out there playing against guys who have been playing golf their whole life," the high school junior him.

"I'm in the process of clearing up my matter to protect my job, my family and my reputation," LeFavour said in a statement approved by his attorney.

LeFavour, 28, had served on the Charlevoix Police Department for three years. He had held the rank of patrolman and he also served as union steward.

City band to begin concert schedule

The Charlevoix City Band will open its weekly concerts in East Park beginning this week according to Mike Davis, summer director of the 50-piece instrumental group. However, for the first time in many years, the concerts which begin this week and continue until mid-August, will be presented at 8 p.m. on Thursday evening. Davis said the schedule was changed because Wednesday was designated as "church night" in the community and to allow musicians who play with other groups an opportunity to play with the Charlevoix City Band.

Rehearsals are held at 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday. Any instrumentalist interested in playing with the Charlevoix band is invited to attend the rehearsals and appear with the band on Thursday.

Davis is directing the band in the absence of Gary Stutzman who is completing a course of graduate study at Northern Michigan University this summer. He has been associated with the music department of the Traverse City school system during the school year for two years and last year, for the first time, worked with Walter Ricks in the music program at Northern Michigan College. Davis said he plans no major change in the format of the weekly concerts in East Park. They will continue to include Sousa marches, standard and traditional band music with some contemporary music being added to the folder.

The concerts are sponsored by the city of Charlevoix in cooperation with the Charlevoix Public Schools where rehearsals are held.

Charlevoix City Band directed by Mike Davis will play The Dam Busters, Coteau, La Gassey, Don't Rain on My Parade, Styne; Waltz from "Eugene Onegin"; Tchaikowsky; Overture to "The Nutcracker"; Bolero for Band, Ossei; The Pride of the Wolverines; Sousa; Star-Spangled Spectacular; Cohan; Fairness of the Fair, Sousa.

William Ratigan to address historical society on lakes

Dr. William Ratigan, Great Lakes author and historian, former NBC managing news editor, World War II supervisor of correspondents in the Pacific, and editor-scriptwriter for the first United Nations Conference, will speak at the monthly meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society on Tuesday, July 5, at 8 p.m. in the Community Room of the First State Bank.

He will discuss his chronicles about the Great Lakes, including three major shipwrecks of modern times, and the loss of "Cedarville" in a fog in the Straits of Mackinac in 1965.

Dr. Ratigan will include in his informal comments not only the shipping tragedies but also more recent developments on the Lakes, such as "Operation Taconite," the code name for "Winter Run," subject of much controversy in the recent attempts to establish year-round full calendar seasons of navigation.

All who are interested in Great Lakes history are invited to attend this meeting and share Dr. Ratigan's views of navigation past and present. There will be time for a question period.

Candidate finance forms due in clerk's office

Candidates in the recent school board elections, both those who were successful and those who were not, must file post-election campaign statements of money and spent by their candidate committees.

This recent clarification of the law by the State's Attorney General states, however, that the statements need only include receipts and disbursements made after June 1, 1977. These post-election campaign statements must be filed with the county clerk within 30 days following the election (by July 13).

Candidates are also reminded that they must file Statements of Organization of their candidate committees with the county clerk if they haven't already done so.

Charter sets tax limitation at 15 mills

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of four articles discussing the proposed new charter and the changes it would make in the operation of government in the City of Charlevoix. This story will cover Articles 8, 12, 13 and 14 of the charter which deal with taxation, utility franchises and municipal ownership, planning and zoning and transition.

The format will be the same as last week including a condensed version of the charter followed by comments from Richard Fochtman, charter commission chairman, and John Michael, charter commissioner.

Article 8-Taxation

In order to carry out the purposes, powers, and duties of the City Government established by this Charter, the City shall have the power to assess taxes and to lay and collect rents, tolls, and excises. The annual general ad valorem tax levy for municipal purposes shall not exceed one and one half percent (1 1/2%) of the state equalized value of all real and personal property.

In each case where the assessed value is increased or property is added to the rolls, the City Assessor shall give notice thereof to the respective property owners. This notice shall be mailed to the addresses of such owners as shown on the last assessment roll, and shall be mailed not later than one week before the first meeting of the Board of Review. The City Assessor shall file an affidavit with the Board of Review verifying this mailing, and this affidavit shall create a presumption of this mailing. Failure to send this notice as herein provided shall nullify the assessment change for the individual piece of property affected thereby for that year, and the assessment of the affected property shall remain unchanged.

In each case where there is an appeal by a property owner heard at the first meeting of the Board of Review, the City Assessor shall give notice to each such property owner of the decision of the Board of Review. This notice shall be mailed to the address of each owner not later than seven days before the second meeting of the Board of Review.

The charter commission members discussed the number of mills that could be levied in the city at length, Richard Fochtman, commission chairman, said. The commission waived between setting the millage rate at 10 mills or 15 mills.

They finally settled at 15 as a reasonable and desirable amount of millage because it would allow for some increase but the 15 mill limit would not allow such a great increase in taxes that it would overburden city residents, he said.

The commissioners also decided to change the composition of the Board of Review to increase the number of members. It will consist of five members, including three members appointed by the council and two members of the council.

The charter commission members felt the five-member board would be more familiar with the city and various properties.

Article 12-Utility Franchises and Municipal Ownership

The City shall have the power to acquire, construct, and operate, including, but not by way of limitation, public utilities for supplying water, light, heat, power, gas, sewage treatment and garbage disposal facilities, and to sell and deliver such services.

The rates and charges of any municipal utility for the furnishing of services shall be no higher than necessary to cover the costs of such utilities including depreciation, capital improvements, and the creating and maintaining of an emergency fund.

The City Council shall create an emergency fund for the electric, sewer and water utilities to meet any emergency that may occur. This fund shall not be less than $75,000 nor more than 1 percent of the true cash value of such utility.

Unless approved by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the registered electors at the election, the City shall not sell, exchange or lease any asset belonging to and appertaining to any municipally owned public utility which is needed to continue operating such utility.

One of the main changes the charter commission made in the section discussing the utilities was to create an emergency fund for the various operations, Fochtman and Michael said.

The funds are not to exceed one percent of the total value of the specific utility and the funds can be created over a five-year period.

"We felt the funds should be created over a five-year period so that the utility rates would not have to be increased excessively to create the funds," Fochtman said.

Fochtman and Michael pointed out that the utility section also puts a limit on the amount of reserve that can be kept in each fund. The men said they wanted the utilities to operate on a break-even basis. The charter commission felt by limiting the amount of reserve for the utilities, the rates could be kept at reasonable rates.

Article 13-Planning and Zoning

The City Council shall create a planning commission in accordance with statute.

All applications for zoning variances shall be submitted to the City Administrator in writing. The City Administrator shall review the application and refer the same to the Planning Commission, who shall weigh the merits of the application and make recommendations to the Zoning Board of Appeals in writing.

The charter commission members established a planning commission so that the future of the city and its zoning would be studied as well as the current zoning requests, Fochtman and Michael said.

"As it stands now there's no one that really looks into the future to plan for the city," Fochtman said. "Council is busy with so many things they don't have the time to devote to it that a planning commission would."

"We felt an independent body of concerned interested citizens would take the time to investigate zoning requests and to plan for future growth."

Under the new charter after the planning commission finishes investigating a zoning request written recommendations will be sent to the city council. Council will then decide how the issue will be handled. They can either follow the commissions recommendation or turn it down.

The city council will have the final say on any decisions the planning commission might take, Fochtman said.

Article 14-Transition

Except as otherwise provided herein, this Charter shall take effect and become law on Jan. 1, 1978 at 12:01 a.m.

The first election of ward council members under this Charter shall elect three aldermen, being one alderman from each ward of the City for a two-year term, which alderman shall take office on Jan. 1, 1978.

The office of elected Mayor under the Fourth Class Cities Act shall be abolished and terminated at the first meeting of the Council in the year 1978, at which time said council shall elect the Mayor as hereinafter provided.

This Charter shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of the City of Charlevoix on July 12, 1977. This Charter shall be adopted if a majority of the ballots cast thereon are in favor of the adoption.

Board approves contract

A two-year contract for the deputy sheriffs was approved by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week.

The commissioners and Teamsters Local 214 approved a contract which kept starting salaries at the current level but provided for an 8.5 percent increase at the two-year level for deputies and a 6 percent increase at the two-year level for dispatchers.

The deputies salary was increased from $10,600 at the two-year level to $11,500. The dispatcher salaries were increased from $8,500 to $9,200. The deputies salaries will be increased another 8.7 percent in 1978 and dispatchers salaries will jump 6.7 percent.

Other changes in the contract allowed the sheriff's employees to accumulate up to 56 days of sick leave, an additional 12 days over the current 44 days.

The vacation and holiday schedule is the same except the deputies can now have their birthday off instead of Columbus Day.

In other action, the commissioners hired Marjorie Warner as the new cook for the jail. Mike Webb will be the new custodian at the county building and Tim Day will be hired as a CETA custodian.

Plan commissioners to study emergency drought relief act

The Charlevoix County Planning Commission will consider the Community Emergency Drought Relief Act of 1977 at its July 7 meeting and decide whether or not to suggest to the County Board of Commissioners that they make application for assistance under the act.

Purpose of the act is to provide grants and loans to alleviate health and safety hazards, reduce economic hardship, and promote water conservation.

Projects to be funded are to be for the improvement, expansion, or construction of water supplies; purchase and transportation of water; water conservation measures; and other projects which will mitigate the effects of the drought of the last two years.

Funds in the amount of $175 million have been appropriated nationally. This will provide for loans, up to 100 percent of project costs; and grants, up to 50 percent of project cost. The loans will be for a 40 year term at a five percent interest rate.

Clock explains charter changes

By Bob Clock, member
Charlevoix Charter Commission

The voters of Charlevoix will queue up at the polls July 12 to decide whether their city should adopt a home-rule form of government as proposed by the Charlevoix Charter Commission or to remain under the Fourth Class City Act.

As expected, opponents to change of any kind have not hesitated to make the proposed charter appear to be the work of the Devil and Adolph Hitler working in league with one another.

One such opponent has even gone so far as to rewrite American history by condemning a section of the charter which calls for non-partisan elections.

At a recent anti-charter meeting at city hall, he said that political parties date back to 1776 and are as American as apple pie.

Which is luncheon as any student of history will tell you. If anything, the founding fathers feared the republic would degenerate into a party system.

They warned repeatedly against the formation and influence of parties. And they didn't even make mention of political parties in the Constitution or the Bill of Rights.

Listen to George Washington's farewell address to the American people, dated Sept. 17, 1796, as published in the "American Daily Advertiser."

"One of the expedients of party to acquire influence within particular districts is to misrepresent the opinions and aims of other districts. You cannot shield yourselves too much against the jealousies and heartburnings which tend to render alien to each other those who ought to be bound together by fraternal affection."

"I have already intimated to you the danger of parties in the state, with particular reference to the founding of them on geographical discriminations. Let me now take a more comprehensive view and warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party generally."

"This spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind. It exists under different shapes in all governments which are more or less stifled, controlled, or repressed; but in those of the popular form it is seen in its worst rankness and is truly their greatest enemy."

"It serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration. It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another; fomentes occasionally riot and insurrection."

There is more, but you get the idea. President Washington didn't want to have anything to do with political parties and he thought they would be bad for the country, as did other early leaders.

So the Charter Commission is on pretty firm ground when it endorses non-partisan elections for the City of Charlevoix. The commissioners point out that too often in the past many talented Democrats have been denied an opportunity to serve Charlevoix in an official capacity simply because they were the label of an unpopular party and were unwilling to run under false stripes.

Foes of change also are wide-eyed over the false assumption that under the proposed charter the city manager would be responsible to no one—not even the council. This is the story going around town, and of course it's poppycock as a cursory review of the charter will show.

The city manager is hired by the council and does the council's bidding. If he blunders badly, it is the council which writes him a pink slip.

Under policies established by the council, the city manager is responsible for day-to-day operations of the city. And since he's in charge he must be held fully accountable when things go wrong. The buck stops with him. That is why under the proposed charter an individual councilman would not be in a position to tell the street superintendent what avenues he wants torred and chipped. He would have to work through the city manager. The mayor will not be able to fire a city employee as has happened in the past. But he will be able to pass his complaints on to the city manager who will see his workers shape up or ship out (if he is interested in keeping his own job).

What the new charter does is to impose a chain of command on city government, something which has been lacking in the past. City workers answer to their department heads, department heads answer to the city manager, the city manager answers to the council and the council answers to the voters. And the same process works in reverse.

It's as simple as that.

City government under the proposed charter has been likened to a corporate structure, which is a good analogy because the city is indeed a multi-million dollar municipal corporation which should be operated in a business-like manner. The citizens of Charlevoix are stockholders in the corporation, charged with making sure everything runs smoothly.

Another argument advanced by foes of the new charter centers around the city's $750,000 surplus. They point to New York City, Detroit and other municipal giants which have been on the financial ropes for years and argue that Charlevoix must be doing something right under the Fourth Class City Act. And on the surface their argument makes sense.

Yet cities are not supposed to be in the business of making money or flashing big bankrolls. Ideally a municipal corporation should end the fiscal year with a zero bank balance, excluding monies set aside for capital expansion and emergencies. When a revenue surplus reaches unrealistic proportions, it means either that the city has been overtaxed or that they have paid too dearly for their city utilities. It is also a sign that more scrupulous attention should be paid toward matching anticipated revenues and expenditures when drawing up the city budget. By rights, that $750,000 city bill looks to crowd about should be in the bank accounts of Charlevoix taxpayers, if it is a true revenue surplus.

Now on to some of the positive, exciting things about the proposed charter, including the ward conventions.

When the Charter Commission was elected two years ago, many members thought it might be a good idea to get rid of the wards altogether and switch to at-large elections. The ward system seemed to do more to divide Charlevoix than to bring them together for their mutual good.

Then the commissioners attended Potosky's ward conventions in September of 1975 and their thinking about wards changed markedly. They found, transported to the heart of Northern Michigan, a type of colonial town meeting at which friends and neighbors got together, discussed the political issues of the day and nominated council candidates and city convention delegates.

The system was such a refreshing departure from the sterile petition system of nominating candidates that the commissioners returned to Charlevoix determined that a place exists for the ward in modern city government.

If you vote "yes" on the proposed charter, you might as well cancel all other social and civic engagements for the second Wednesday in September for the rest of your life.

Here's what will happen: At 7:30 p.m., political animals from all three wards will convene at one spot—possibly the high school gymnasium—to receive copies of the city's financial position as prepared by the city manager and to hear a brief report by the mayor on the "State of the City."

At 8:00 p.m., delegates will adjourn to their ward conventions where they will nominate candidates to city council and the clerk's office and hear statements by the candidates themselves as well as endorsements by their supporters.

When the election is over, ward delegates will elect by secret ballot two nominees for city council from that ward, guaranteeing a contest at the general election, and one nominee for city clerk from the city at large.

Delegates will then return to the central meeting place where the mayor will introduce all of the candidates, who in turn will have a chance to present their platforms before all of the assembled delegates.

Anyone who feels he should have been elected but wasn't will have a chance to get on the ballot by filing a petition with the city clerk and a primary election will be called in that ward only on the first Monday in October. The names of the two surviving candidates will appear on the ballot at the November general election. All the winners will take office Jan. 1.

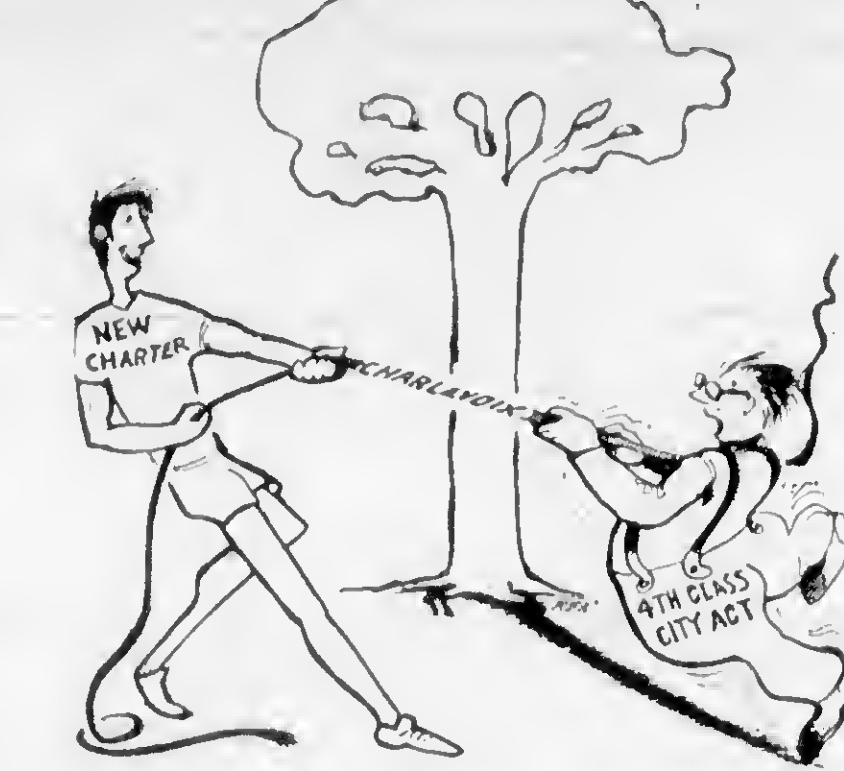

The ward convention system not only will eliminate the cost of primary elections most years, but also will give residents of each ward a chance to see their nominees in action and to evaluate them personally before voting.

The Charter Commission believes the second Wednesday of September will become one of the liveliest days on the calendar for Charlevoix residents—a return to the town meetings that were held behind American moved from the densely populated Midwest into the Plains and forests of the Midwest.

However after deciding on ward conventions, commissioners were still reluctant to abandon all of the advantages of an at-large system. So they decided that although candidates are nominated by ward, they shall be elected at large—a move which underscores each councilman's responsibility to the city as a whole.

One of the biggest changes under the proposed charter is the election of the mayor by the council rather than by all of the voters in the city. The commission knew this would be a tough feature to sell, but many of the members remembered one fellow who was elected mayor in a popular give-em-hell issue who was almost a total stranger to city government. Charlevoix didn't move off dead center until his successor was elected the following year.

The proposed charter practically guarantees that the mayor will have spent a few years on the council before taking over as top man. It also gives the mayor a vote on all issues—something denied him under the Fourth Class City Act. In the case of tie (and there will be some with a six-member council), the verdict is automatically "no," since a tie vote obviously requires more data and more discussion.

The proposed Charlevoix City charter is an imperfect document at best. There are many areas, including conflict of interest, that the commissioners would like to have dealt with in detail. But these are areas in which state law takes precedence and it would be pointless to include statutory limits or prohibitions in the new charter which are subject to change at the whim of the state legislature.

If it is any consolation, Michigan has one of the toughest conflict of interest laws in the country. State law also provides for the recall of public officials who fall down on the job, limits the penalties of ordinance violators, dictates accounting procedures, provides for the collection of taxes and assumes full responsibility in other areas of city government.

Why change? Why abandon the Fourth Class City Act under which Charlevoix has operated for so many years?

Probably one of the best reasons is that the Fourth Class City Act may be getting ready to abandon the residents of Charlevoix. A move is afoot in the state legislature to have cities of Charlevoix's class either drop up home-rule charters or adopt the 1895 Fourth Class City Act as their charter.

And as valuable as it has been over the years, the Fourth Class City Act today has been superseded by so much state law that it is a veritable jungle of inconsistencies and inapplicable provisions.

Another good reason is that home rule will give Charlevoix an opportunity to amend their charter whenever the need arises. There is little the city can presently do to amend the Fourth Class City Act, which is, after all, a state document. It can be done, but it isn't easy.

Another important reason for change is the fact that the Fourth Class City Act virtually ignores the duties and responsibilities of the city manager or administrator. One can be hired, all right, but the law is vague when it comes to spelling out his duties and responsibilities. Remember, the Fourth Class City Act was born 82 years ago and was designed primarily to meet the needs of small rural communities with a minimum of relatively unsophisticated problems. The mayor and council could handle the job very well by themselves, thank you, without the assistance of a skilled administrator and staff. After all, that was in the days when city accounts could be kept on a thumb nail and a handful of city employees were paid wages from a muffin tin.

Just think: When the Fourth Class City Act was drafted the automobile hadn't even been invented. The mere mention of a "parking lot" would have aroused quizzical expressions. The Wright Brothers flight at Kitty Hawk was still eight years in the future. Electricity was a relatively new gadget, a plaything of the rich. The first road had yet to be paved. Sewage systems and indoor plumbing were just beginning to win acceptance.

Yet your mayor and council must deal everyday with traffic problems, parking problems, airport problems, electrical distribution problems, paving problems and sewage problems—areas of responsibility which didn't even exist when the Fourth Class City Act was born.

The proposed charter takes into consideration the fact that Charlevoix has grown, whether we like it or not, and is continuing to grow. The commissioners feel the new charter will make that growth as orderly and as painless as possible. They also feel that more residents will develop a keener interest in serving Charlevoix under a more people-oriented form of government.

Think it over. And vote July 12.

I greatly appreciate the invitation to write regarding the proposed City Charter. As I stated to you two weeks ago I preferred to remain neutral, however, time and circumstance has deprived me of that luxury.

It bothered me when John Michaels pushed the council to vote approval of the Charter when none of us had time to evaluate the document. It pleased me that the Council, in their wisdom voted only to put the question on the ballot, emphasizing that they showed, no preference.

At the presentation of the Charter to the Third Ward it soon became apparent that I would be remiss in my duty to the voters of Charlevoix not to explain the potential of the proposal. Article II section 2.17 Council Limitations-paragraph C states "The Council and its members shall deal solely through the City Manager with officials and employees who are subject to the direction and supervision of the City Manager. Neither the City Council nor its members individually shall give orders to any official or employee either publicly or privately." There is no way under the proposed charter to direct the Manager except by suspension and discharge, and we have not seen how difficult and unlikely that is.

The Charter provides that utility service charges include depreciation costs, capital improvement costs and a $75,000 emergency fund in each utility to be reached in five years. This means that your sewer service charges of last year $101,339 total would be raised by $95,031 for depreciation and capital costs plus $15,000 for emergency fund.

Chosen by the voters of the city, the Charter Commission would be well advised to recommend a no vote on July 12th, and have public hearings on the issues.

This would make your total sewer service charges total $21,370 over double last year's costs. I have resisted in the past, and strongly object to the charging of depreciation on utilities that have been paid for with bond money and operation revenues. It is a double charge, we must all say no to this.

Why all the increased cost provision? The only hint was at the June 21st presentation when Mr. Michaels alluded to numerous department heads and advisors, described a bureaucratic machine under one man control. What we know of that system is that the big cities that have it have gone bankrupt. Do we want the same? "no".

The present City Council under your proven efficient form of voter control, has held down your utility rates, reduced your City tax rate to the lowest in our history, half of what it was five years ago. At the presentation meeting Chairman Mr. Richard Foeltman explained that after a no vote the Charter commission could go back and revise the proposed charter, this is a ten mile tax limit, we could consider a conflict of interest act prohibiting bribery, extortion, kickbacks, payola and conversion, we could consider electing some of the people that are in City Hall all day, we should come up with the procedure to amend a charter, we could put some "Home Rule" in it.

If it Fittz
by Jim Fitzgerald

It is a known fact that most lawyers are unfaithful to their spouses. This fact became known last week during a hearing before a Michigan State Bar Grievance Board panel.

Lawyer Milton Henry said: "If they started disbaring lawyers who were having extra-marital affairs, there wouldn't be too many of us around."

Of course, there are different opinions on how many lawyers are "too many."

Some malcontents insist one lawyer is too many.

These people are typified by the man who was content until he inherited a $3 million estate and had to pay 16 lawyers $3.1 million to get the estate probated. The case took 32 years to settle and the lawyers explained that their fee was not unreasonable when figured on an hourly basis.

They justified their hourly rate by pointing out that it was the same amount charged by every other lawyer in the United States.

This was not price fixing, they said, it was reciprocity.

On the other hand, there are some people who insist there cannot be too many lawyers, otherwise they all wouldn't be so d— busy.

This group is typified by the accused shoplifter who was in jail 5 years waiting for trial.

His trial had to be postponed 62 times because his lawyer always had to be in Washington to plead a case before the U.S. Supreme Court.

When the alleged shoplifter's case finally got to court, his lawyer showed up 5 minutes late because he had to pause on the courthouse steps to prepare his defense.

The accused wore a tin cup in his lapel buttonhole so his lawyer would recognize him.

But it seems legally correct to assume that when Milton Henry said there aren't too many lawyers who don't have extramarital affairs, he meant too many lawyers are chasing more than ambulances.

Henry made his startling admission in defense of suspended Recorder's Court Judge James Del Rio. The purpose of the grievance board hearing is to determine, among other things, whether Del Rio should lose his license to practice law.

Louis Rosenzweig, a lawyer for the grievance board, accused Del Rio of lying when he applied for admittance to the bar. The State Bar Board of Examiners had to pass on Del Rio's moral fitness.

The examiners asked if he had ever been charged with immorality during a divorce proceeding. Del Rio did not reveal that he had been accused of adultery by his second wife when she divorced him.

Rosenzweig implied that a member of the bar should not be unfaithful to his (or her) spouse. But Henry said heck, most of us do it.

This debate was held before a cluster of lawyers, including the 3 members of the grievance panel who will judge Judge Del Rio. There is no record of any of these lawyers rising in loud protest against Henry's arithmetic.

None of them denied that a lawyer is likely to amend his (or her) marriage contract so that subparagraph III (c) contains sufficient fine print in which to hide an understanding companion and 2 nights a week in a judicial retreat, hereafter known as the Holiday Inn.

I hope you've noticed I have inserted "or her" in the appropriate spots in previous paragraphs. All lawyers are not men.

I suspect Milton Henry was speaking only for male lawyers, but he didn't make this perfectly clear. I do not want to be unfair to him or to women lawyers who deserve equal adulterers.

If you suggest that Judge Del Rio should hire a lawyer who does make things perfectly clear, you should be informed that Del Rio can't afford to hire any lawyer at all.

He told the grievance panel he has no money and must represent himself and accept free services from such generous lawyers as Henry.

Judge Del Rio continues to be paid $45,000 a year, even while on suspension. In most households, this is considered a fair income.

The sad fact that a $45,000-a-year man cannot afford legal representation gives you a good idea how much lawyers must charge in order to support their extramarital affairs.

That's probably why lawyers have most of the affairs. They are the only ones who can afford a divorce in case they get caught.

Onward and Upward.

Erma Bombeck
...Speaking Her Mind

To my husband, being late for work isn't just a minor inconvenience, it's a conspiracy.

He doesn't know names, but he knows that there's a group of us out there who have dedicated our lives and talents to making him late. Frankly, I'd rather sleep next to a space missile than be abducted three seconds before launch.

"Well, I hope you're all happy," he said, fighting off the covers. "You've done it again. I'm going to be late for work."

"No wonder," I said. "The alarm is set for 8:30."

"Wasn't that the plan?" he asked bitterly. "Hide his glasses and he won't know what he's doing with the alarm."

"On no you don't. The last time I was late you laid out the socks with the lint pattern, the underwear with the broken elastic and the shirt that you never notice needs a button until you start to put on your tie."

"Okay," I said. "Do it yourself."

Minutes later, "What have you done to my feet? I can't get them into my socks! These socks have been laminated together. Just throw them into my briefcase and I'll put them on in the car. What do you mean what did I do to my face? Good Lord, woman, have you never seen a man wrapped in toilet tissue before? I cut myself! What did you expect when you look out the old razor blade you scraped paint off the garage windows with and replace it with a new one?"

"Do you want any breakfast?"

"No. Thanks to the kids, I've already guzzled a glass of water from a tumbler the kids had poured creme rinse into. Tell me, what else do you all have in store to make my day more miserable than it began? Let me guess. My car won't start. At the end of the drive I'll get behind a camper caravan. My street at the office will be blocked off for a parade and I'll have to park and take a bus. The air conditioning will go off and I'll have to remove my coat to reveal my bowling shirt. I'll have onion rings for lunch and a dental appointment at 2:30. I'll have to write a check for a pack of gum and my first appointment of the day will be to fire Miss Mahoney for her tardiness."

"Does that mean you can't drop the children off at school on your way to the office?"

"I don't believe you can be so cruel," he said and stomped toward the car. He loped in for a paper towel within seconds, having stepped in the dog's contribution to ecological warfare, and leaned over to the dog and shouted, "You're in on it too, aren't you?"

When I left Charlevoix to head down to the Jordan Valley I thought I would probably take a couple pictures of the Jordan Valley area and explain how the pathway had been constructed and marked. He even took the group on a short side trip to see a beaver dam and house.

I enjoyed every minute of the hike and I urge you to take the time to try out either the three-mile pathway or the 20-mile loop, which is complete with campground facilities.

And even though Mittig won't be there to give you a personally guided tour you can still benefit from his knowledge by picking up one of the brochures at the beginning of the trail.

Clint, Barb Fogle buy Haggards shop

Clint and Barbara Fogle are the new owners of Haggard's Hat and Bed, "The Unique Boutique".

They came to Charlevoix from Sister Bay, Wis., in the Door County resort area, where they owned a bakery with coffee shop and a women's apparel shop.

"We came from a beautiful area in Wisconsin, but my wife and I feel this is even more beautiful," he added. "Here we have the inland lakes and hills which we didn't have in Sister Bay."

Bath and Bed will continue to stock "a beautiful line of bed linens-sheets, spreads, comforters, blankets, and pillows-color coordinated towels and fancy towels, throw pillows, table linens, bath and bedroom accessories, and the most complete line of shower curtains in the north, according to Clint.

Bath and Bed will gift wrap any purchase and also has a bridal registry.

Meet Charlevoix ...Frank Ochs

The Central Retail Drug Store in Charlevoix has operated longer under the same name than any other business in the city. This week we asked Frank Ochs, proprietor of the pharmacy, to tell us about the past and present of the business.

COURIER: Checking into the past history of this southwest corner of Clinton and Bridge Streets, we found that the first building was erected in 1868 as a boarding house, then it was a bakery and grocery store, and finally a hotel until it was partially burned in 1895. When did it become a drug store?

OCHS: About 1897. A man by the name of B.A. Herman had the first pharmacy here. He called it the Central Drug Store, which it is today. My father, Harry Ochs, went to work in the store in 1919 and bought it out in 1923.

COURIER: When did you classify a pharmacy like yours?

OCHS: It's a community pharmacy. We handle prescriptions, over-the-counter drugs, cosmetics, health aids, sundries, newspapers and magazines, greeting cards, gifts, tobacco, etc.

COURIER: How do you take it out when we rebuild the store in 1967?

OCHS: Yes, we did, but we took it out when we rebuilt the same size it was before you rebuilt.

OCHS: It takes up the same amount of land because that's all the land there is, but the old building had three stories instead of the one story we now have. I remember when there were offices above the store in the old building.

COURIER: How many people do you employ?

OCHS: Seven altogether, including one full-time and one part-time pharmacist.

COURIER: What are your hobbies-what do you do in your spare time?

OCHS: I don't have any hobbies and I don't have that much time.

COURIER: Do you take vacations?

OCHS: I usually go to Florida for two or three weeks each winter for a vacation.

COURIER: There are other pharmacists in your family, aren't there?

OCHS: Our daughter, Virginia, and son, John, are both pharmacists. They live in Kalamazoo. John is in the research department of Upjohn. Virginia was recently married to Michael Walton. They are third generation pharmacists.

COURIER: Were you born in Charlevoix?

OCHS: Yes, and I graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1937.

COURIER: Does Mrs. Ochs help you with the store?

OCHS: Yes, Doris helps with the office work.

Food expenditures rank at top of Charlevoix County budgets

The Charlevoix County economy gained in strength during the past year, according to a survey of business activity locally and in other communities across the county.

Figures for the area, just released, show that consumer spending for goods and services was relatively strong, reflecting the fact that most families had higher incomes than before and were spending more.

The larger sales volume in local retail stores also reflected the higher price tags on most merchandise.

In a comprehensive market study made by the Standard Rate and Date Service. It details, for each locality, the amount that was spent in the past year for food, clothing, cars, household equipment and other products.

In Charlevoix County, the figures show, food was in the number one spot. More money was spent in that direction than in any other.

Expenditures in local grocery stores, delicatessens, supermarkets, bakeries, butcher shops and other food stores accounted for 10.45 percent of the total.

In addition to this outlay, a considerable amount was spent in local restaurants and in other eating and drinking places.

In effect, about 22 cents out of every dollar spent in local retail stores went for take-home food.

Elsewhere throughout the United States, the average was 21 cents, and in the East North Central states, 20 cents.

The report indicates that the home food bill, if distributed equally among the people in the area, would figure out to $1.69 per family.

Also detailed in the study are the expenditures for various other commodities.

Sales of cars, motorcycles, boats and related equipment amounted to $10,394,000 in the year.

In general merchandise and variety shops a total of $1,570,000 was recorded.

Those selling shoes, clothing hats and other wearing apparel grossed $1,033,000.

Local furniture and home furnishings stores accounted for $1,434,000.

This far this year, the national reports indicate, business continues on the upswing, with consumers spending more freely.

PBB found in New Jersey area

By PEG OHLE

For some time, the only known contamination by polychlorinated biphenyl (PBB) has been in the state of Michigan, but there are now reports that the toxic chemical has been found in plant and animal life near two PBB manufacturing plants in Northern New Jersey.

The Environmental Protection Agency reported recently that PBB has been found in human hair, fish, plants, soil, and water near the White Chemical Company in Bayville and the Hexcel Corporation in Sayreville.

In 1976, both plants manufactured PBB—the toxic fire retardant which was accidentally mixed with Michigan cattle feed in 1973, resulting in what has been called the largest agricultural chemical disaster in U.S. history. The most serious aspect of the contamination was traced through the food chain.

It is estimated that millions of Michigan people have some PBB in their systems.

Commenting on the recent PBB discovery, U.S. Senator Don Riegle said, "Immediate steps must now be taken to make sure that the kind of PBB disaster which occurred in the state of Michigan is not repeated in New Jersey. Although the two incidents are distinctly different, the scope of the contamination in New Jersey must be rapidly determined."

Last March, Senator Riegle chaired Senate subcommittee hearings on the PBB incident and then introduced legislation to create a Chemical Emergency Response Team which would "immediately move into any given area at the first sign of possible contamination to begin control and elimination of the chemical."

City hall blooms all summer with help of Anna Klooster

By PAULA HOLMES

Visiting Charlevoix City Hall is like visiting a flower shop.

Several bouquets of whatever flowers are in season always decorate the receiving counter and various desks of the first floor offices. And the flowers of every size, shape and color brighten up the office and seem to put smiles on the faces of city employees and make even the most irate customer a little less angry.

Are city residents supporting such an extravagance with their hard earned tax dollars?

Not hardly. The flowers are brought in fresh from the garden of Anna Klooster, who works in the billing department at city hall.

"I'm the type of person if I have a little extra of something I like to give it to other people," Mrs. Klooster explained in a voice as soft as a rose petal. "I figure I've got the flowers, so why not share them?"

And share them she has. For many years, Mrs. Klooster has shared her garden with the city.

Mrs. Klooster said the care of cut flowers should begin the second they are cut. She suggested people carry a bucket of water with them when they go into their gardens to cut flowers. This way the flower won't lose any moisture at all.

She said that flowers with woody stalks such as lilacs and roses need to have the stems crushed so that they will be able to soak up the water they need.

Other flowers such as peonies and poppies need to be sealed. This is done by placing the stalk tip in hot water for a few minutes. The searing keeps the liquid in the flower stem from coming out, she explained.

Gladioli should be cut on a slant and roses should be kept in warm water.

The flower-lover said that the water of a bouquet should be changed daily and the stems should be recut, too.

"I don't do that," she said. "It just takes too much time. But if you really want to keep your bouquets, that's what should be done. I just change the water every day."

Mrs. Klooster said some flowers will naturally last longer than others. Day lilies and iris have blossoms that will only last one day. And usually it will not bloom once they have been cut.

Gladioli on the other hand will bloom right down to the last bud as long as you keep cutting the stem.

"I used to have a lady I would take gladioli to that would keep cutting them until she just had a few flowers floating in water," Mrs. Klooster said. "But she got the flowers to bloom down to the last stem."

Churches in the state to participate in the program with them.

The program, which teaches the children about their heritage and stresses religious faith, was so successful the group decided to hold it again.

This year the 30 students, who range in age from 8 to 14 years old, come mostly from the Mt. Pleasant area. They represent the Chippewa and Ottawa tribes and there is one Cherokee Indian student in the group, too.

In addition to outdoor activities such as hiking, swimming and fishing, the students have also been attending classes in Indian basketry, bead work, weaving and cooking. Oliver also SCOTT MOSES of Mt. Pleasant takes some time out to work on a bead project he started. Scott was one of 30 Native American students attending an Indian heritage workshop at Greensky Hill Indian Church last week.

"It always added to the beauty of the service," she said. "And the people appreciated it."

But lately, due to poor health, Mrs. Klooster hasn't been able to pay as much attention to her garden as she would like and she has not been able to prepare flowers for the church.

"My garden used to be much prettier than it is now," she said sadly. "It was bigger, too."

The city employee said she tried to have a flower for every part of the season so that something would always be in bloom in the yard. She started out the season with daffodils and end with mums.

In between, visitors could find lily of the valley, lilac magazine and newspaper articles on flower gardening and on trying out the suggestions the articles contained. In addition she has tilled many hours in her garden, too.

"It's a constant battle," she said. "There's a bug for every flower."

With all that devotion to her gardens, one would think Mrs. Klooster's home would be packed with bouquets. Actually, she can't stand to have flowers in the house.

"I'm allergic to them," she recalled. "People from the Belvedere Club would come and get them. 'But I never raised flowers professionally. I'm an amateur.'"

She said her favorite flower was the rose because of its sweet gentle smell.

ANNA KLOOSTER arranges some Canterbury Bells to decorate city hall offices, she keeps the offices looking summery.

The United Way of Charlevoix Board of Directors has completed its budget for 1977.

The board members set their fundraising goal at $17,300 after studying appeals for monetary aid from 12 area agencies. The 1977 budget is approximately $2,000 lower than the 1976 goal.

"We're trying to set a realistic goal that we can reach," John Lachman, board president, explained. "If we go over our goal the agencies will receive that much more money, but if we don't make our goal then we have to cut the amount of funds we give them."

"We want to build this up gradually and meet every goal," he said.

The agencies and the amount they will be funded are: Salvation Army, $1,600; Charlevoix City Recreation Program, $1,000; DAC Counseling Center, Inc., $750; Bergmann Center, $2,000; Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council, $1,700; and Seaside Trails Boy Scout Council, $1,300.

Other agencies included: American Red Cross, Charlevoix County Chapter, $1,450; Camp Daggett, $1,000; Charlevoix County Big Brothers and Sisters, $1,600; Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood, $1,250; Michigan United Fund, $3,148; and campaign expenses, $302.

Cancer Society tops 1977 goal of $13,900

The Charlevoix County Unit of the American Cancer Society has reached and topped its goal for 1977, Patty Muma, Crusade chairman, has announced.

The cancer society has collected $14,172.70 so far. Mrs. Muma said that is $272.78 more than the group's $13,900 goal.

Mrs. Muma said a combination of donations helped put the cancer society over its goal. A single check from Mrs. Hubert Padlock for $500, and $227 in memorials combined with $800 in donations from the Walloon Lake area and $690 from the East Jordan area put the group over the goal.

To date the cancer society has collected $7,710 in Charlevoix, $3,341 in the Boyne City, Boyne Falls, Walloon Lake areas, $2,520 from East Jordan and $550 from Beaver Island.

United Way board sets $17,000 budget

The United Way of Charlevoix Board of Directors has completed its budget for 1977.

The board members set their fundraising goal at $17,300 after studying appeals for monetary aid from 12 area agencies. The 1977 budget is approximately $2,000 lower than the 1976 goal.

"We're trying to set a realistic goal that we can reach," John Lachman, board president, explained. "If we go over our goal the agencies will receive that much more money, but if we don't make our goal then we have to cut the amount of funds we give them."

"We want to build this up gradually and meet every goal," he said.

The agencies and the amount they will be funded are: Salvation Army, $1,600; Charlevoix City Recreation Program, $1,000; DAC Counseling Center, Inc., $750; Bergmann Center, $2,000; Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council, $1,700; and Seaside Trails Boy Scout Council, $1,300.

IF THE PROPOSED CHARTER FOR THE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX IS PASSED:

I. WATER SERVICE CHARGES WILL INCREASE 15%, SEWER SERVICE WOULD DOUBLE.

II. TAXES WILL INCREASE 90%.

III. THE CHARTER COMMISSION ADOPTED SEVERAL NEGATIVE THINGS FROM THE PETOSKEY CHARTER -- WHY NOT ADOPT ONE GOOD THING -- THE 10 MILL LIMIT? THE COMMISSION REFUSED TO RESPOND TO A REQUEST TO PUT A CEILING OF 10 MILLS ON TAXES.

THE PRESENT MAYOR AND COUNCIL RESISTED THE EFFORTS OF SEVERAL INTEREST GROUPS TO RAISE THE COST OF CITY OPERATIONS BEYOND PRUDENT NEEDS, AND LOWERED YOUR CITY TAXES BY 44% THIS YEAR!

Scouts get taste of camping

A week of camping ended a year of Cadette Girl Scout activities for eight members of Charlevoix Troop 255.

The girls and their leaders Kate Smith and Bonnie Lenhart stayed at Windmill Farms Campground on the Boyne City Road and spent a typical week camping.

"We had to set up camp in the rain, which is typical," Mrs. Smith said. "But we are virtually rainproof in case it rains again."

The group spent their time swimming, hiking, bike riding, playing tennis and working on craft projects.

The Scouts earned money for their camping trip through the sale of Girl Scout cookies and calendars and the raffish of a quilt they made themselves.

Michigan Am-- Dream of a lifetime

Sunshine and rain dressed the Belvedere Club and Harbor Point golf courses as more than 360 amateur golfers descended on the Northern Michigan area for the Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament.

Natives and visitors alike watched as golfer after golfer fell by the wayside until only 64 were left in the running for the match play at the end of the week.

And then on Saturday there were just two left battling it out for the coveted crown. Dan Pohl, the 1975 Michigan Amateur champion from Mt. Pleasant, and Mark Spiekerman, a talented challenger from Saginaw.

It was a battle to the finish for the two well disciplined golfers. At first it looked like Pohl's chance to become only the 11th golfer in the tournament's 66-year history would remain out of reach behind the accurate shooting of Spiekerman.

But then the tide changed and behind his excellent tee shots and steady putting, Pohl came out from behind for the win.

Hiking trail opens up Jordan Valley

THESE NEW SIGNS mark the entrance to the two new hiking trails in the Jordan River Valley. Brochures describing the various points of interest along the trail are also available at the trail entrance.

The wonders and beauty of the Jordan River Valley are now open for inspection and enjoyment.

Two new hiking trails, complete with map-brochures describing points of interest, beckon the nature lover and outdoor enthusiast into the valley.

The trails—a three-mile day use path and an 18-mile overnight camping-hiking trail—begin at Dead Man's Hill and wind down, around and through the valley along the Jordan River and its tributaries.

"The views and terrain made this area ideal for hiking paths," Bill Mittig, area forester and trail designer, said. Hikers are treated to visions of fields of wildflowers, beaver dams and pieces of history from the bygone lumber era in the valley.

Mittig said he combined his general knowledge of the valley and the designated natural river area with topographical maps and aerial photos to decide where the trail would be located. However, when the forester actually got down to walking in the area where the path was going to be, many changes were made.

"We spent one whole day trying to find the easiest way up this hill," Mittig said as he walked along with a group of huffing and puffing reporters behind him.

Construction of the path and campground area was completed by three local men through funding by the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation of the U.S. Department of Interior and matching state and local funds.

Mittig said the men attempted to keep the path as natural looking as possible. The bridges built across the creeks and tributaries were made out of natural materials from the valley. There are several foot bridges including one with a span of 25 feet over a major creek.

The crew also had to build treadways in the marshy areas of the trail. About one-half mile of cedar and hemlock wedges had to be constructed along the trails to make them passable.

Mittig also took pains to make the campground and its 10 sites look as natural as possible. Instead of the poured concrete fire rings, Mittig constructed natural ones out of rocks. The campground also contains a water pump and latrine.

The trail is marked with blue paint dots to keep the hikers going in the right direction and several numbered posts also dot the trail. The brochure contains corresponding numbers and explains the points of interest. "We did this to try and get away from a lot of signs," the forester explained.

BILL MITTIG, area forester, pauses for a moment at the river study area on the new three-mile hiking trail in the Jordan River Valley area. Mittig helped design and lay out the trail and an 18-mile, two-day hiking path.

JUNE BIRTHSTONE

The common birthstone for June is Pearl or the rare Alexandrite. The old stone for this month, however is Adgate and the most enticing of these is the Fire Agate. This stone is also more desirable for men's jewelry, being both attractive and durable. Fire Agate has color zoning something akin to opal, but in a dark brown background. These stones are generally cut in non-uniform shapes to take best advantage of the color highlights. Fire Agates seem to be found in areas of previous volcanic activity and hot springs. Most of these lovely fire colored stones come from the southwestern United States and Mexico. The finer qualities, Peacock and Royal, are as rare as fine diamonds, however, as with most genuine stones, there is a larger quantity of the more popular priced varieties. Over the last ten years as more of these stones have been located, there has become great interest in the jewelry and lapidary field as this stone gains importance in the industry and with the consumer.

Guest preacher to speak at Congregational

A guest speaker will preach at the 10 a.m. worship service of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix Sunday.

Dr. George A. Buttrick, who is a gunner resident on Lake Charlevoix, is well known for his editorship of "The Interpreters' Bible," a set of commentaries on the Bible, and for the many books he has written.

He was pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City for many years and has been a professor at several seminaries.

CHARTER FACTS

- 1895 Every Michigan city was given the 4th Class Cities Charter.
- 1905 Charlevoix was incorporated as a city. It had to use the 4th Class cities charter.
- 1909 The State of Michigan would not permit new cities to use the 4th Class Cities Charter.
- 1910 Had Charlevoix been incorporated in 1910 it would have had to appoint a Charter Commission to frame its own Home Rule Charter. (Similar to the present Charter Commission)
- 1918 Charlevoix attempted to adopt a Home Rule Charter...it lost by 20 votes.
- 1974 The Charlevoix City Council gave the people the right to consider having a Charter Commission drawn up a proposed Home Rule Charter.
- 1975 Charlevoix voters elected members of the Charter Commission.
- 1977 July 12th The voters of Charlevoix should vote YES for a new charter made by our own chosen fellow citizens. When Charlevoix was incorporated under its present charter it was small village with an annual budget of $50,000.00. Today's Charlevoix budget is $2,800,000.00 but it still struggling along with the 1895 charter. Homes, schools, hospitals, transportation and communications have been modernized. Why not modernize our city government, Today it is a big business.

Michigan was second only to California in the number of fishing licenses, tags, permits, and stamps sold during 1976, a report from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service shows.

Some 1,254,682 fishermen bought over 1.6 million such licenses at a cost of $8.6 million. Of these licenses, over 1.3 million went to residents of the state and 287,000 to non-residents.

Michigan was also high in the number of hunting licenses sold in 1976. A total of over 945,000 hunters bought over 1.2 million tags, permits, and stamps. Residents bought 1.2 million and non-residents, 26,000.

Nationwide, a record 60 million Americans spent close to $218 million on State hunting and fishing licenses in 1976.

"Both figures are record highs," Director Lynn A. Greenwalt of the Wildlife Service says, "and they show that Americans continue to find hunting and fishing major pastimes." One of every five Americans enjoys the outdoors this way. The figures represent an increase of $25 million in State sales throughout the country and 500,000 in license holders over 1975.

Penny isn't worth a red cent any more

By PAULA HOLMES

The penny isn't worth a red cent any more.

As inflation skyrockets, increasing the cost of most everything, the value of the copper piece is plummeting until it is worth almost nothing.

Practically gone are the days of penny nails, penny candy, penny postcards, penny ante and those penny items in the "Five and Dime."

To find out exactly what a penny is worth these days, the Courier surveyed Charlevoix merchants to find out what is in going for a cent.

There were, of course, some obvious things. One cent will buy 12 minutes on the parking meter.

And a penny will still buy a piece of candy. In fact, at the Wharfside Market, there are two brands of penny candy.

"When I heard about them, I almost died of shock," Mike Greeley, co-owner of the store, quipped. "They're hard to find."

Greeley said most of his penny candy customers were in the 8 to 12 year age bracket.

The Candy Dock also had penny candies in its stock.

"Many of our hard candies sell for a penny," Gretchen Olson, clerk at the store, said. "And you can get a penny's worth of candy we sell by the pound."

Miss Olson said a lot of people come in the store looking for penny bargains. "People come in all the time and ask what they can get for a penny," she said. "Sometimes it's kids and sometimes it's older people kidding around."

Oleson's Variety Store also had one cent candies for sale but the store was completely out of stock when the Courier visited it. A clerk said the sale of one-cent candies were made to everybody.

Investigating further in the food area, the Courier found that the Village Milkhouse had cookies for three cents.

"I guess that's the lowest price we have," Debbie Kujawa, co-owner, said. "Oh, wait. You can have a penny's worth of anything from the deli case."

At Boags Bakery, the cheapest item was a cookie for nine cents.

A visit to Bridge St. Hardware resulted in the discovery of a wealth of items that you can still buy for a penny. For one red cent, you can get 28 finished nails and two of certain types of washers. Other washers cost a cent a piece as does one yard of fishing line.

In the two to three cent range a person can purchase sinkers, hooks and electrical twist connectors, Dave Hand, owner of the store, said.

Gum balls were the only things for sale for one cent at the County Seat General Store in the Market Mall.

"Poor kids these days," Bert Curtis said. "Hardly anything costs a penny anymore."

A piece of wire goes for a penny at Charlevoix Floral in the Market Mall. "There's just not much you can get for a penny any more," the clerk said apologetically.

"Sales tax," the clerk at Dahlquist's replied when asked what could be bought in the store for a penny.

These days are long gone," a salesman at Cass Supply said.

"I don't think we have anything for sale for a penny," Elaine Tompkins of the Chelsea Cloth Shop, said. "But the advice is free."

"And we'll give you the time of day for the same price."

field onto your pennies, folks. They may be worth something as collector's items someday.

BONNIE HAND displays a handful of finishing nails that can be purchased for a penny.

JEAN MILLIGAN pours some one-cent gum balls into a sack for Gert Curtis.

City ponders McSauba changes

To improve Mt. McSauba or not to improve Mt. McSauba. That is the question before the Charlevoix Common Council.

Charter vote next Tues.

A special election on the proposed new charter for the City of Charlevoix will be held July 12.

The election is being held to determine whether city residents would prefer to operate under a new home rule charter and city council-manager form of government as is being proposed by the Charlevoix Charter Commission, in the newly written charter, or if the city residents would like to remain under the Fourth Class City Act which it has operated under since 1905.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Charlevoix City Hall on State Street. Absentee ballots for the election can be obtained at the city clerk's office in city hall until 2 p.m. Saturday.

The Charlevoix Courier will be published one day late in order to bring its readers the results of this important election.

The city was recently awarded a $7,800 grant from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for the construction of a multipurpose building, skating rink and hockey rink at the recreation area. The federal grant must be matched with city funds.

But the council isn't jumping at the chance to use the funds. The question of even accepting the grant has been placed in the Recreation, Public Building and Planning Committee, chaired by Alderman Joe Morris, for further study.

According to Morris there are several questions council wants answered before it decides to go ahead with improvements at the recreation complex north of town.

"One thing we're looking at is the cost of maintenance," Morris explained. "We want to keep the building and other improvements from becoming something that hangs around the city's neck. We want to insure that it won't be a financial burden in the future."

City Recreation Director Dwight Boss estimated that in addition to the heat, electric and maintenance costs of the multipurpose building, an additional city employee would be needed to man the rink during the winter.

Morris said common council is also concerned that the recreation complex is outside city limits and cannot be paired by city police and that the complex is located away from the core of the city and is not readily accessible.

Another underlying concern that council has about the entire city recreation program and not just the Mt. McSauba complex, is that many non-city residents are using recreation facilities without paying any tax dollars toward the support of the program, Morris said.

"The amount of money spent on recreation for noncity people is considerable," Morris said.

Morris said his committee is working closely with the Recreation Commission composed of Max Novak, Laurie Murray and George Lusk to determine how city residents feel about the program in general and about the Mt. McSauba area improvements.

"We do have some time before we have to definitely decide about the plans for the area thoroughly."

"The city is not trying to make money off its recreation programs, but we do want to make it so we don't get burned either," he added.

Recreation director Boss said he thought most of the problems common council is considering could be overcome. Boss is concerned that if the city doesn't accept the funds, it may never get another chance.

"We've got the funds now, if we turn them down, I feel it will be harder to get any money in the future," he said.

Hobby fair slated for Saturday

The ninth annual Lakeside Hobbycraft Fair will be staged in East Park Saturday. Jacquie Merita, executive director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, has announced.

So far 78 entries had been received and others were expected before the deadline on Friday.

Featured in the fair, the first major event to be held in East Park this summer, will be a wide array of hobby-type entries from collector's items to gift items.

In announcing the event, Mrs. Merita said that many new and different hobbies will be exhibited this year which should make this the most exciting event to date.

The exhibits will be on display in the park from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Little signs lead to big things for Ms. Alden

By PAULA HOLMES

It's hard to get lost in the offices of the Charlevoix County Building Department.

Everything in the office is well marked with poster-sized signs, neatly-lettered signs tell visitors what the office hours are, what codes are in effect and who to make the checks out to.

Others signs with fancy letters and artistic borders offer statements of policy and advice to visitors of the building department.

"This office runs on the 'Hplan,'" one sign announces. "We are here to Help not findler or Harass."

Another sign advises, "Life is hard by the yard. By the inch it's a cinch."

The creator of all the signs is Swanee Lee Alden, clerk-typist in the department, who got her start in sign and poster making as a child in Erie, Pa.

"I was quite sick when I was younger (with rheumatic fever), so instead of taking gym classes I ended up in art classes," Ms. Alden explained.

After several years of art classes, she found herself making posters to advertise high school events, painting portraits and lettering diplomas.

She continued her drawing following graduation from high school and took some additional art classes, too. She began designing her own Christmas cards and it was only natural that she would make signs to decorate the building department office.

"I got the sayings from newspapers and magazines and sometimes I just copy down things people in the office say," Ms. Alden explained.

From those little signs in the basement office of the county department have come big things for Ms. Alden. She now spends some of her free time moonlighting in the sign pointing business.

"I more or less got pushed into it," the mother of three said. "People would see the signs in the office and then ask me if I would do things for them."

During the three and one-half years she has lived in Charlevoix she has designed a crest for the Grey Gables, painted names on boats, learned sides of trucks and designed a flag for the City of Charlevoix.

One of the bigger assignments Ms. Alden has had is the Syfer's Marina sign. The sign was 50 feet by 8 1/2 feet and it was located 30 feet in the air.

"The boards were already erected on top of the building and they didn't want to take them down," the sign painter explained. "So I painted the sign up in the air. I had to bend sideways and bend upside down."

Shades of Michelangelo.

"I planned out the sign with the adding machine before I started it," she explained. "And then with a yardstick and pencil I drew in the letters. They were 6 feet by 3 feet."

"I always put something of my own on the signs," she said with a giggle. "I made the apostrophe in Syfer's a sailboat."

Currently she is repainting the sign for the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and she is painting 2 feet by 4 feet advertising signs for the new Charlevoix Township ball field.

While she enjoys the sign painting and poster making, Ms. Alden likes drawing pictures, too.

"Art work comes from here," she said pointing to her heart. "Something is there that is a mystery. You have to feel it."

"You have to love what you are doing."

SWANEE LEE ALDEN displays some of the art work from her sketchbook. The signs she makes for the building code department have drawn attention to her artistic skills.

City Charter

Regarding the new City Charter: If the Fourth Class City Act under which Charlevoix (and 16 other cities in Michigan) operate is so great, why is that type of city government being phased out by 1979 and why is Mayor Hansen, at his own admission at the recent public meetings about the charter, taking credit for pushing the legislation to bring this about?

Treat City Like Business

At a recent meeting to acquaint the public with the new charter on which they will vote July 12, Dick Fochtman of the Charter Commission said that the operation of the city was "big business" stating it was a $3 million business. Mayor Hansen corrected his statement, saying it was a $60 million dollar business. Isn't it time that we start treating it as a business instead of operating it out of a cigar box? The new city charter would provide the proper checks and balances to operate as a business instead of a penny ante operation.

Use of Track

Can somebody please answer a question for me? Why is the track at the high school locked other than for athletes who have keys in the town of Charlevoix and why the taxpayers can't use the track when they want to. And why don't the city fathers in our community please do something about the parking in downtown Charlevoix. It has gotten completely out of hand in the last few years. Thank you very much.

East Jordan suits attorney just fine

By PAULA HOLMES

"We have to, here in Little East Jordan, take our mail to the post office when we want it sent out," the businesswoman said energetically passing a stamp on the envelope corner. "It takes a lot of time away from work," the woman said mentally calculating the minutes lost going to the post office.

"But there is one good thing about it," she continued, a faint smile dancing across her lips. "When you go to the post office, everybody's there and you get all the scuttlebutt from town."

For Madeline Dinu, attorney at law, the postal service was just one of the many changes in lifestyle she faced when she decided eight years ago to exchange her suite of offices in Detroit's prestigious Penobscot Building for offices and an apartment in a converted gas station-diner in East Jordan.

Miss Dinu lives quietly in East Jordan, away from the hubbub of the city that once surrounded her, tending to her law practice, her garden and her office building.

She says she has fallen in love with the tiny town on the shores of Lake Charlevoix. And the attorney doesn't regret her decision to leave Detroit and a law practice of 21 years to start from scratch in a town with a population that is a mere drop in the bucket when compared with that of her former home.

For Miss Dinu, business and life are busier than ever in Northern Michigan. The attorney decided to move north on the advice of her physician.

"I was living in downtown Detroit and breathing all of that pollution," the woman explained. "Finally my doctor, after taking care of my sinuses for some time said the only thing left was surgery or moving to state where the air was fresh."

"It took me two years to make a survey and find a place to move to," she said. "You don't just move your law practice."

Finally after visiting communities on the east and west coasts of the state, Miss Dinu began researching communities in the center of the state. She was driving down M-66 with a friend when she saw East Jordan across the lake and was charmed by the town.

"My sinuses opened up that first weekend, but I thought it was just a fluke with the weather," the attorney recalled. "By the fourth weekend I had decided to move to East Jordan."

Miss Dinu has never heard of the town before she opened her practice there on April 1, 1969, and neither had most of her friends.

"They asked me what I was going to do in the boonies, but I found myself going every night," she said.

"My office is open six days a week. I have to keep it open on Saturdays because there are a number of people from down below who want to tend to legal matters when they get here."

"I thought I was going to slow down here and take things easy."

While the pace may not have changed, the nature of her practice has. Miss Dinu has gone from being one of the foremost experts in the field of aviation law, and from a position as assistant attorney general for the State of Michigan, to a general practice of will writing, property matters, contracts and foreclosures.

But the changes haven't phased her a bit.

"I love law, all of it," she explained. "I read law like some women read women's magazines."

The attorney said she enjoys the closer relationship she had with her clients in Northern Michigan.

"My clients are much more apt to remember me," she said smiling. "If they are farmers they will usually bring me produce when they are in town. There's a much more personal feeling between attorney and client here."

"When I took my oath I said I would use my profession to help people, not as a money making proposition. And that's what I've tried to do, help people."

July 4th celebration worth contemplation by American citizens

There's really nothing special about the 201st of anything, including the 201st birthday of our nation. No great celebrations took place this year. None even came close to matching the gala affair that marked the bicentennial.

But this year as Americans everywhere recover from the celebrations they did hold on the Fourth of July, they should remember that the real significance behind the symbolic 201st July 4th celebration is that this is still a free nation.

And the people in it are free to live as they please, to think as they please, to say what they please and to write what they please within the constraints of not infringing on other people's freedoms.

Such rights are so ingrained in the political system of this country and in the minds of its people that they are often taken for granted. As Americans lit their fireworks and attended their traditional picnics last weekend, most of them probably did not give serious thought to the meaning of the holiday they were celebrating.

Americans should not take their freedom so lightly, however. While the country is not at war for the first time in many years, there is a struggle going on within its own borders.

Residents of this nation should be careful to guard against legislation and bureaucracies that are steadily eroding the base of our freedoms. The country should be careful not to become a nation of people that wants everything done for them.

American citizens should not allow the government to give all and be all. They should strive to maintain the government's position as of the people, for the people and by the people not of the government, for the government and by the government.

Citizens of the United States should pause and reflect on the words that Abraham Lincoln penned on July 4, 1858.

"We hold this annual celebration to remind ourselves of all the good done in the process of time, of how it was done and who did it and how we are historically connected with it."

Or as Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California remarked: "As we begin the third century of our country, we must recognize the importance of revitalizing our institutions and taking those actions necessary to restore confidence in the political process. I find it fitting to recall the words of the Spanish philosopher who said that patriotism is not so much protecting the land of our fathers as preserving the land of our children."

Letters to the editor

Dan Pohl's mom says thanks to followers

To the Editor: I'm not sure who to send this but it is just an open thank you to all the people around the Charlevoix and Petoskey area who followed our son Dan Pohl around in the Mich. Amateur Golf tournament this year. And especially the several who have thanked him every year since he started coming up in 1972.

We really appreciated their support and friendship

After winning in '75, Dan was so happy, but winning this year was really great, especially since it was Dan's first year to compete. So this was a happy time but also a little sad because we always looked forward to seeing our friends at the golf course.

Again many thanks for your loyal support to Dan.

God Bless You All

Gov. Milliken praises Charlevoix H.S. band

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was sent to Gary Stutzman following the Charlevoix High School band's performance on the Capitol steps during the Michigan Week celebration.

Dear Mr. Stutzman: Please accept my congratulations and appreciation for your excellent performance at the Capitol Complex during May.

The tradition of having musical groups perform in May is one of the highlights at the Capitol each year. Your participation this year was a positive addition to that tradition. The groups selected by the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association represented an excellence in talent in which Michigan residents can take great pride.

Again, on behalf of all state employees and visitors, let me thank you for giving us the opportunity to enjoy your talents.

Kind personal regards.

Sincerely,
William G. Milliken
Governor

"SURE... IF YOU STICK AROUND FOR ANOTHER 90 YEARS, YOU'LL SEE A FIREWORKS LIKE LAST YEAR'S BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION!"

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

If nothing else, Charlevoix's preppy charter has generated some pretty outlandish fictions on the part of its opponents.

One recent advertisement, for example, claims that water service charges will increase 15 percent and that sewer service rates will double if the new charter passes.

Furthermore, taxes will increase 90 percent under the new document, according to its opponents.

"Such claims are so preposterous that they don't really deserve an answer," I keep telling myself. "But what if someone actually believes them? Holy Moses!"

I don't know who came up with these figures, but they sure make interesting reading even though they were pulled out of thin air.

As one of the fellows who has worked on the proposed charter for the past two years, I cannot see how city government will cost any more under the new rule than it does under the current City Act. After all, we will have the same types of employees doing the same types of jobs for the same amount of money, allowing for normal inflationary pressures.

In fact, there should be some economies with a more streamlined form of government patterned after the business corporation. We will save whatever back-pasting and lack of delegated authority have cost us in the past.

The proposed charter also will give city taxpayers a better idea of where their money is going. Each fund—electric, sewer, water—will generate only enough revenue to pay its bills, and provide for maintenance, normal expansion and emergencies. These separate funds will pay their own way and nothing more. Year-round residents will not find themselves kicking into general city coffers with their year-round utility bills. That money will come from a general levy on all taxpayers in the city, year-round and seasonal alike.

Furthermore, money you pay to run the City of Charlevoix via taxes will be deductible from your federal income tax. Today, tax dollars masquerade as utility rates and you don't get any break at all.

Members of the Charter Commission also have been taken to task for lowering the tax rate to 10 mills, rather than 15 mills provided in the Fourth Class City Act. Such a charge is totally irresponsible. The city has functioned very well under the 15-mill limit for the past 82 years and for one can't see any point in hamstringing future city administrations with a 10-mill or 12-mill limit. Petoskey, as you know, has a 10-mill limit and must draw general fund monies from its utilities.

As a card-carrying penny pincher, I resent the implication in recent ads that members of the Charter Commission are among the last of the big spenders. Look at it: A car dealer, a civil engineer, a recently retired hospital orderly, a retired shop foreman, a community chest representative, a dentist, an attorney, a newspaper flunkie. We all work hard, or have worked hard for our retirement pensions, and certainly aren't about to squander public funds for unnecessary government frills.

I cannot speak for my colleagues on the Charter Commission, but readers of Clockwise over the years know that I wouldn't—no, couldn't—support any change in city government that would cost one cent more than I am now paying in municipal taxes. And I support the new charter 100 percent.

Of course, some of the charges leveled by the foes of change are tricky. Because you have assessed too much either in taxes or utility rates in the past, the city has acquired a fat bankroll of surplus funds—money that should be drawing interest in your private savings account this very minute. Because of this reserve, the city this year has rolled the tax rate back to five mills, which, admittedly is one of the lowest rates in the area.

However when the reserve is used up, your city tax rate will have to go up, regardless of the form of government, if city services and expenses remain the same.

If it Fit

The Bird beat the Yankees recently, but that's not all he did.

He also made it possible for my wife to record every blow landed in a magnificent orgy of butt putting.

Through the years, Pat has seen the beginning of many of these orgies, but this was the first time I allowed her to stay to the very last end (that isn't redundant, Danny, it's a pun).

Most of the time I am fairly rational human being. I know it is silly that this nation makes idols and millionaires out of centerfielders and quarterbacks. I know it really isn't important who wins the World Series.

Finishing peace in the Middle East, or curbing unemployment, or erasing racism, or feeding the hungry—those things are important.

But who cares if the Detroit Tigers beat the New York Yankees? I do, Doctor, I do.

I can't help it. I'm addicted, as hopelessly and stupidly as the man who knows cigarettes will kill him but still puffs three packs a day.

I know baseball is a slow game, often dull, straitjacketed by stuffy traditions. But there are those moments of suspense, high excitement, sweet anguish...and those moments somehow make it all worthwhile.

I began when I was about 10 and my father took me to old Navin Field to see Goose Goslin, Charlie Gehringer and the rest. I've never gotten my first look at the green, green grass and the crack of the bat hitting the ball.

In 1945 I probably became the first soldier to re-enlist for a year simply to earn a 30-day furlough that took me out of Germany and put me near Detroit at World Series time. We went the Cubs in '76 games.

I am forever wondering whether happened to such unknown people as Skeeter Webb, Jack Wade and Cliff Bolton. I still love Hank Greenberg for moving to left field so Rudy York could play first base.

Just a few years ago I took my wife on a moving vacation to Cleveland to New York to Boston. In each town I exclaimed at the coincidence—the Tigers were here! Too! We went to the ball every night.

When we returned home, I told everyone we'd been on a second honeymoon. My wife said we'd been on a road trip.

...Speaking Her Mind

There's one thing I want to get settled here and now. In case you've been wondering, yes, I am still jogging.

Not a week has gone by since that fateful day when I took that first long, torturous jog through town, that someone hasn't asked that question.

I feel (naturally) that my appearance and the new bounce in my step (actually it's a limp from twisting my ankle tripping on a shoestring I forgot to tie one sleepy morning) would indicate to all interested parties that I'm still on a physical fitness kick, but evidently other people can't see any improvement.

And frankly, some days, neither can I. Each morning as I drag my weary body out of my nice, warm, comfortable bed, I wonder why on earth I'm going through the routine that usually just results in a red face or a twisted ankle.

In fact I think I would quit, but the dog won't let me. Each morning starting at 6 a.m. (that's when I used to get up) she begins giving me the cold nose to get me out of bed and onto the streets. She loves the jogging. So be it.

All this leads me to the point where I can tell you that I not only jog, but I have added another activity to my physical fitness program—tennis.

For several years I have wanted to learn at least the fundamentals of the game, so I seized the opportunity when the city recreation department organized lessons.

For those of you who don't play tennis, don't laugh. The game is not as easy as Chris Evert or Jimmy Connors make it look. It's amazing how that little ball can get by a big racket so many times.

Being determined to master the game, I have also spent many nights whacking balls at the backboard at the high school. And it has been very good exercise. I spend a lot of time bending over to get the ball off the ground or running around the backboard to chase some wayward shot.

Suddenly, just before my second lesson, my forehead shut came together and I began hitting almost every ball that dared come near my racket. Buoyed with hope that I, too, could be a Billie Jean King, I was off to the second lesson only to learn that there is another stroke in the game called a backhand.

While that may sound ominous, all it really is, is a backward forehand, which is what makes it so hard. I think it is a rather awkward stroke and it prompted one of my classmates to say that she felt like she was making some obscene gesture when she hit a backhand shot.

I think she's right. And I've got the feeling my hopes of becoming a second Billie Jean King may suffer a setback. Oh, well. There's always jogging and Jim Ryan.

The American people can—and do—put up with a lot of inconsistencies. They live in hope that someday there will be a standard battery sold that will fit everything from a camera to an electric football game...a one-size-fits-all sweeper bag...or a regulation bulb that will plug into any string of Christmas tree lights.

One of the things, however, that they are becoming quite militant about are the inconsistencies in labeling restaurants. This is clearly something that has gotten out of hand in this country with each business trying to outdo the other one in cleverness.

Believe me when I say the most pathetic sight I ever saw in my life was a frightened woman with her nose pressed against a restaurant door, following the outline of a little figure in a hooded skirt.

The restaurants were the first to get cute. In keeping with their decor, they decided to label their restroom door with the appropriate names for women and men. Thus, you had Señoras-Senoritas, Monseñors-Madames, Cowgirls-Cowgirls, Chiefs-Squaws, and Tarzan and Jane.

Some of the more sophisticated businesses came up with fictional characters like Samson and Delilah, Romeo and Juliet, and Scarlett and Rhett. As I said to my husband one night, "You've been to the restroom. Give me a hint. What am I looking for?"

"Mine was called 'General,'" he said. "Terrific! I'll try for Motors."

The cuties we could have lived with, but in recent years they've added a new dimension—the animal kingdom. Finding your restroom is like a romp through Disneyland.

I have literally lurked behind potted faked plants waiting to see who wags the backs and who wags the dogs, the heifers and the steers, the stallions and the mares, the chicks or the chickens, the pointer or the setters.

The other night, a woman rushed frantically back to her table and said, "Here's your dime back and let's go."

"I thought you had to go to LA," I thought you wanted to use the restroom," said her husband, puzzled.

"And I thought you had to go to LA to see the Rams, but that's before I found out I was a Ewe and that Rams don't need change, and let's get out of here and I'll tell you about it on the way home."

games I've seen in the last 40 years. But I was around for all those ultra-high moments in the world series years.

I remember when Floyd Giebel beat Bob Feller, and when Buck Newsome pitched both ends of a double header. I was not only there when Denny McLain returned from exile, I was also there when Schoolboy Rowe came back from Beaumont, Tex. I was in the third deck at Briggs Stadium that night in 1949 when Bob Lemon pitched his no-hitter.

I am forever wondering whether happened to such unknown people as Skeeter Webb, Jack Wade and Cliff Bolton. I still love Hank Greenberg for moving to left field so Rudy York could play first base.

all stood and screamed until Fildrych came out and took a bow.

That's what the Bird has done to me. Usually I begin edging toward an exit when the last inning begins.

Before the last out is on—the scoreboard, I am tramping people to get to my car and beat the traffic.

But there I was, hanging around just to see that skinny kid tip his cap. It would take me 2 hours to get out of the parking lot, but I didn't care.

It was great for my wife.

Pat has been forced to sit through many dull ball games. Long ago she began relieving the boredom by counting how many times the players congratulated or consoled each other by swatting each other's families.

Up until Monday night, she had unofficially awarded the butt-putting championship to the 1969 game when the Tigers clinched the pennant. The number was 246.

The Bird furnished Pat with her first look at post-game butt putting. She was ecstatic. The Bird alone gave out 15 pats and received 42 in return. The new record is 1,056. Anita Bryant would have had a fit.

Onward and Upward with the Bird.

Duerr comments

Do you really know what the proposed charter calls for? Do you think it means handing over the city to a manager (or "king") as some would have it to toy with as he will?

Or that your water bill will go up 15 percent? Your sewer rates double? Your taxes climb 90 percent? (That might have been left in our pockets, as taxpayers and ratepayers) shows good financial management?

Now, what does the proposed charter really set out to accomplish?

First, to give you more real power as a voter. And closer ties with all six council members who'll be making plans, setting policy, adopting budgets, deciding on tax and utility rates, and generally exercising the ultimate authority in the directing of our city government for years to come.

Your ward will go on being represented at all times by two of our fellow residents—but election will be at large. Each year you'll vote for the candidate you prefer in each of the three wards—the other two as well as your own. So you'll have all six candidates to choose from in each ward, and the winner will be the one who is the more acceptable to the city as a whole. Ward jealousies and bickerings will become very undesirable in council deliberations. And it's about time.

Now what about the city manager? Well, he'll work for and carry out the policies of the council. Good organization requires that he have authority enough to match his responsibilities. So the charter provides that neither the mayor nor individual council members shall deal directly with or give orders to those subject to the manager's supervision or dictate their appointment or removal. If we're going to demand that the manager skillfully perform his duties, we're going to have to honor his authority to do so without interference.

Does this mean we'll have a new "king" who could "cement his job for life"? Anyone should know better! The delegation of authority to the manager is only enough to permit him to carry out the policy decisions of the council. The council dictates the terms of his employment and the details of his job description. He won't be hired for any set length of time and he can be promptly suspended and removed by a majority vote of the council whenever they decide he's no longer performing satisfactorily. And such council action won't be subject to review by any court.

No, the manager won't have any kingly powers. And the council can quickly bounce him if he begins to assume any. But it's hardly likely to come to that. After all, city managing has now become a highly skilled profession, with recognized standards for qualifications and performance. The council will certainly use care and judgment in screening applicants and picking the one most likely to work most effectively in translating council policy into everyday operation of the city. As a career professional, with his reputation as well as his paycheck always on the line, the manager will hardly want to defy the council. Anyway, he can't.

What about taxes and utility bills? The charter provides that utility rates be set to cover only attributable costs plus planned capital improvements plus a $75,000 emergency fund for each department (electric, water, sewer). This, of course, does not include, as has been suggested, anything as absurd as redepicting assets already fully charged off.

Thus, simply, each department will provide its services to city residents at rates closely tied to true costs. The intent is that each department operate with maximum efficiency at minimum rates, being neither subsidized by the general fund nor used by the general fund as a source of revenue in lieu of what otherwise would and should be forthrightly raised through taxes.

In the past, funds accumulated by the electric department have been transferred to the general fund. The charter commission holds that each utility should run on a break-even basis, with transfers into and out of the general fund being minimal. Taxes should be neither higher nor lower because of profits or losses in the operation of the utilities. As closely as practical, rates would be adjusted to maintain break-even results.

Moving to this basis would, of course, require some temporary readjustments. But, since, taken overall, the total cost of all the operations would be the same, there wouldn't be any difference in the total amount of money that the city would have to raise for the year through taxes and utility bills.

The foregoing has been inspired by only some of the misleading comments that's been circulating. A thoughtful reading of the entire charter will help you to judge for yourself the inappropriateness and perhaps the intent of such misrepresentations. But there may be other statements that you can't evaluate by reference to the charter. Don't just accept them; ask a charter commission member about them. You've an important decision to make—how you'll vote. Be sure you know the facts.

A parting word. The charter commission members expect to go on living as your neighbors...with whatever may be the results of this proposed charter. If we're goaded, we will have earned—and will have plenty of opportunity to experience—your disfavor. So we haven't looked lightly on our responsibility. We've put together a document that seeks to preserve, and yes, to re-awaken, our commitment to ideals that we cherish out of the past while making ready for exciting times to come. We find it somehow so appropriate that we were so engaged throughout our nation's bicentennial year.

TERRY and DEBBIE KUJAWSKI last some of the cheese in front of their deli case at the Village Milkhouse. The new owners are stressing wholesome, nutritious foods at the deli.

Wholesome, hearty foods trademark at Milkhouse

Wholesome, hearty foods is the trademark of the Village Milkhouse, according to new owners, Deborah and Terry Kujawski.

"We want our customers to receive something of value—nutritional value—for their money," Terry explained. "We're offering an alternative."

"We both stress quality and taste in our foods. We want to offer people things that are good for them and something a little different, too," Debbie added.

"When you go out to eat you can just about guess what will be on the menu and you usually eat the same thing," she continued. "We want people to look at our menu and say, 'Oh, wow, which one should I eat.'"

So what does the young couple do that is different? "We make all of our own baked goods," Debbie said. "None of the baked goods we use are brought in."

"And we do as much on the premises preparation as possible," Terry continued. "I don't like that pre-packaged stuff."

Terry specializes in soups which he makes from scratch daily. The couple does not offer any fried foods in their delicatessen - restaurant, either.

"There are other, healthier foods people should eat," Debbie said. "And you can get fried foods anywhere."

The Kujawskis carry their belief in wholesome, hearty foods over to their deli and dairy cases, too. The cases contain plenty of fresh fruits, natural fruit juices, milk, cheese and fresh meats.

The couple got into the restaurant business by accident. They began working in restaurants while they were in college at Northern Michigan University and Michigan State University. They really started getting interested in the field, however, when they moved to Charlevoix four years ago.

Debbie worked as a waitress and on the management side of the business and Terry ended up in the kitchen as a cook in various area restaurants.

"I've been cooking since I was big enough to see over the burners on the stove," he explained.

So together they figured they had enough knowledge to run a business of their own. The couple had been looking for a place in the Charlevoix area for about two years when they found the Milkhouse.

They closed the deal on May 4, Debbie's birthday, and began preparing for their opening day. In the meantime, Debbie gave birth to their first child, Walter Frank Kujawski III, but got back to work in time to participate in the opening June 18, the couple's wedding anniversary.

The Milkhouse is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week.

Charlevoix County families who will be setting out on vacation trips by car this summer will find that travel costs are considerably higher than in former years.

Inflation has had a marked effect on the prices of food, oil, and other necessities. The average is now $2.09 for an intermediate-size car, fully equipped, as against $1,662 in 1974.

Of this, $1,439 is in fixed costs, such as depreciation, insurance, taxes and license fees. Financing charges are not included.

The other expenses, covering gas, oil, tires and maintenance, depend upon how much the car is used. For 10,000 mile operation they total $580.

All in all, having an automobile today costs about 3.6 cents more per mile than it did three years ago.

Based upon this overall average, Charlevoix County residents are spending some $19,423 annually on the 9,620 cars in use locally.

Because of the increase in auto travel, gas stations in the area have been grossing more. Their receipts in the past year reached $4,086,000. Three years earlier they totaled $3,067,000.

Emergency room misuse expensive

Misuse of the hospital emergency room can be a costly mistake, according to Charlevoix Area Hospital staff physicians and administrative personnel.

And they are urging Charlevoix area residents and visitors to find out how and when to use the emergency services before the occasion arises.

"Hospitals all over the country are experiencing a general misuse of the Emergency Room," Hospital Administrator Richard Krueger explained. "This is costly for the patient and for the hospital."

"We are not trying to discourage the people who have an emergency, but the people who have some minor ailment that can be and should be treated by a physician in his office," Krueger said.

Blue Grass defines an emergency as something that threatens life—a bee sting, an automobile accident, chest pains, a stroke, an overdose of drugs.

"An emergency is when you need medical attention right now," Jo Ann Bennett, RN in charge of the Emergency Room, said.

She and other staff personnel agree that too many people fail to consult their family doctor before coming into the Emergency Room.

"A child may have an earache for several days and then start running a fever and his mother rushes him into the Emergency Room when she should have taken him to the doctor," Mrs. Bennett said.

"Some people come in just to have a bandaid put on," Dr. Plagge said. "We are trying to get people to exercise judgement. There are two primary care physicians across the street from the hospital, one in the center of town, and one in Boyne City."

"Primary care is in the doctor's office," Dr. Plagge says there are eight staff physicians on rotating call.

"An out-of-towner or anybody who needs medical attention for a non-emergency problem and doesn't know a local doctor should call the hospital to learn which doctor is on call, and consult him before coming to the Emergency Room," Dr. Plagge advised.

"If there is any question and the patient thinks he has a serious problem he should come directly to the hospital."

Every use of the Emergency Room raises hospital costs which in turn are passed on to overall patient charges, so it is cheaper for both the hospital and to a would-be Emergency Room patient to seek a physician's help directly.

"But we are always open and we will see anybody who comes through our door," Mrs. Bennett emphasized. "We never tell anybody we won't see them. We evaluate their problem and if it is an emergency we'll treat it. Otherwise we'll send them to their doctor."

"The emergency Room doesn't care whether you are rich, poor, white, red, yellow or black."

"The only thing we don't like to do is to deliver a baby," she said laughing. "We send mothers in labor straight to the OB Department."

"But we do take care of accidents, poison cases, burns—we even remove fish bones and we can get a doctor in here as fast as the injured or seriously ill person can get here. We work very closely with the coronary care unit and we are well equipped to handle heart cases," Mrs. Bennett said.

THE OLD MORMON PRINT SHOP
The old Mormon Print Shop has been dedicated as a State Historic Site on Saturday, July 9.

La. Governor James J. Dammann will perform the dedication ceremonies, assisted by A. J. Roy, founder of the Beaver Island Historical Association, who will make the opening remarks and introduce participants.

Dammann will be accompanied to the island by two staff assistants, Chuck Tyson and John Iagen. Some 17 descendants of James Strang will also be an hand for the ceremonies.

The Mormon Print Shop was built in 1850 and restored as a museum in 1969. The sign designating it as a State Historic Site reads:

"This building was erected in 1850 by James Strang and his followers. Here, during the 1850's, these Mormon dissenters published religious works and two newspapers, the 'Northern Islander' and the 'Daily Northern Islander.' Strang's group had settled on Beaver Island in 1846 after breaking away from the Mormons led by Brigham Young. In 1850 Strang was declared 'king' of his community which made up the majority of the population on the island. In 1856 Strang was fatally shot by two disenchanted followers. In the wake of the assassination, an angry mob from the mainland stormed Beaver Island destroying buildings and forcing the Mormons to flee. At that time, this print shop was ransacked. It later became a boarding house. Today it serves as headquarters for the Beaver Island Historical Society."

New science helps people keep entire body tuned up

MUSCLE TESTING is the key to diagnosis in kinesiology. The patient in this case the clinic's receptionist Lucy resists the push of Dr. Diane. If the muscle and organ being tested is weak, no matter how much resistance is provided the doctor will be able to lower the leg.

By JANNAGEL.

As many athletes know, total body balance can greatly affect their game.

For that very reason, kinesiology is now being used with team physicians in the Olympics, major league football and other professional sports.

So what is kinesiology and how can it give you the edge in a hot tennis match?

Gary and Diane Saks, a husband and wife kinesiology team practicing at the Alpine Clinic in Gaylord, have introduced the science to Northern Michigan residents.

"Kinesiology is a new science," Gary explained. "The first manual was published in 1943 by Dr. Goodheart. He developed a system of diagnosis and treatment of body weaknesses by tying together loose-ended theories from the chiropractic, medical and acupuncture fields."

"Kinesiology functions on the theory that organs are linked to muscles along acupuncture energy meridians," he continued. "Anyone with a sluggish organ will be walking around with a weak muscle or two."

"By touching the energy meridian for that organ, a corresponding muscle is affected. If the system is strong, the muscle is strong. If it is weak, it shows in the muscle."

"Think of the word kinetic—the dynamics of energy flow," Gary demonstrated the muscle testing diagnostics that are used to determine energy flow in a willing patient in the office.

The patient was complaining of constant tiredness. Gary had the person lie down and extend her leg away from her body. He tried to push the leg toward the patient's other leg, telling her to resist. She resisted and he could not budge her leg.

Then he told her to touch a spot on her abdomen while he was again pushing on the extended leg. This time, even though she was resisting just as vigorously as before, her leg moved toward her body with apparent ease.

"It's your adrenal glands. You're suffering from adrenal exhaustion," he said. "From the sports angle, adrenal exhaustion will be a problem. It's a sluggish organ, generally accumulative," he explained. "If increased demand is put on a weak muscle, which happens in sports, or house or garden work, the pre-weakened muscle may spasm.

"The soreness seems to disappear tomorrow or with rest, but it will come back eventually and sometimes it will be worse. This indicates the organ related to that muscle is also probably in need of treatment."

In short, kinesiology can find a trouble spot through muscle testing before it develops into a real problem. "The key to health and fitness," Gary believes, "is maintenance and prevention. We treat our cars better than our bodies. When a car is tuned up, it runs better and lasts longer. It's the same way with our bodies."

"This has recently been proven in tests," Diane added. "Athletes played before and after a kinesiology 'tune-up' and their games were consistently better after the tune-up."

Kinesiology treatment is usually acupuncture applied to spots affecting the ailing area. Nutritional supplements are prescribed when warranted.

Kinesiology not only deals with the muscular-skeletal system, but it incorporates all systems of the body. It's a technique currently being used in dentistry, psychology, medicine and chiropractic fields. It may well be the diagnostic tool of the future, Gary said.

the less affluent were soon to follow. By 1890 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pattern of shopping area.

Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed in saw-mills, flour mills, hardwood flooring industries, butter and cheese factories, and furniture-making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town.

Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and renting houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Island Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Grayw. Until the quaint little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Grayw by wagon and team.

In 1890 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1920's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new longed summer resorts spelled the doom of the delightful little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon.

Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnificent remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

DID YOU KNOW?

IF THE PROPOSED CHARTER FOR THE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX IS PASSED:

1. Water service charges will increase 15%. Why? Sewer service would double? Why? (perhaps two or more people should use the same bath water?)
2. Taxes will increase 90% (RIDICULOUS). Do you really think the people of Charlevoix are that dumb?
3. The Charter Commission has adopted many good things from Petoskey. In Charlevoix they keep the millage down but always increase the assessed valuation year after year.

The present mayor and council have increased the annual budget 1 million dollars in the last 2 years and lowered their taxes by 44%. (WOULD THOSE PEOPLE THAT RECEIVED A 44% REDUCTION IN TAXES PLEASE CALL SOMEBODY)

UNDER A BUSINESS MANAGED SYSTEM, CHARLEVOIX TAXES, WATER, SEWER, AND ELECTRIC COSTS SHOULD ALL BE REDUCED BY 10%.

FRANKLY CHARLEVOIX NEEDS A 1977 HOME MADE CHARTER AND NOT A1895 STATE MADE CHARTER. CHARTERS DO NOT SET UTILITY COSTS OR TAX RATES- ONLY THE MAYOR AND THE COUNCIL CAN DO THAT.

IF YOU DON'T KNOW - ASK VOTE YES ON THE CHARTER

PD FOR BY THE COMMITTEE FOR THE CHARLEVOIX CHARTER.

CHARTER FACTS

JUST A FEW OF THE GOOD PARTS OF THE PROPOSED 1977 CHARTER

- (A) Non Partisan elections. Less than 10 cities in Michigan are still using the party systems. Democrat versus Republicans. This will save thousands of dollars.
- (B) The city cannot sell or trade any park property or any land within 100 ft. of a body of water.
- (C) General election in November like 95% of Michigan cities (not in April). This will also save a few thousand dollars.
- (D) A Planning Commission. At last the future growth and beautification of our city can be controlled and not politically motivated.
- (E) A strong administration system controlled by the council and not subject to the whims of a strong, weak or unqualified mayor.
- (F) Board of Appeals. A permanent non-political board to hear zoning problems. No longer will a council person in their first month in office be considered zoning experts. Subject to neighborhood pressures.
- (G) The city administrator must plan 5 years in advance on capital expenses, not like the month to month process now used. The recent May Street sewer cost 1000% more because it was built 70 years after it was needed.
- (H) Transfer of Funds. Funds can be transferred within departments but not between departments. No longer will electric funds be used to rescue poorly managed other departments.
- (J) Many voters are un-informed or mis-informed, or totally lacking understanding anything concerning the charter. Do not hesitate to call any of the charter commission members for the correct information. One of them lives within a few blocks of you.

Many voters are un-informed or mis-informed, or totally lacking understanding anything concerning the charter. Do not hesitate to call any of the charter commission members for the correct information. One of them lives within a few blocks of you.

The younger voters of this city should become very involved in the charter election. This new charter is for the future. For the next several generations for your grandchildren too and into the 21st century.

This city valued at $65 million and with an annual budget of $2,800,000.00 should now be managed like a big corporation by a business administration expert with proper qualifications and other cities experience.

The most active opposition to the charter is led by a small group of persons who want to keep their political influence.

The Charter commission has worked for 24 months and had some 80 special meetings plus hundreds of hours of home work to draw up a charter that would benefit every taxpayer in Charlevoix. It is asking too much that each citizen of our town spend a half hour at his time to vote on the Charter July 12th?

VOTE YES on the Charter July 12th

Whew! Charlevoix survives rock concert

A CHICAGO fan waves a sign she made especially for the concert. Fans of all ages trooped to Castle Farms for the three-hour music fest.

By PAULA HOLMES

Chicago came, it saw, but it didn't conquer Charlevoix during its recent rock concert at Castle Farms.

More than 10,000 people jammed the area to attend the first rock concert of the season, put on by Nederlander Theatrical Corp., which also runs Pine Knob in the Detroit area, on the grounds of the former Loeb farm on M-66 Friday evening.

Middle-aged, young-adult-aged and teen-aged Chicago fans began trooping to the concert grounds as early as 1 p.m., but all in all the group was fairly orderly. The gates opened around 4:30 p.m.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said he didn't receive one formal complaint about the event. Lasater said he also believed the concert met all the provisions of the new Marum Township Ordinance governing public gatherings.

However, Lasater said he had received some comments from people saying they were upset because of the beer cans and some of the conduct of the fans.

The sheriff said there were some rough spots during the concert as far as his department was concerned, but things went as well as could be expected for a first time.

"There were more than 10,000 people at the concert and it seemed like they each drove two cars," Sheriff Lasater quipped.

"Actually there were only about 5,000 cars driven to the concert, but our highway system is not designed for that kind of traffic. It took us about two hours to clear the area of all vehicles."

"I had six officers on duty at the area from 6:30 p.m. to 2 a.m."

During that time there were two personal injury accidents and three reported property damage accidents, the sheriff said.

There was also one reported assault and two emergency cases. An injured workman was rushed from the concert grounds to the emergency room at Charlevoix Area Hospital and a Chicago fan was taken to emergency with severe abdominal pains.

The sheriff said 13 citations were also issued during the night, mostly to cars parking in areas designated as no parking spots by Marum Township officials.

"We made some mistakes, but we learned," Lasater said. "You just can't handle that many people and cars with six people."

Marum Township Supervisor Robert Potter said he had received only a few complaints about the concert and most of those were made on Monday.

"Several people were concerned that they didn't have the junk picked up yet," Potter said. "They said it is still all over the grounds."

Potter said there weren't any complaints about the concert itself.

"Oh, they don't like the idea of having the concerts, but I didn't get any complaints."

The township supervisor said as far as he knew the new ordinance governing public gatherings had been complied with during the concert. He said he was going to check with the health department and the sheriff's department to make sure.

"At this time I feel like the ordinance worked," Potter said.

The ordinance was passed last winter as a means of controlling the proposed rock concerts and protecting the township residents' rights.

MORE THAN 10,000 people crowded toward the stage at Castle Farms to get a better look at the rock group Chicago. The fairly orderly crowd was pleased with the performance of the rock group last Friday night.

Charter narrowly defeated

By PAULA HOLMES

Round one of the battle for a new charter for the City of Charlevoix went to the opposition.

Charlevoix voters narrowly defeated the proposed charter, which would have changed the community to a home rule city from a fourth class city. Electors cast 553 no votes and 510 yes votes during the special election Tuesday.

Only one of the three wards in the city completely supported the charter. Residents of the first ward cast 193 yes votes in favor of the new document and 77 no votes. Second ward residents cast 119 yes votes and 186 no votes and the third ward had 145 yes votes and 150 no votes.

Of the 194 absentee ballots cast in the election, there were 53 yes votes and 140 no votes. One ballot was sent back blank.

There are 2,481 registered voters in the city.

For a few minutes during the early tabulation of the votes, it appeared that the charter had been passed by the city residents.

"That's the best news I've heard since I heard that we were going to have a charter commission two years ago," Bob Clock, charter commission member, said reacting to the news.

However, a few minutes later it was discovered that the vote totals in the second ward had been reversed. The new tabulation showed that the proposed charter had been defeated.

"It was a good battle," Clock said reflecting on the narrow defeat, "but it's not over yet."

"I would call this skirmish a draw. Basically, I think we have a good charter and 510 people agreed with me."

Mayor Edward Hansen, who opposed many of the changes proposed in the new charter, applauded the defeat of the document by the voters.

"I think this was an intelligent vote," Mayor Hansen said in a phone interview. "I would hate to see us go into something that we don't know enough about."

"The people that were informed about the charter could give you good answers on it, but it was hard to inform the people, especially when they have to work all day. The moneychangers that run the city for 50 years can go out and feed us this stuff because they have more time."

"There were a lot of good little people working in each ward and that pulled us through," he said.

There are several avenues open to the charter commission following the defeat of the document in which they have invested two years worth of hard work, according to Richard Fochtman, chairman of the charter commission.

"We can meet and dissolve the commission, which I don't think we will do. We can meet and modify the document or we can meet and schedule another election on the same charter."

Fochtman explained from his bed in the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"I hope that we will try and hold an election at the earliest possible time," the commission chairman said.

Fochtman said he thought the earliest another election could be held was during the February primary.

"We've got to get input. We've got to find out what the people want," Fochtman said. "And I don't think we can do that in time for a fall election."

Under law, the charter commission is allowed three elections to try and get a proposed charter approved by the voters. The elections must be held before the three year term limit on the life of the charter commission expires. The time limit for the Charlevoix Charter Commission is up in April.

Ticket Pedestrians

Invariably, whenever I get to the light on Clinton Street ready to go out on Bridge, as soon as it turns green for Clinton Street traffic, the pedestrians begin to cross the street against the light. And I'm wondering since we have such an efficient police department that can ticket every car that is parked at a meter that doesn't pay a dime or fifty cents or whatever they are supposed to, why can't we have a man at that corner that will give some pedestrian tickets. I'm sure that in Cincinnati or St. Louis or Detroit or Dallas or Fort Worth or wherever, people don't cross against the traffic light and get away with it. And I'm wondering why every time the traffic piles up there the cars have to sit and wait for pedestrians.

Venetian Float

I was wondering if anyone has really looked at the Charlevoix Venetian float lately. I think it's getting pretty run down. I took a close look at it a couple days ago sitting outside by the street department and it really looked bad. I think it's time Charlevoix did something to improve its image in the Venetian parade.

Pleased with Answer

I would like to say how pleased I am that the School Board answered so promptly. It was better than they did for us when we called the school five times to complain about a bus driver who was cruel to the children and made them cry. So I would thank you for this kind of cooperation from the school.

School board to seek 1 mill in special September election

It's back to the voting booth for the Charlevoix Board of Education.

The board of education will seek approval of an additional 1 mill tax levy for the 1977-78 school year during a special election Sept. 12. A similar request was narrowly defeated in the June school election.

The board decided to seek the additional one mill for one year in order to balance the school budget and to meet obligations the board assumed.

Superintendent Gordon Van Wieren said that without the additional mill, the budget could wind up in the red.

Vincent Olach, business manager, said several areas of maintenance need immediate attention if the school district is to preserve what it has.

Heading the list is roof repair which will cost an estimated $50,000; replacing the exterior doors at the high school, $15,000; replacing classroom furniture, $1,500 per room; floor covering in the high school, $600 to $3,000 per room.

Other critical areas are audio-visual equipment replacement, $5,000; playground equipment for the elementary school, $5,000; sealing driveways at the elementary school, $2,000; paving the parking lot at the high school, $10,000; and classroom furniture at the middle school, $1,500 per room.

Olach said the 1 mill for one year would not meet the entire budget need, but it would help.

In other action, the board voted to fill three teaching positions. Kay Fiedorek, a Charlevoix High School and Central Michigan University graduate, was hired as a probationary teacher to fill a ninth vacancy at the middle school.

Catherine Britton was hired as a probationary teacher in the elementary school. Mrs. Britton has been in the school system since mid-term last year to fill a vacancy created by the death of Sandra Cinnamon.

Mary V. Gendle of Petoskey was hired as a part time special education teacher at the high school. She will succeed Pamela Smith who is on maternity leave. Miss Gendle is a graduate of Central Michigan University with a B.S. degree in education and a minor in recreation.

The board also voted to lease the Beaver Island Lighthouse to the Aaron Haase family from Pontiac. The Haases will maintain the property in lieu of rent.

The school district will allocate a minimal amount of money to underwrite the cost of repairing damage caused to the building by vandals.

The school board was advised that clear deed to the Don Brown property on Clinton Street has been received and the papers needed for the purchase of the property adjacent to the middle school.

Gov. Milliken to visit

Venetian Festival bigger, better than ever

Next week, for the 47th time, Charlevoix will brace itself for one of the biggest celebrations of the summer—the Venetian Festival.

And for the 47th time, the festival promises to live up to its reputation for four days of fun and excitement for local residents, people returning to Charlevoix for the holiday, and visitors, according to Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, and Bill Supernaw, director of the Venetian Festival.

"Nothing has changed that much for the festival this year," Mrs. Merta said. "It's not that different, it's just that it will be bigger and better than ever, but that describes it," Supernaw said.

A highlight of this year's Venetian Festival will be a visit by Gov. William Milliken. Milliken will serve as parade marshal for the event scheduled for noon, July 23. Following the parade, Gov. Milliken will be in town for a few hours to visit with area residents and visitors.

Another change in the program this year is the Venetian Pageant of Drums. This year there will be competition between the six corps that will be participating in the program at 8 p.m. Friday at the high school stadium.

Groups—in the program—are: Sargines Windor, Guardamen, Midshipmen Drum and Bugle Corps, Bandettes, General Putnam's Men and the Entertainers.

Opening this year's festivities will be the Venetian Queen Pageant at 8 p.m. Thursday in the high school gym, and the Northern Shows carnival which will be in the city parking lot by Round Lake.

On Friday the pageant of drums will begin at 8 p.m. and the annual Charlevoix Venetian Fastpitch Tourney will also begin that day.

Activities will begin Saturday at 10 a.m. with the Doll and Dressing Parade followed by the Lions Club traditional chicken cook-out at 11 a.m. The Grand Venetian Street Parade will begin at noon followed by an open house aboard the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Sundew and entertainment in the park with the Midshipmen, the Charlevoix Music Theatre and the National Summer Palaestrum. The Charlevoix Junior Open will also begin at the tennis courts during the afternoon.

At 7 p.m. the Charlevoix City Band will perform and the Venetian Queen and her court will be introduced. The Venetian Yacht Parade will be held at 10 p.m. followed by the fireworks display.

Sunday will see the conclusion of the Venetian Festival with the finals of the annual fastpitch tournament and the junior tennis open. The carnival will also be in town for the last day.

ASTHMA

When the supply of nerve energy to the inter-related parts of the breathing apparatus is impeded, the resulting condition is known as "asthma".

Asthma sufferers know of the discomforts - the wheezing, coughing and difficulty in breathing - which accompany attacks.

Dr. Jeffrey Ricks

Breathing is induced by a continuous series of involuntary muscular contractions and relaxations directed by nerve energy impulses from the brain through the spinal column to the breathing organs. Any pressure or impingement which interferes with the proper flow of energy affects the breathing process.

The chiropractor, using scientific methods locates the source of interference and uses skillful chiropractic adjustments to remove the pressures and restore normal function of the nerves and the breathing apparatus.

The chiropractor, by gentle, proven adjustments, realigns the nervous system and allows nature to work from within to bring complete cure and lasting relief. Another Health and Life Article from the Office of:

Electric rates expected to rise in fall

Batten the hatches and get out the lanterns, folks, electric rates are expected to go up again.

Charlevoix Common Council approved an agreement between the Michigan Public Power Payers Association and Consumers Power Co. for a 7 percent increase in electrical costs.

The power company contends that the current rates it with a deficit of $1.8 million.

Mayor Edward Hansen explained that the power company originally had planned to seek approval of a 1 percent increase for the power buyers. However, following negotiations with the power buyers group, the power company agreed to hold the line at the lower level.

Hansen said the power buyers group expected the power company to apply for the rate hike on Nov. 10.

"If the hike is granted or not is up to the Public Service Commission," he said. "This agreement was made prior to the filing for the rate hike to preclude the need for litigation."

The power buyers and the power company recently ended 15 months of litigation over a rate hike by the company. The litigation resulted in a $47,000 rebate for the City of Charlevoix. However, more than $200,000 was spent by the power buyers group during the litigation.

In other action, council also approved a variance for a front yard setback at the Clayton Scott residence at 402 Michigan Ave.

The Scotts would like to construct a new brick stairway up to their home. However, the changes in the stairway construction involve encroachment of the front yard setback.

After deliberating in a session of the Zoning Board of Appeals, it was decided to grant the setback.

Council also agreed to apply for a parade permit for the Grand Venetian Parade at noon July 23 and to allow the carnival rides to be set up in the Clinton Street parking lot.

Previously the carnival had been set up in Kautsky's parking lot on Hurst Street but due to the construction of a new office building on the lot, the carnival had to be moved.

Council also inquired about the state of road paving in the city. The group asked City administrator Allen Sandberg to prepare a suggested list of streets in need of paving for the next meeting.

Commissioners to meet on county business

Summer jobs available for teens from DNR

There will be some summer jobs available for local boys and girls from 15 to 21, according to State Sen.-Robert Davis.

He has announced that a bill recently approved by the Legislature will enable youths to begin work shortly on conservation projects on public lands. Age is the only qualification set by the Legislature.

"The bill appropriates $5 million for this special Youth employment program which will last for up to 10 weeks," Davis says. The money is allocated to the State Department of Natural Resources.

60 Halverson descendants gather for family reunion

More than 60 descendants of the Sammel and Mary Halverson gathered recently for a long-planned family reunion.

The event brought together five remaining daughters from among their 12 children, 10 of whom reached adulthood. Gathering for the reunion were Mrs. Richard (Alma) Fairweather of Clive, Mass.; Mrs. Earl (Gertrude) Gillette of Grand Rapids; Mrs. Wayne (Helen) Belding of San Carlos, Calif.; Mrs. Frederick (Irene) de Castro.

The family enjoyed a dinner and reunion at the American Legion post home and the following day a picnic at the Ironton cottage of Mrs. de Castro.

City band opens play with a toot

It was a comfortable Thursday afternoon. Clouds and rain had threatened all day, but suddenly they cleared for the Charlevoix City Band's first concert of the season.

The band, some 30 members strong, played for a delighted audience of more than 100 Charlevoix residents and visitors ranging in age from two to 82.

Concerts will be held at 8 p.m. Thursdays in East Park.

MUSIC BY THE city band held this little girl's attention throughout the evening concert.

Accompanying her at piano is another performer, Carmen Cavallaro.

Dinner theater brings back favorites

JAN WADE LITTRUP sings her version of "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," during a presentation of the Charlevoix Music Theatre at Grey Gables.

Accompanying her at piano is another performer, Carmen Cavallaro.

You've been humming your favorite tune from a Broadway musical all day long and you'd love to hear it sung professionally, but you just don't want to sit through the entire show.

Charlevoix Music Theatre has just the thing for you, an all new program called, "Broadway's Best."

"The program is the story of Broadway in song," Producer Larry Brooks explained. "It's a musical revue of 50 years of Broadway's best."

The music theater brought back four of its top performers, Jon Wade Littrup, John Hale, Paul Kerr and Carmen Cavallaro for the opening weeks of its season at the Grey Gables Inn dinner theater.

The program, which includes such favorites as "If I Loved You," "Knowing I'm on the Street Where You Live," and "If I Were a Rich Man," is designed to set your feet tapping and hands clapping.

Other songs come from such musicals as Showboat, Carousel, Music Man, Oklahoma, South Pacific, My Fair Lady, Guys and Dolls, West Side Story, Fiddler on the Roof, Godspell and Hair.

Brooks said the dinner-theater program will change every two weeks as new performers in the Charlevoix Music Theatre company come to the area to perform their favorites for area residents and visitors.

As the show changes, certain key songs will remain, Brooks said.

PAUL KERR and John Hale cut up while singing "There is Nothing Like a Dame," from the Broadway hit "South Pacific."

"We hope to get people performing songs in the revue that they have actually done in the musical," he said. "They can give the song a different feel."

The music theater will be performing Wednesday through Saturday nights until Sept. 3. Performances start at 8 p.m. and reservations can be made by calling the Grey Gables Inn.

The Michigan Income Tax Law allows certain homeowners to claim a deferment on their Summer Taxes.

A person who is a Paraplegic, Quadriplegic, Senior Citizen, Eligible Veteran, Eligible Widow, or Blind, and who for the prior taxable year had a total household income of $10,000.00 or less, may, between June 1 and the time the tax would otherwise become subject to a penalty for late payment, defer the Summer Taxes until the following February 15 by filing with the Treasurer an intent to defer the Homestead Property Taxes which are due and payable in July without penalty or interest.

Applications are now available at the City Treasurer's Office which must be filed before September 15, 1977 to allow deferment until February 15, 1978.

Dairy Queen freezes undefeated Kusina

PAM PANSEL and Peggy Kusina, players on Kusina Motors team, double up for this out during the Dairy Queen Kusina Motors match. Dairy Queen put the freeze on the previously undefeated Kusina beating them twice last week.

The game of the week in the Charlevoix Women's Slo-pitch League was between the two undefeated Kusina Motors and Dairy Queen.

Dairy Queen emerged victorious in the hard-fought battle with a 10-9 score. Dairy Queen hurler Cindy Kitley let up 13 hits while previously undefeated Pam Pansel let only 6 hits go by.

Park dedicated to Fr. Charlevoix

Charlevoix now has a park commemorating its namesake, French Jesuit Father Pierre Francois Xavier de Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Area

Garden Club held dedication ceremonies in the Pere Charlevoix Park on West Dixon Avenue last week, presenting the mini-park to the city as a part of the park system.

ESTHER BLEHA, past president of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club, and Alderman Jeannine Wallace test out the new bench at the Pere Charlevoix Park on West Dixon Avenue as Wilma Stabnick, president of the garden club, watches.

The idea of a park dedicated to Father Charlevoix was suggested by Esther Bleha, past president of the garden club, as a community bi-centennial project. Garden club members and several Charlevoix residents worked for more than a year setting up the park and researching the history of Father Charlevoix.

The park, overlooking Lake Michigan, contains boulders and Liberty trees as well as two parks benches for those who would like to enjoy the beauty of a Northern Michigan sunset.

John Campbell designed and landscaped the park along with Mrs. Bleha and her committee consisting of Mrs. Edward Edwards, Mrs. Dale Glass, Mrs. Conrad Klooster, Mrs. Edward Lewand, Mrs. Hubert Padlock and Mrs. Gerald Stabnick.

Other members of the community assisting the garden club with the project were: Robert Close, Robert Winchester, Gerald Stabnick, Charles Bleha, Swanson Contracting and Medusa Cement Co.

Delegates picked for VFW meeting

Delegates to the state convention of the V.F.W. and Auxiliary were named at a recent meeting of the V.F.W. Auxiliary held at the post home.

Mrs. Arlene Staley and Mrs. Russell Goldstick were elected delegates and Mrs. Ruth Browne and Mrs. Mary Louise Novaty alternates to the convention.

The auxiliary of the V.F.W. is observing its golden anniversary this year. Plans for marking the event locally and for a visit to V.F.W. National Home at Eaton Rapids were discussed. The home is supported solely by the V.F.W. and Auxiliaries across the U.S.

The group also voted to make a contribution to the Ypsilanti State Hospital for the purchase of furniture.

Service families hold picnic

Service men and their families stationed at the U.S. Air Force Detachment in Bay Shore report that their annual picnic held recently at Whiting Park was a big success.

Several contests provided entertainment for all and prizes for the winners. Among them were Sue Stephens in the women's mail-driving contest, Laura McGibney in the women's horse shoe throw,

Following the business meeting at which Mrs. Rosemary Warner presided, members sorted clothing to be sent to the Holy Childhood school at Harbor Springs. Others worked on crafts and painted bird houses as a part of the Auxiliary's Ecology and Community Service program. They are to be given to senior citizens of the V.F.W. and its Auxiliary.

The Auxiliary continues to collect "Cents Off" coupons. Betty Crocker coupons and all types of trading stamps for the National Home at Eaton Rapids. Universal Code stamps are no longer being collected.

Earlier the V.F.W. and its Auxiliary had held a potluck supper for members and their guests.

The most popular children's event was the scramble for riches as $10 in coins rained to the ground.

The Air Force is grateful to the several area business people who helped make the picnic fun for all.

It's hard to imagine what more you could ask for, a panoramic view of Grand Traverse Bay from this newly redecorated three bedroom home with fireplace & water softener. Located in one of the north's most attractive developments, the sportsman will appreciate the availability of the 18 hole golf course, tennis courts, cross country skiing, Lake Michigan access & club house and proposed airstrip. Ideal for year 'round residence as a resort home, call today for further details.

Petoskey, Michigan

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun spreads its radiance near the waters, it is indeed lovely from the vantage point of the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands, the setting sun provides a spectacular show. The Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers and sightseers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all.

Very few white people had seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that late fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line.

On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting on the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset.

The metamorphosis of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small indian settlement on the margin of clear river, to a dynamic, busy village catering to the needs of sightseers and homesteaders, to a house of visitors, attractions and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Rooming houses for the best clothing were soon to follow. By 1870 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bay River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flour mills, hardwood flooring industries, butter leaf factories, and furniture making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town.

Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and rooming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Island Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Conway. Until the quaint little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and team.

In 1880 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains, run from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1920's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new fangled summer resorts spelled the demise of the old little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap and the steamers sailed off over the horizon.

Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnetism remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

Do Business Where Business Is Being Done

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Strange

Paula Potter weds Gary L. Strange

Arrangements of peonies and Canterbury bells and lighted tapers graced the altar of the Community Reformed Church for the July 1 afternoon wedding of Paula J. Potter and Gary L. Strange.

The Rev. Larry Groeters officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 150 guests. Mrs. John L. Boss, at the organ, provided the music for the ceremony, playing a program of traditional music, the processional and the recessional. She also accompanied the soloists, Eric Cherry of Petoskey, brother-in-law of the bride, and Marvin Shooks of Central Lake.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Strange of Ellsworth.

Potter gave his daughter in marriage. It marked the fifth time in 13 months he had escorted one of his daughters to the altar.

For her wedding the bride chose a gown of satapeau and Cluny lace fashioned with a V-bodice high ruffled collar, bishop sleeves with ruffled cuffs and an A-line skirt with a double flounce and chapel length train. Her fingertip veil was secured with a band of lace. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses, sweet william and baby's breath.

Amy Potter assisted her sister as maid of honor and her other four sisters were bridesmaids. They were Mrs. Eric Cherry of Petoskey, Mrs. Joseph Vogelheim of Grand Ledge, Mrs. Richard Miller of Spring Arbor and Mrs. Wilson Boss. They wore identical empire gowns of pink dotted swiss polyester knit styled with scoop necklines, full gathered skirts, cap sleeves and attached side string ties. They carried clusters of sweet william and baby's breath.

Brian Farrell of Ellsworth was his cousin's best man. Daniel Strange of Central Lake and Greg Strange of Traverse City, brothers of the bridegroom, Rick Donaldson of Alpena, brother-in-law of the bridegroom and Steve Grosse of East Jordan were groomsmen and ushers.

Mrs. Potter selected a mint-green gown fashioned with a lace overlay bodice and pleated skirt for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Strange, mother of the bridegroom, wore a sleeveless blue A-line gown with a gathered bodice.

A reception, given by the bride's parents, followed at the Fellowship Hall of the church. Mrs. Rick Donaldson of Alpena, sister of the bridegroom, attended the guest book. Mrs. Gary Drenth of Ellsworth, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Greg Strange of Traverse City, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, served the cake and Mrs. Daniel Strange of Central Lake served the punch.

After a northern wedding trip, the couple will reside at 731 Fitzhugh Drive, Traverse City. The bridegroom is employed by a Traverse City construction firm.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents on Friday evening.

Miss Merritt is employed by the Charlevoix Title Company. Osterberg, who is studying landscape architecture at Michigan State University, is working in that field this summer.

Miss Merritt graduated from South Broward High School in Hollywood and later attended Broward Community College. Osterberg is a 1972 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

The young couple plan to be married on October 22.

Islanders find pilots for air-evac plane

ST. JAMES - Three new pilots have been found to fly the emergency evacuation plane on Beaver Island.

Officials of St. James and Peaine townships had three pilots tested Saturday by James Janda, former pilot for the air evac plane on the island. All three pilots were proclaimed qualified to fly the Beaver Island Beaver by Janda.

The names of Wayne Chapman, Bob Haverman and Bob McLaughlin will now be submitted to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners as the new pilots for the plane, Joseph Martin, Peaine Township clerk, said.

The Beaver Island township officials took action to find new pilots for the air evac plane following receipt of a letter from William Welke and his sons, Paul and Mark, saying they would no longer maintain and fly the emergency vehicle.

The Welkes had flown and serviced the plane on a voluntary basis for the Beaver Island residents since the plane was acquired for emergency use on the island by the Charlevoix County Civil Defense Department in 1974.

In his letter of resignation, Welke cited lack of cooperation from the township officials as the reason for the decision to quit flying the plane.

"I'm tired of all the flak," Welke explained in a telephone interview. "It's a long, long story, but as far as I'm concerned they can get somebody else to fly the plane. I'd just as soon not have anything to do with it."

Welke said that politics on the island had been part of the problem during his operation of the plane. He said he was often harassed after he had used the plane.

"We were doing this on a strictly voluntary basis," he said. "They needed someone to fly the plane and we said we would. But they can get somebody else."

Martin said there had been some question by township residents and officials about Welke's use of the plane. He added that there was no love lost between Welke and the township officials.

"Whatever flak he got, he brought on himself," Martin said.

Martin said the township officials had acted quickly to find new pilots for the air evac plane because the residents wanted to keep it on the island.

"There are plenty of places on the island," Martin said. "If there had been an emergency while we didn't have any pilots, (for the air evac plane) people would have been able to get to the mainland anyway."

"It's just that we like to have the air evac plane, too," he said. "It's a community project and we want to keep it."

The plane was acquired under an excess property program by the civil defense department. The county commissioners paid the cost of buying the plane and transporting it to the island.

The island residents paid to convert the six-passenger plane to an air ambulance and they also pay for the insurance and maintenance costs of the plane.

The plane is utilized strictly as an emergency evacuation plane except when it is used for air and sea search and rescue by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The sheriff's department has control over the plane, Sheriff George Laaser explained. It is assigned to Beaver Island and controlled on the island by the two townships.

THREE NEW PILOTS have been found to fly the emergency evacuation plane on Beaver Island. William Welke and his sons resigned their positions as pilots for the emergency plane following a conflict with the St. James and Peaine township boards.

Concert Reaction

Well, our first concert's over and it's left behind the usual shambles of litter along the roadways as well as within the grounds of Castle Farms. I'd like to know who's responsibility this is going to be, and whether in the ensuing concerts we are going to have the same problem. I believe that Nederland should be the one to accept the responsibility of this kind of thing. We have bottles, we have cans, we have all kinds of mess along M-66, both north and south. It's a shame to have to have the whole community exposed to this kind of thing simply for that kind of an operation. Incidentally, that concert did not stop at 10:30 p.m. as was promised and how about ticketing some of the ones that make the litter.

Charter Vote

One would just wonder why the Charter vote was so close by actual vote, yet the absentee votes were all against and very few for, especially in the 2nd and 3rd wards????

Commends Charter Commission

I wish to commend the Charter Commission of the city for what I consider to be an outstanding job and service that they have performed for the citizens of this community over a period of the last two years. Their services have been uncompensated and they have presented to us for the first time an insight into our present form of government, its advantages and disadvantages and the alternatives which we can consider in permanently improving our form of government.

New charters historically do not pass the first time as the public must become interested and educated in government. I trust the charter commission will "go back to the drawing board," effectuate some compromise, continue with the educational process and resubmit a revised charter for people's consideration as soon as possible.

Questions Reason for Surplus

It is common knowledge that Mayor Hansen has been opposed to any consideration of adoption of a new form of government for this city since the charter commission was elected two years ago.

It impresses me as being strange that just prior to the charter election that it was announced that the city has a surplus of $750,000. It almost appears that this announcement was made to overcome the new charter by way of saying, "Look what great shape we're in. Why change now?"

What disturbs me, from a review of recent city budgets, is that money that had previously been budgeted for improvements for city utilities or purchases of new equipment was not expended when it should have been, thus a $750,000 surplus.

In my judgement, this surplus should have been expended for the benefit of the city as planned or returned to the pockets of the citizens from where it originally came.

I fear the surplus and our extremely low present millage rate, which the mayor used to overcome the passage of the charter is in fact a political football, and I sincerely hope that the city does not seriously suffer as a result.

On special apartment complex

Housing unit seeks in put from seniors

The Charlevoix Housing Commission is conducting a survey of senior citizens in the area to determine their interest in living in a proposed special senior citizen housing complex in the city.

Interested senior citizens are asked to contact the housing commission at city hall or send in a piece of paper with their name and address on it to the Courier expressing interest in the complex as soon as possible, Ralph McRae, housing commission member, said. (See coupon on page 12.)

The housing commission is attempting to secure funding from Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) and the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) through a special joint program, McRae said.

A market analysis of the area was recently conducted by a Big Rapids firm to determine the need for senior citizen housing. The interest survey the housing commission is now conducting is needed to help support the findings of the needs survey in the housing commission's request for funds for the senior citizen complex, McRae said.

The housing commission member said the proposed project would be similar to the senior citizen complexes in East Jordan and Boyne City.

"It will be 100 percent senior citizen housing," McRae said. "There won't be any low income housing mixed in with it."

"When you talk about low income housing, you're talking about people with incomes of $7,000. We're talking about people who live on social security with incomes of $3,000."

McRae said under the proposed housing project, senior citizen residents would pay no more than 25 percent of their income for housing. If 25 percent of the senior citizens incomes does not cover the rent, the rent payments will be subsidized by HUD.

Under this program, FmHA will supply the funds for construction of the building and HUD will supply funds for rent subsidies," McRae said.

McRae said under the proposed program, the rules were not so stringent as far as the location of the senior citizen housing complex is concerned. One of the main problems with constructing a senior housing complex in the past has been finding a location that met all the requirements set up by the government.

Under past programs the Michigan Housing Authority has required that senior citizens housing be situated within 1,500 feet of a competitive grocery and with in 1,500 feet of a competitive drug store.

Running restaurant a family affair for Lila

By PAULA HOLMES

For Lila West, running a restaurant is a family affair.

It's been that way since she opened the Parkside Dining Room 44 years ago.

Lila West

And once again this summer, Mrs. West has opened the doors of the Parkside with some of her family on hand to help keep things running smoothly.

Her daughter, Charlene Pierce, manages the dining room while her son-in-law, Victor Pierce, is the chef. The Pierces have been helping Mrs. West operate the restaurant for several years.

Charlene is well-known among Charlevoix residents and visitors for her lavish outfits and the diamonds in her teeth.

A second daughter, Betty Boes, came from California to work as head waitress for her mother this summer. And that's the way it should be in a family restaurant, according to Mrs. West.

"I decided to open this restaurant because there was no place in town where families could go to enjoy a nice meal," she said reminiscing while standing at the cash register she has watched for 44 years.

"This one here has been waiting tables at the Parkside since she was 10 years old," Mrs. West continued pointing at Betty. "When she started she could hardly see over the tops of the tables."

"It's been interesting. I could have written a book if I had taken notes as I went along."

The Charlevoix native said many things had changed since she opened the Bridge Street restaurant, but her customers have remained the same.

"The people are the same. We have the same trade every year," she said.

"Except some of the people are grandparents now that were infants when I started here."

Things were rough when the 73-year-old woman first opened the restaurant. "I did all my own baking and then I would cook breakfast too," Mrs. West recalled. "Then I would run downstairs and start the roasts for dinner."

"I would get so tired that at night I would wake up and find myself down here. I was sure somebody wanted something, and I would walk in my sleep from the upstairs apartment to the restaurant."

At first Mrs. West tried to keep the restaurant open year around, but following one day when she made only $5 the entire day she decided to close for the winter.

Mrs. West owned restaurants in Florida and Arizona and ran them in the winter, but now she's gone into semi-retirement and just opens the Parkside during the summer.

"I'll always come back to Charlevoix," she said. "I'd be much a used if I couldn't come."

"It's just home here."

Fire damages Grey Gables

The Charlevoix Fire Department fought a blaze at the Grey Gables Inn for 90 minutes Monday night.

A fire started in the ventilation system for the kitchen range around 11:29 p.m., Ben Gill of the fire department, said.

Gill said the fire was between the double roof over the kitchen area and the full crew of 20 firemen had to cut extensive holes in the roof in order to extinguish the flames.

The fireman said the cause of the blaze is still under investigation. He also said there was no estimate of the fire, water and smoke damage to the roof and kitchen area at this time.

School Board awards bid to T.C. firm

The bid for the renovation and improvement of the playground area at the Charlevoix Middle School was awarded to a Traverse City firm, D & L Contracting, Inc., by the Charlevoix Board of Education Monday night.

The bid, the only one received, was in the amount of $22,500 and will include the construction of a new asphalt track, grading of the area on the Clinton side of the block, removal of a tree and a utility pole, installation of a new catch basin, installation of backstops, heightening of the existing fence, installation of gates over windows facing the playground, blacktopping other areas on the grounds and related work.

Plans for the utilization of the existing area were drawn up by Manson Jackson and Kane of Lansing. It was estimated the work would cost in the $32,000 area. When the D & L bid was only $22,500, the board voted to approve it.

Work is scheduled to begin in 10 days and will be completed by Sept. 1.

It was reported that windows for the middle school were being manufactured and their installation would begin shortly. This, also, is scheduled for completion Sept. 1.

Both projects are being financed by the funds generated by the levying of one mill for five years as approved by the voters last January.

Fire totals trailer, wipes out belongings of local family

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed a trailer home occupied by Swaney Lee Alden and her three children at approximately 10 a.m. Sunday.

The 17 x 60 foot trailer, furnishings and all the family's personal possessions, were completely destroyed in the blaze. Mrs. Alden and her children were at church when the fire was discovered and reported via CB radio to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The Charlevoix Fire Department responded to the call but were unable to save the dwelling which was owned by David Charbonneau, according to Fire Chief John Curtis. The trailer was insured but the fire company's possessions were not. Chief Curtis said. It was located on Srigley Road on the east side of Susan Lake. Efforts are being made to assist the family. There is a need for clothing, household items and furniture.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has offered to accept all offerings in behalf of the family. Mrs. Alden, who many people know as the secretary in the office of the Building Inspector in the city building annex, wears a size 14. The children are Christine, 12, Darbie, a girl age 7, and a boy, Jeff, age 6 years.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the needs of this family may leave their offering at the Sheriff's Department. If you have no way to get to this location, call 547-4461 and a member of Northwest REACT will pick up your contribution.

Volunteer Firemen

LEE MOERLAND, president of the Charlevoix Volunteer Fire Department, Clifford Riley, treasurer and Ooug Beigmann, demonstrate the emergency equipment called "Jaws" to City Administrator Allen Sandberg and Alderman Susan Eber. The volunteer firemen contributed $2,500 toward the $5,300 purchase price of the equipment. The funds were raised through the sale of raffle tickets which the firemen will be selling during the Venetian Festival.

Social Security increases bring $488,000 more here

For residents of Charlevoix County who are receiving Social Security payments each month, how much better will their checks be after July 1st, when an increase went into effect?

How much additional money will flow into the area during the next year, as a result? Based upon the latest figures from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, it is calculated that the new scales of retirement and disability payments will boost total receipts locally by approximately $244,000 during the remaining half of 1977. Over the next 12 months the total will be close to $488,000 more than in the past fiscal year. The new rates will continue until next July, when another adjustment may be made.

The current increase, amounting to 5.9 percent, is the third one that has taken place under legislation enacted by Congress. Its purpose was to compensate elderly and disabled people for increases in the cost of living.

To accomplish this, the pensions are adjusted upward on July 1st of each year by an amount equal to the increase in the Consumer Price Index during the previous year.

Biological station members see island as laboratory

By PAULA HOLMES
When people think of Beaver Island, most of them think of the "Emerald Isle," or of a vacation paradise.

But there are some people who think of the island as a giant biology laboratory.

These people are the students and professors at the Central Michigan University Biological Station, located on the east side of the island seven miles south of St. Ignace.

Each spring and summer, students and professors move to the island, which lies 32 miles northwest of Charlevoix in Lake Michigan, for a series of biology-related courses for undergraduate and graduate students. Two introductory sessions in field biology are also held for high school students from across the state.

In addition to the students taking formal classes, there are a handful of graduate students working on theses and professors doing research for papers and books at the station. Dr. Matthew Hohn, director of the biological station, said.

The CMU biological station is geared more toward research than to research Hohn said. "We get our budget from the university, we don't depend on research grants to operate the station," he explained.

The director said the station wasn't equipped to handle high powered research, other. However, besides the University of Michigan and Michigan State University biological stations, Central's is the only other facility operated like a biological station.

The university has owned the property on Beaver Island since 1959, but it has only been used as a biological station since 1964.

Hohn contends the biological station is one of the best places to learn biology. "There are better facilities here than at the main campus for field study," Hohn pointed out. "Here the students can go right out on the island and collect various specimens for their work."

"And they learn more here," the biological station director added a smile dancing on his lips and twinkling in his eyes.

"After all they're captive here. There's not too many places where they can go and there's not too much they can do on the island besides study."

"And if somebody doesn't show up for class, you know where you can go to find them and get them to class."

If anyone knows the advantages of living and studying at an island biological station, Hohn does. He has lived at one since 1969. From 1959 to 1964, Hohn worked at the Ohio State University Biological Station on Beaver Island in Lake Erie.

"My wife and I like living on an island," Hohn explained. "For one thing there's not so damn many people around."

Louise Beutner recalls bygone days

EDITOR'S NOTE: Like so many other Charlevoix area residents, Louise Beutner is a returned native. She was born in Charlevoix in 1906, the daughter of Charles and Mabel Bush, and lived in Charlevoix until the family—Louise, her parents, three brothers, and one sister moved to Ann Arbor in 1918.

Louise attended school there, including the University of Michigan, where she studied geology. After graduating from the University, she worked as a guide for the Santa Fe Railroad in the Pueblo country of the southwest, conducting tours of the old cliff dwellings and pueblos. Then she went back to the University, where she was an assistant in the geology department and where she met her husband, Ed, also a geologist.

Following their marriage, Louise and Ed went west to Safford, Arizona, in the Gila Valley, and then to Tucson for several years. Their next home was in the Upper Peninsula, where Ed was geologist for Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, and from there they went to Pittsburgh, where they lived in an old remodeled house "overlooking the Golden Triangle," the confluence of three rivers.

Louise and Ed returned to Charlevoix when Ed retired in 1972. She spends her time writing, sewing, painting, and fishing (she caught "a nice steelhead" this spring.) Louise remembers that her father was an avid fisherman in the Jordan River and thinks she probably inherited her love of fishing from him. The Beutners have two sons, Edward C., who teaches geology at Franklin and Marshall College, and Tom, who is at home.

Both Louise and Ed are active in the Charlevoix Historical Society. Ed was recently re-elected president of the group.

LOUISE BUSH BEUTNER

In the teens of this century the Charlevoix post-office was on Bridge Street, and nearly across from it was a brick building whose north wall, painted white, was used as a movie screen for audiences sitting on the grass of East Park on special Saturday nights. We children also went to the real theatre for serials on Saturday afternoons, paid for with a nickel.

I remember Marie Walcanp and Tony Moran in "Liberty," something about a submarine, so it must have been 1918. A subtle once told us to watch closely, see Marie's horse turn a somersault with her down the mountain. It did, but she got up, and the piano-player matched all the action.

I recall an oriental shop near the bridge, operating only in the summer. We rushed past it when the bridge whistle tooted for the swing bridge to open, but when we had seen whatever ship go through we reversed toward home on South Bridge Street, slowly. Then I looked in the windows of this store and through the door, seeing china statuettes of ladies in kimonos, hanging colored lanterns, teakwood screens, and furniture. I liked these things, but they wouldn't have gone with our beat-up golden oak, and I know they were expensive, too.

There was the Opera House right next to the Channel, almost too close to it, where the grassy slope is now. A few summers a man came there, exactly as in "Music Man," to produce a show. My star turn in one of these was to run across the stage in a white middy dress, chasing another girl, while the chorus sang "School Days."

A deep bass voice from the Channel meant that the "Manitou," black-bellied and graceful, was coming through, or the big white "Illinois." The "Illinois," Daddy told us, had run a race in 1907 with a schooner, both trying for an entry between the piers. Sail had the right-of-way, so the steamship took evasive action, beached herself on the shallows off the south pier. Tugs pulled her free, and there we were about 1915 at the railings, watching it and others. Sometimes voices of recognition passed between the ship and the railing crowd, sometimes only pointing when a stylish outfit on some passenger, usually a pretty girl, attracted notice.

Sometimes we watched from another station: my brother Chandler and I were creatures of the south pier, though we allotted some time to the old docks on the north side of Round Lake for the best perch-fishing. Those docks then were in bad repair, dilapidated relics of the old lumber trade, but we learned what planks were loose and liable to upend us, were able to say "Present!" when it was time to go home.

Daddy was an entrepreneur in lumber-dealing, we were always up or down, but I did have warm woolen coats, leggings, and caps. I was not a shivering little match-girl; the trouble was that my clothes picked up fish scales and other matter. Horse-drums were on the docks in those days, so at times I resembled a cross between something out of "Moby Dick" and a Tibetan herdgirl. Mother tried to remedy this, but it was sometimes too much for her, and one day a lady stopped me on the street.

"We have some good clothes in our missionary barrel this year," she said, "I wonder if your mother would like to pick out something for you."

I said that I didn't know, I'd see. I wasn't bothered, one way or another. All I asked was not to wear something I'd seen on somebody else. However, when I told Mother about this a flash spread from her throat up to her cheeks.

She said, "We'll see about that." I had to describe the woman, and I think later Mother contacted her in a way she remembered for a long time.

We had no mother interest in sunning, playing on the beach, and learning to swim, but we were on the piers a great deal, too.

The Lake Michigan piers were not of concrete as today. The south pier was a row of timbered pilings weighted in place by limestone rocks. The pier was low there, but we fished through the cracks, held as much by the mystery of the blue-green water and the rock crannies down there as anything else.

We learned to swim early, but probably not early enough, for had we gone off the Channel side of the pier the current might be enough to take us out to the big lake. Mostly we kept away from that side and kept our center of gravity low, hunching over the lines we put through the cracks.

One day we had a visitation. From the cubicle next to ours there swam a shape. It was feet long, with a blunt head and curly black whiskers. It was almost as large as the sturgeon they kept in the pool at the inn on the north side, but a different shape and almost black.

We moved ahead, plunked our lines down where it would have to meet them. Here it came, with silts for gills, we almost expected porpoises. Our worms bumped off its snout and threaded through its whiskers, but it took no notice.

We hiked for home to tell of this. Daddy said it was a Great Lakes catfish, wouldn't take a hanging bait if it hung there all day; it was a bottom-feeder.

We should have remembered Billy Miller in the winter of 1913. Lakes history records eighteen ships gone down in the November cold and gales. Ice along the shores rose in glassy summits or crystal caves, pushed into many shapes by the jousting of ice floes moved by the wind. Everyone said the Channel was frozen over, and it looked so.

Sometime beyond Christmas the landscape stayed the same, but temperatures moderated so that house-bound children bundled up, went out to play. I was nine years old, Chan about six, willing still to do what I told him. One day we walked across the bridge to the north side, turned left and walked along the street above the Channel to land's end, the slope below the Beach Hotel. We slid down, making grooves in the snow.

At the bottom up against the pier was a hill of ice and snow with a cleft in the top. We found a long pole and worked to make it stick in the cleft in the manner of the marines later photographed at Mt. Suribaya.

Directly across the channel was the Coast Guard building with its watch-tower. When we had succeeded with the stick we felt cold and hungry, and I saw my reason to go home the long way by the bridge; we could cross the Channel on the ice.

We slid down the pier-side ice, weren't halfway across when I noticed the Coast Guard man in the watch-tower. His face was red, his arms were waving, his mouth opened, but the wind took away his voice. But we could see he was pointing up and down the Channel, then in front of us. I saw there was a crooked stringer of jello-ice running through the middle that was darker than the rest.

I told Chan not to put his weight down hard, to run across. He ran, making deep prints. I did the same, but my foot at the back went down into cold water. I pulled it out with a wrench that sprang my tendons, flopped forward onto land ice.

The man was out of the tower and coming toward us through the snow, helped pull us up the side.

"You kids march to the station," he said.

We marched. In the office he stood us hard up against the radiators, and while our clothes steamed he talked.

"The Channel don't freeze," he said, "it's moving water, and that don't freeze. I've pulled 'em out when they come up in the spring—"

He went on like that, then he asked who we were.

A few years later John Kelderhouse, whose father was in the Coast Guard, let me climb the ladder to the lighthouse, to see what was inside. The huge lamp had red glass lenses, bright reflectors, and more heavy machinery to keep it rotating than I expected. I may be wrong, but I think the lamp was fuelled by oil; perhaps they considered oil wouldn't fall in emergencies.

About the Channel, I know the bridgetender has in recent years held his breath, seeing children on the ice of Round Lake in the spring, but I still wonder if Chan and I were the only ones ever to walk across the Channel right in front of the Coast Guard station.

THIS IS THE OLD Coast Guard Station, located on the Pine River Channel, in front of which Louise Beutner and her brother, Chandler, crossed the Channel on the ice.

Trap net fishing

At dawn, Ralph Cross runs the Colleen Sue through the Pine River channel to Lake Michigan to tend his nets. His son, Larry, and his father, Ralph Cross Sr., are his crew. Although Cross has fished all his life things have changed for the fisherman since the Department of Natural Resources outlawed gill nets two years ago. Local fishermen were forced to switch to trap nets. A different style boat was needed to handle these nets and for most fishermen it was like starting over. They needed new nets and a new boat if the old one could not be converted. Ralph designed and built the Colleen Sue at his home on Pine Point. This is her first year in service with power. Last year she was towed to the nets by another tug.

The Crosses have nets just east of Hog Island and more south of there along the shore. It is usually 12 hours before they are back in the harbor and then they haul the catch by truck to a dealer in Mackinaw City. It's a long day. But, when the sun is out, the lake's not too rowdy, the boat's feeling good, and there is enough white fish in the nets, fishing is still a pleasure for Ralph Cross. Both of them.

Que Pasa's what's happening man

By Laura Glass
What's happening in Charlevoix? Que Pasa? or What's Happening? is fast becoming a popular Saturday night spot for fun, friends and great entertainment. The coffee shop, located under the Kentucky Fried Chicken building, is run by three local churches, the Reformed Church, the Assembly of God and the United Methodist Church. Steve Stargardt, Charlevoix Middle School music teacher, is the director of the coffee shop and he works with a staff of counselors from all three churches. The idea for the coffee shop came to Stargardt last winter.

"I think God put the idea in my head, but at first I wasn't sure if it would work out," he said. But about a week later, when Stargardt was having coffee, a friend mentioned an idea for a coffee house. "That's what I considered a confirmation," Stargardt said. From then on he talked with local churches including his own, asking for support and ideas. "Out of that, a lot of prayer and hard work, it got going," he said. The public seems to agree that the coffee house is a great addition to the area. After talking to a few of the approximately 80 people who came to one of the Saturday programs, it looks like Que Pasa has a lot of fans and a great deal of support, not only from Charlevoix, but from all over the north. "I'm glad Charlevoix has a spot that offers great entertainment for everybody, it really adds a lively touch to Charlevoix and the atmosphere is great," Sue Peters of Charlevoix said. "I'm going again."

$387,199 awarded to county from lottery

Charlevoix residents received $387,199 in lottery prize money since the lottery started in 1972, according to the annual report of the Bureau of State Lottery. All in all, more than $374 million in prize money has been awarded. During the fiscal year from July 1, 1976 to June 30, 1977, a record $109 million was awarded, including winnings from three "instant" games, the regular 50 cent weekly games, and two special $1 910 11 games. Also included are the initial prizes won in the new Daily Game, which began June 6.

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun spreads its radiant glow over the waters, it is indeed lovely from the vantage point of the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands, the setting sun provides a spectacular show. The Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers and sightseers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all. Very few white people had seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that late fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line. On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting on the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset. The metamorphosis of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small Indian settlement at the mouth of Bear River, to a dynamic busy village catering to the needs of sightseers and homesteaders. In house the visitors, the Arlington and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Rooming houses for the less affluent were soon to follow. By 1890 a number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flour mills, tin and wood flooring industries, butter bowl factories, and furniture making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town. Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and rooming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circuit or Inland Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline at Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Conway. Until the quiet little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and stage.

In 1890 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1920's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new tangled summer resorts spelled the doom of the delightful little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon. Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnificent remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs rightly to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

Some fish struggle part way through the net and must be removed as the net comes aboard. ABOVE AND BELOW: When the net chamber containing the fish is along side it is opened and the fish are removed with dip nets.

Mrs. Creswell to head Cystic Fibrosis drive

Mrs. Sam Creswell has been named Charlevoix leader of the 1977 Breath of Life Campaign.

In making this announcement, Gene Riley, Campaign Chairman for the Greater Michigan CF Chapter, emphasizes the great importance of this campaign for continued success in the fight against cystic fibrosis, asthma, chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis, and other lung-damaging disease. He also stressed that the great strides that have already been made in this vital struggle will be continued through the dedicated efforts of chairman and volunteers.

Cystic fibrosis, the most serious of children's lung diseases, is an inherited condition affecting the lungs and digestive system of its victims. While both parents must be carriers of the recessive CF gene, there are over 400,000 (one out of 20) carriers within Michigan alone.

Although incurable, cystic fibrosis can be treated. Just 15 years ago, most children with cystic fibrosis didn't reach school age, but now, because of advances in treatment, more than one-half of all CF victims are living past the age of 18, with some patients living into their twenties and thirties.

September has been designated as cystic fibrosis month throughout the nation by the National Health Council.

Dairy Queen, Kusina tie for women's league lead

Dairy Queen and Kusina Motors are tied for first place following last week's play in the Charlevoix Recreation Department's Women's Slo-Pitch League.

Dairy Queen had been a sole possession of the title following two defeats of Kusina Motors in make-up play. However, a forfeit by Dairy Queen to Village Inn Pizza this week moved the first place team back into a tie with Kusina for the top spot on the charts.

In other action last week, Dairy Queen defeated Kentucky Fried Chicken 20-5. Amy Potter took the win on two hits with Billie Faling taking the loss on 10 hits.

Kusina Motors got back on the winning track with two victories. They defeated Medusa 9-2. Pam Parsel took the win on two hits with Carol White taking the loss on seven hits.

In their second game of the week, Kusina defeated Topside Lounge 8-4. Pam Parsel was again the winning pitcher on seven hits with Teri Wells taking the loss on eight hits.

Charlevoix County State Bank rolled over Tri-City Asphalt 20-7. Jodi Alger took the win on six hits and Betty Bergmann was saddled with the loss on 18 hits.

Georgia Lusk and Jodi Alger both had home runs for the County Bank team.

Medusa defeated Kentucky Fried Chicken in the last game of the week 16-8. Barb Ford took the win on three hits and Janet Leat had a home run for Medusa.

Buchanan finishes 4th in nation

A Charlevoix youth finished fourth in the nation in his age group in recent Pitch, Hit and Run competition.

Jim Buchanan, 12, had won the divisional title at Minneapolis in June, but had to wait until the results of all 13 divisions were in before the winner for the national competition was announced.

The top two winners in each of the four age groups participated in national competition during the annual All-Star game in New York Monday.

By finishing fourth, Jim was just two steps away from the coveted trip to the All-Star game the first time he competed in the Pitch, Hit and Run event sponsored by Major League Baseball, the National Recreation Association and Thom McLean shoes.

While he won't be at the big league All-Star game, Jim will be competing in the District III Little League play-offs in Boyne City next week as a member of the Charlevoix All-Star team.

After 6 - All day weekends

FAITH BIDS US PROTECT THE EARTH GOD GAVE US

As more and more people "head for the hills" and the back country, wherever it may be, either as a vacation project or a weekend jaunt any time of the year, it behooves us to make a greater effort to protect our environment while some of it still remains. Ironically, our very search for the beauty of nature is causing its ultimate destruction. Resolve now to do your part in preserving it, while you can. This calls for decent restraint with off-road vehicles, no littering, leaving plants and animals undisturbed and, of course, extreme care with fires. At the Church of your choice you will develop a deep reverence for the beauty of God's creation that will inspire you to treat it with all the love and respect that it deserves.

What he loves and builds have but a day and then disappear... only when man destroys the life and beauty of nature, there is the outrage.

—George Macaulay Trevelyan

Health department opens PBB information office

People with questions or problems they feel are related to polychlorinated biphenyls (PBB) now have a free source of information and direction.

Governor William G. Milliken recently announced that an office of the Michigan Department of Public Health has been opened in Big Rapids, where the office is prepared to answer questions and assist with problems. If the information is not readily available, the staff will obtain information or provide names of people who may be able to help.

As part of the Health Department's long-term study of the effects of PBB on human health, the Division of Environmental Epidemiology last year established the field office in Big Rapids, where the highest concentration of quarantined farms were located.

The telephone number in Big Rapids is 616-796-3514.

Highlights of District Activities

BY ED REBERMAN County Extension Director and
Secretary of the District

The activities and program of the Charlevoix Soil and Water Conservation District for the past year were under the direction and leadership of five directors: Charles Kiteley, Charlevoix; David Parsons, Charlevoix; Terry Healey, Charlevoix; Clayton Healey, East Jordan; and William Korthase Jr., Boyne City.

Charles Kiteley served as Chairman, David Parsons as Vice Chairman and Terry Healey as Treasurer. Ed Reberman, Charlevoix County Extension Director has served as Secretary ever since the District was organized in September 1948 for a total of 29 years.

The directors again assisted in the Conservation Education Program by awarding a scholarship to Harold Leach, Boyne City School teacher to attend the Environmental Education Workshops at Higgins Lake on February 11-13. They have also assisted in the 4-H Conservation Program.

The Board reviewed 18 permit applications under Act 346, the Inland Lakes and Streams Act. All of these were proposed according to specifications or were under the responsibility of the DNR.

The directors and staff cooperated with the Emmet

District in sponsoring a tree day in April. Cooperators can sign up for trees and then pick them up at one location.

The Board received 1000 copies of the new county plat book in July 1976.

William Korthase Jr. was appointed to represent the District on the North West Michigan Clean Water Citizens Advisory Committee. This is the group that makes recommendations for Act 208 - Non Point Pollution.

The Directors sponsored a series of events for No-till crop seeding. Two meetings were held, one in Petoskey and one in Ellsworth. Arrangements were made to have equipment available. They also assisted in the Extension Program on irrigation.

Terry Healey represented the District for the RC&D program. The Directors approved four agreements under Act 118 - The Farmland and Open Space Act. The farms included the following: Wieland Farms, Mark Saunders, Wayne Saunders and Alan Sibinic.

The Directors signed with the Emmet District a working agreement with the District Aide.

The District assists the land owners in the soil testing program by buying the soil test boxes at a discount and absorbing some of the cost.

Farmers honored

Beginning in 1951 and every year since, the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District has shown their appreciation to District Cooperators who in their opinion have contributed greatly to the District's soil and water environmental program. The winners this year are as follows.

IVAN & REHA PARSONS, Route #2, East Jordan, who own and operate a 193 acre Beef and Truck Farm near Ironston. At present it is the largest truck crop farm in Charlevoix County. In addition, they are also one of the few major syrup producers in Charlevoix County.

Conservation Practices established are - Conservation cropping System, Strip Cropping System, Woodland Management Practice, Livestock Exclusion from Woodlot.

DAVE & TERRI PARSONS, Route #1, Charlevoix, who own and operate a 218 acre Dairy Farm in Norwood Township. They also manage a small sugar bush.

Conservation Practices established are - Conservation Cropping System, Strip Cropping System, Tile Drainage, Farm Waste Management System.

Soil & water conservation accomplishments

TILE DRAINAGE is a Conservation Practice that has accelerated in Charlevoix County since the mid 60's. A total of 140,527 feet have been installed in Charlevoix County which includes 39,950 feet installed this year. Generally it costs about $300 to drain one acre. Most farmers tile to get rid of those aggravating wet spots which reduces their efficiency in the field. For further tile drainage information contact the Soil Conservation Service Office located in Boyne City.

BY CHARLES KITELEY,
Chairman

This progress report has been prepared to show Conservation accomplishments for fiscal year 1976 by United States Soil Conservation Service personnel assisting the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District. Bill Grumm, District Conservationist, Ray Weiss, Soil Conservation Technician and Joan Neumann, Charlevoix and Emmet Soil Conservation District Aide, provide the technical assistance necessary to carry out the program of the Soil Conservation District, in cooperation with other agencies, such as, Cooperative Extension Service, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Their office is located in the Sears Building, 29 North Park Street, Boyne City, Michigan 49712.

There are 264,960 acres of land in Charlevoix County. Of the acreage 45,000 is state owned. The remaining land area is under private and/or municipal ownership. Four hundred thirty four land owners in the county are Charlevoix Soil & Water Cooperators, representing 59,314 acres of land. The Charlevoix District is continually adjusting and revising its program and developing new priorities to meet the conservation needs of the District.

This year (1976), the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District approved 10 new District Cooperators, 13 Soil & Water Conservation Plans, and revised 16 others. One hundred fifty eight land owners were assisted with 249 service calls. Inventories and Evaluations for land use treatment problems were made to 17 land owners.

Fifteen units of government were assisted with 17 contacts in which 3 Inventories and Evaluations were submitted for resource planning.

The following are some of the Conservation Practices applied by the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District Cooperators for fiscal year 1976.

Conservation Cropping System, 675 acres - Crop Residue Management, 747 acres - Critical Area Planting, 24 acres - Minimum Tillage, 516 acres - Tile Drainage, 39,950 feet

This Project is sponsored by the City of East Jordan, Michigan Department of Highway and Transportation, and Charlevoix Soil and Water Conservation District. This measure involves around 450' of city owned lake frontage and 645' of Michigan Department Highway frontage. Estimated cost is $90,000 with 75 percent of the cost paid by the United States Soil Conservation Service and 25 percent of the cost paid by East Jordan and Michigan Department of Highways for their portion of the project. 100 percent of engineering costs are being paid by the Soil Conservation Service. Northwest Michigan RC&D Project is sponsored by a 13 county Board of Commissioners and 13 County Soil Conservation Districts. 1. Federal credit unions like ours are members of the nationwide system established by Act of Congress. We are chartered and supervised by the National Credit Union Administration.
2. Owned and operated by its own members, the credit union is a mutual, non-profit corporation. Our members elect a board of directors to manage the organization and a credit committee to approve loans.
3. Your savings here are insured to $40,000 by the National Credit Union Administration. Members are encouraged to save - and better-than-average dividends, compounded regularly, are paid on savings. Since there are no outside stockholders to pay, all earnings after operating costs and reserves are paid to our members in dividends.
4. Our loan policy is a liberal one. A member whose credit is good and who has the ability to repay has no difficulty borrowing for any good purpose, on terms to fit his needs and income.
5. Whether you save or borrow, you benefit in many ways by dealing with your member-owned federal credit union. This is YOUR organization - we're on your side from start to finish. Feel free to come to the credit union office for information and counseling on any money matters.

ALLEN SANDBERG, Charlevoix City Manager, June Cross, Charlevoix Women's Club representative, John Campbell, Charlevoix Architect, and Ed Hanson, City of Charlevoix Commission Chairman, are shown studying one of the use pressure points where active erosion is occurring in Park Avenue Park RC&D Project, to decide what Critical Area Treatment measure will be installed. Planned development and use of park along with establishing needed erosion control measures will help preserve and protect this beautiful park for many years to come.

No-till corn planting

PREPLANTING ---

Select fields that will warm up first for early planting. Don't jump the gun and plant too early just because a sod will support the farming equipment.

Soil temperature at seed planting depth should be at least 50 degrees. Use a soil thermometer for accurate temperature determination.

Apply proper herbicides at recommended rates, either before or at planting time.

Use clean water for spraying; muddy water will neutralize Paraquat.

Use preemergence and contact herbicides currently recommended. Follow label instructions exactly. Use 40 or more gallons of water per acre to insure good foliage coverage. Apply at a pressure of 50 to 60 lbs. per square inch with a recommended surfactant (sticker-spreader or wetting agent).

In successive years of no-till one may need to change herbicides to give control of fall panicum and other fall weeds and grasses.

Use properly adjusted fan-type sprayer nozzles.

Direct spray nozzles straight down so the force will cause the spray to penetrate the living or dead residue.

PLANTING ---

Use a fluted coulters no-till planter. Add weights to the planter if needed to attain desired planting depth.

Become familiar with no-till operations before changing your row spacing or plant populations.

A planting speed of 3 mph and a seeding depth of 1 1/2 inches is most desirable.

Apply fertilizer in accordance with soil test recommendations. Nitrogen can be applied in liquid form and used as a carrier for herbicides.

Select a familiar kind of seed, but one with a shorter maturity.

Do not allow seed and fertilizer to track or follow the same path. But both should be somewhere within the area covered by the coulters.

Fields may look like nothing has been done at first. Be patient and let the chemicals do their job.

Plant cover crops to improve soil tilth. A rye cover crop can be obtained with the no-till planting system. Harvesting during wetter seasons will be easier because of the residue but beware of soil compaction.

CAUTION --- Improper use of pesticides and careless disposal of containers and unused portions can lead to poisoning of humans, domestic animals, desirable plants, pollinating insects, fish and wildlife, and to contamination of water supplies.

In reference to paragraph similar programs.

Since education meetings were late in starting in Spring of 1977, no corn or seedlings were planted this spring, but,
100 acres of NO-TILL, seedlings are scheduled this August.

Although experience in No-

WHAT'S LIFE FOR EIGHT INCHES OF TOP SOIL?

A recent issue of National Geographic answered that question - and shed some light on the benefits of notillage while doing it.

Here's how researchers came up with the answer on how eight inches of topsoil can last in the limited sloping field.

Thirty six years for "straight-line" plowing - -
"One hundred four years if the field is farmed via conventional tillage with contouring and terracing - -"

Two thousand two hundred and twenty four years if no-

NO-TILL SEEDING of Hayland and Pasture areas may well become a popular practice as this method has little if any erosion occur due to the mulch cover that is retained until the seed is established. This picture shows Klooster Implement Company of Atwood, with their power till seeder reseedling in sod on an area farm near East Jordan this spring. The following are general soil seeding recommendations - - - -

1. Clip or graze stand so that about 2" of growth is existing prior to planting.
2. Broadcast lime and fertilizer according to current soil test recommendations.
3. If broadleaf weeds are a problem, spray stand with one pound of 2,4,-D Ester Active ingredient per acre at least 7-10 days prior to seeding.
4. Three days prior to seeding, apply Paraquat at 1/2 pound active ingredient, using 40-50 gallons of clean water under 40-50 pound pressure. Use a surfactant with Paraquat, such as X-77, to insure good coverage of foliage.
5. Seed with adaptable seeding mixtures with a
NO TILL Seeder.

The above are general recommendations, but each NO TILL site should be evaluated so that the best recommendations can be made to assure good stand. For more information concerning NO TILL operations, contact Cooperative Extension Service and Soil Conservation Service offices in Boyne City.

Estimated loss in crop yield

Estimated average loss in crop yield for Charlevoix County farmers in 1976 was about 50 percent. This loss is almost directly proportional to the average precipitation of 1974 and 1975 for the months of April through October, as indicated in the following precipitation tables from the Petoskey weather station. Farmers with established Soil Conservation Practices and a sound Humus Program, generally fared better than those who did not.

Months During Entire Growing Season	1974 Actual Precipitation	1975 Actual Precipitation	1976 Actual Precipitation
April	3.00	2.08	1.96
May	2.02	3.36	3.17
June	5.72	2.21	1.78
July	6.33	7.38	2.59
August	3.01	5.33	1.68
September	5.09	4.65	1.32
October	2.60	1.30	1.49
Total	27.77	26.31	13.99

For the months of July, 1976 to May 31, 1977 the following precipitation data from the local weather station in East Jordan indicates the variable precipitation from July 1, 1976 through October 31, 1976 and then continues to show the extended drought conditions through May of 1977.

Months	Actual Precipitation	Departure From Normal
July	1.12	-1.71
August	1.81	-1.13
September	2.19	-2.04

Two industries planning move

Two new industries will soon be making their homes in Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Common Council approved site plans for Hufford Industries and Trison Industries Monday night.

Hufford Industries is planning to construct a 6,400 square foot factory area and a 1,500 square foot office area in its proposed new building on property in the industrial park area on the north side of Charlevoix.

Construction on the factory, which will contain the Hufford Industries operation currently located in East Jordan, is expected to begin immediately.

The factory will employ eight people. Trison Industries is planning a 16,000 square foot building including 15,700 square feet of plant space and 1,000 square feet of office space.

The plant, which will manufacture parts for steering gear, is expected to employ between 15 and 25 people when it opens and increase to a work force of about 80 people.

Construction of the building, which will also be located in the industrial park area on the north side of Charlevoix is expected to begin in the fall.

Alderman Ray Wood urged his fellow council members to consider weighing the advantages of being a residential community versus being an industrial community. No action was taken on the proposal.

In other action, City Administrator Allen Sandberg presented a list of streets to be included in a resurfacing program this summer.

Sandberg's list covered 10,300 feet of road surface and will require 1,000 tons of asphalt at an approximate cost of $16,200.

The roads included: Carpenter from State to Charlevoix, Garfield from Grant to Lake, Nichols from Dixon to Petoskey, Nettleton from Petoskey to Crouter, E. Lincoln from Bridge to May, Hurlbut from Bridge to May, Alice from Garfield to Hurlbut, Prospect from Dixon to Petoskey, Antrim from Grant to Park.

Council put the proposal into committee so that it could be studied along with the streets in the southwest section including Wood, Robinson, Sherman and Sheridan for resurfacing.

Council also approved expenditures for up to $20,000 to have the city streets resurfaced.

Council hopes to get construction started by mid August.

Alvin Ranger presented council with the first part of the Charlevoix Municipal Airport Master plan. The plan offers suggestions for improvements at the airport.

Following review of the plan by the common council and the Michigan Aeronautics Commission and the Federal Aviation Administration, a second public information meeting will be held to determine if any other improvements should be included in the plan and to help set priorities.

Retrial slated in Charlevoix

Jury selection for the retrial of St. Joseph resident David J. Purnell began Monday in Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

Purnell is being retried on a charge of second degree murder in connection with the death of Janet Uland, also of St. Joseph. The case will be heard before Berrien County Circuit Judge William S. White in Charlevoix on a change of venue.

More than 29 prospective jurors were interviewed Monday. The trial was expected to begin with opening remarks by Tuesday noon.

Purnell, 28, was sentenced to life in prison by Judge White in 1972 for the 1971 slaying of Miss Uland, following a confession on the witness stand.

The state appellate court overturned Purnell's conviction because the court held Judge White did not instruct the jury they could find Purnell not guilty even though he had confessed.

That instruction was not required at the time of the trial because Purnell had based his defense on insanity, but the appellate court held it should be applied retroactively.

Purnell's confession is expected to be used as evidence during the retrial.

Charlevoix Native Speaks Out

It is amusing to read of our "once-a-year" visitors berating our environment here and trying to tell us "natives" how to run our beautiful city. The woman who wrote in "knocking" Medusa Cement Co. for dust and fumes undoubtedly comes from a city environment that has such obnoxious odors and dust a hundred-fold the year around and they do nothing about it! This Cement Company has the highest pollution-free standards in the United States and constant rigid monitoring by qualified personnel maintains this standard. This "fudgie" would do well to visit here and appreciate the beauty of Charlevoix without criticizing us. Medusa's tremendous taxroll helps maintain these accepted privileges so we all can enjoy them. Don't knock it, please! — A Charlevoix Native

Venetian Weekend

I thought it was very thoughtless to have the barge and the tug in the harbor during the Venetian weekend. I've heard others comment about it. I hope it doesn't happen again.

Venetian Parking

I think, during the Venetian Festival, the most unwise move made by anyone in the City of Charlevoix, is the removal of parking in the downtown area by the placement of the amusement park in the lakefront parking area.

Women in Charlevoix County, country spending more time as part of work force

Are the women in Charlevoix County freer than the men? Do they lead lives of relative ease, with plenty of time each day for luncheons, card games, back fence gossip, naps and general time killing?

That, at least, is what many husbands have been saying. But, according to the women and according to some Government statistics, it is a very distorted picture.

Whether or not it ever was the case, in the last few decades local women have been emerging from the house in ever-increasing number to take outside jobs.

Nowadays, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, American men are devoting a smaller part of their lives to work than formerly while women are devoting a greater part of theirs.

The findings indicate that today's women are spending approximately 66 percent more of their time at work than their mothers did back in 1950 and that men are now spending about 4 percent less than then.

On the basis of the general figures, Charlevoix County's females, who constitute 51 percent of the local population, will be spending an average of 25.1 years of their lives working. This compares with 15.1 years in 1950.

The work-life expectancy of the males, however, has been dropping. In 1950 they were putting in 41.5 years on the job. It is now down to 39.6.

In accounting for the trend, the Labor Department says that the shorter work-life expectancy of men is due to various factors, including better pension plans, bigger social security checks, the difficulty older men have getting new jobs and the entry of their wives into the labor force.

plained "We have just hired our first and only paid employee. William Cashman will serve as our project director to supervise and conclude the various projects we have started."

"They also attempted to organize a group of people who would be interested in preserving and protecting the island's history," she said.

"At that time the group was mostly made up of summer residents. The villagers weren't too interested in the project."

"That's not saying anything against them," Mrs. Townsend added quickly. "The American philosophy at that time was to measure progress in terms of technology and growth and not through the preservation of historic sites."

"We were fortunate to have Hoffmann and Roy who realized the value of the sites."

In order to recoup his investment in the museum property, Roy started the first ice cream stand on the island on property behind the museum. With the proceeds from the stand he gradually recovered what he had spent and had some left over to invest in renovating the print shop, Mrs. Townsend said.

And as the years went by and more islanders became interested in the museum project, it began to flourish as donations of money, energy and artifacts from the benevolence of islanders poured in.

"At the present time, the historical society is undergoing a historical revision itself," Mrs. Townsend ex-

In addition to maintaining the print shop museum, the historical society plans to enlarge its facilities by adding a post office addition to the print shop and opening a Marine Museum and displays at Heritage Park.

Housing commission needs assistance of senior citizens

The Charlevoix Housing Commission should be commended for its dogged persistence in trying to bring low cost senior citizen housing to the city.

The housing commission has been dealing with the Farmers Home Administration, the State Housing Commission and the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development for several years attempting to cut through the red tape that is delaying the construction of a senior citizen housing complex in Charlevoix.

Several times the housing group has had to watch its hard work go down the drain as the state and federal agencies changed their funding programs like the changing of the proverbial horse in the middle of the stream. Sometimes the changes not only led to backtracking for the housing commission, but they even left the group without a horse to ride at all.

Despite the discouraging situation, the housing commission has pressed on, trying to find another avenue for the funding of what they feel is badly needed senior citizen housing in the city.

Once again, the housing commission has found what they feel is a promising route to follow to funding. They have already had a Big Rapids firm conduct a needs survey as the first step toward applying for that funding.

The survey points out a need for senior citizen housing in the Charlevoix area, but the housing commission would like to strengthen the findings of the survey with a survey of people who would like to live in the proposed senior citizen complex.

All senior citizens who would be interested in seeing the development of a senior housing complex should respond immediately to the survey. The time for complaining about the lack of low cost senior citizen housing is over.

Now is the time that senior citizens can take the matter in their own hands and respond to the survey. The housing commission cannot carry the ball by itself any longer. It needs help from the seniors in order to help the seniors.

If the funds for the proposed senior housing complex do not come through this time, senior citizens will have only themselves to blame.

How much crime can be laid at the doorstep of the nation's newspapermen?

Put this question before any group of working reporters and editors and you'll get a range of answers from "all" to "none."

The truth is probably somewhere in the middle—if a truth so illusive can ever be pinned down.

Anyone who has been in news work any length of time knows that the reporting of details of bizarre or unusual crimes sometimes, usually within days, begets similar crimes with equally bizarre or unusual aspects. This phenomena is particularly noticeable following the suicide of a well-known personality. The method he uses to bid goodbye to this vale of tears crops up for weeks in other suicide news stories from coast to coast.

Freddie Prince's suicide, for example, touched off a series of self-inflicted gunshot wounds by young people the country over.

By the same token, if a two-bit thief used a pair of stilts to enter a second-story window, you can be sure other two-bit thieves will start using stilts to do their dirty work.

All of which is working up to a gentle reproach of my colleagues on the metropolitan dailies who have made a big to-do in recent days over the 10th anniversary of the racial warfare which swept the country in 1967. United Press International (UPI) has filed literally yards of copy and albums of pictures on the Detroit race riots alone. Over the weekend the Grand Rapids Press devoted parts of four pages to the mini-riot which shook the Furniture City but fortunately resulted in no fatalities.

As a native Detroit, I was shocked to see my city—my old neighborhood—go up in flames on television back in 1967. Details of the riot, as I read them in the press, were extremely painful. The summer of 1967 was a very hard time for all of us with close ties to the big cities and I, for one, wouldn't want to live through that particular era again.

To tell the truth, it hurts even today—3,650 days later—to read about what happened to Detroit 10 years ago.

Then why are the metro dailies serving up such ample helpings of riot and mayhem in the summer of 1977—a time when race relations are holding a fairly steady course compared to the warring days of the Johnson administration when the nation was seething with discontent over the Vietnam War and other failures of the Great Society.

I really don't know. The riots today are history, bad history. They are not new. And I can think of very few valid reasons for the nation's press to dust off old horrors and trot them out as fresh merchandise for those who were too young to read in 1967.

My real fear, of course, is that by recounting the facts of ancient race hatreds the press is unwittingly whetting the appetites of the young and foolish for more and better racial violence. Make no mistake. Conflict is tremendously appealing to most of us, whether on a field of battle, a boxing ring, a football field, a hockey rink—or a steamy street corner in a black ghetto. And it is sometimes difficult to draw lines between the sometimes legitimate violence of war and sports and the illegitimate violence growing from blind racial prejudice.

I wish the metro press would quit making a big fuss over the race riots of 1967—particularly when they could happen again, so easily, in this steamy summer 10 years later.

Humane society says thanks

Dear Editor:

The Charlevoix County Humane Society would like to express its thanks to all those people who supported our recent dog show with their hard work, their donations and their presence. We appreciated the support.

We would also like to thank the fifth grade students and the Friends of the

You have probably worried about the unemployment problem faced by the U.S. military specialists who used to count dead bodies in the Vietnam war. Stop worrying. The neutron bomb will put them back to work, and business will be better than ever before—if the body-counters are ready.

Unfortunately, the neutron bomb cannot be dropped until there is a decent-sized war. In the meantime, our body-counters remain idle, waiting around on street corners for the first body to fall.

There is simply not a big demand for body-counters in civilian life. Since the U.S. pulled out of Vietnam, most body-counters have been forced to rely on seasonal employment—working for the Auto Club on holiday weekends. Naturally, they have become rusty. When a man counts dead bodies only twice in three years, he soon loses his touch. The first thing you know, he has counted a live one.

This nation can ill afford body-counters who can't detect a pulse from 500 yards away. If the Russians find out, they will train their soldiers to play dead. American boys could be killed in August by Russian boys who were dead in July.

Too many of us have forgotten the heroic job of arithmetic done for us during those precarious years in Vietnam. We at home awoke every morning secure in the knowledge that we would learn today exactly how many enemy were killed yesterday.

And it was never a sloppy job. General Precise never announced "about 1,000 enemy died yesterday." He said "today's body count was 1,563 enemy soldiers, 543 unfriendly civilians who got in the way, and 15 Communist arms and legs not otherwise identified."

But that war ended, and our body-counters were sent home, discarded, with no way to earn a steady living doing the one job they had been trained to do. Only the occasional holocaust keeps them from feeling completely useless.

This nation has been wasting a positive deterrent against World War III. Now with the invention of the neutron bomb, this terrible problem takes on agonizing dimensions.

The neutron bomb kills people but preserves property. The human beings

There's nothing like the Venetian Festival to put a little excitement into an editor's dull life.

Like most residents in Northern Michigan, I had company last week. Beginning on Tuesday, my parents and one set of grandparents arrived for a one-day stay. I put them up in my apartment and we had a great time playing college dormitory days.

They left on Wednesday and I began to gather up all the dirty sheets and towels. As it turned out, every sheet and towel I owned was dirty. And that meant I had to get to the laundromat before Friday when the second wave of visitors was due.

As luck would have it, my schedule didn't allow me to get the laundry done until Friday morning. Of course by then it was a do or die situation.

So early Friday morning, after my daily jog mind you, I trekked off to the laundromat. Much to my surprise things were already hopping with four other people doing the same thing I was.

Well things went along quietly and we all read while the laundry went through the wash and dry cycles. Things began to pick up however, as I got to the folding stage.

All of a sudden a swarm of young men poured through the door of the laundromat and lined up in front of the washers. I could hear a female voice commanding, "Whites in one washer, darks in another. I've got the soap when you're ready."

Outraged, the young men separated their wash and then went to get the soap and change to put in the washers.

Then at the command of a male voice, the group headed out to the parking lot. As I watched, with my mouth hanging open, they began to march back and forth across the parking lot in formation, holding their hands at their mouths.

It was then that I surmised they were probably part of the drum and bugle competition for the Friday night festivities of the Venetian Festival.

And I was right. The woman who belonged to the female voice I had heard earlier explained that the group was General Putnam's Men from Ottawa, Ohio. The group had been on the road for seven days, she said.

"I suppose it would have been nice to let them relax on this nice sunny morning," she said. "But I thought they had better get their laundry done. So here we are."

"They think they're really hot stuff when they master this."

Was she a mother of one of the members of the corps, I inquired.

"Oh no," she smiled weakly. "I'm the wife of the director."

Drum and bugle corps continued to provide me with excitement through the day. That night as I was taking pictures of the competition, I stepped over the white boundary line on the field.

Dorothy Pelton is director of the Charlevoix County Senior Citizens' Center in East Jordan, operated by the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging. This week the Courier talks with her about the services offered by the Commission and activities at the Center.

COURIER: Who makes up the Commission on Aging?
PELTON: It is a group of men and women from all over the county, appointed by the County Board of Commissioners.

COURIER: What services and programs does the Commission on Aging offer to Senior Citizens?
PELTON: We serve nutritionally balanced meals three times a week in the three cities in the county: Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in Charlevoix at 12 o'clock in the high school cafeteria; Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at 12:30 in the Senior Center in East Jordan; and Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at the American Legion Hall in Boyne City.

COURIER: How many meals do you serve?
PELTON: During June we served 586 meals in Charlevoix, 602 meals in East Jordan, and 273 meals in Boyne City. We hope to start serving meals in Boyne Falls in the fall.

COURIER: What about your transportation services?
PELTON: We have two buses, one equipped for handicapped people, and a mini bus. We make two round trips to Petoskey each week. On Monday we go from Charlevoix to Petoskey and on Friday we go from East Jordan and Boyne City to Petoskey. We also use the buses to take people to and from the meal sites, to doctors and dentists, to the Bergmann Center, to shop, to visit friends, and other places.

COURIER: What goes on at the Senior Center?
PELTON: The building is the Center for the whole County. Some day we hope to have satellites in other towns. At the Center we have speakers on various subjects, including legal matters such as wills, medical problems, first aid, psychology, and so forth. We help people fill out forms for tax exemptions. We now have applications for people who want grants for the winterization program. We run a referral service for people with various problems. If we don't know the answer, we'll find it. We have crafts classes, including wood-working. One man who became interested in wood-working used to spend all his time watching television. Now he is so busy making things from wood he doesn't have time for TV. All in all, the Senior Center tries to provide family interest and love for those who don't have a family.

COURIER: Is there a need for housing for Senior Citizens in the County?
PELTON: There certainly is. We have Lakeview Manor in East Jordan and Littletonburg Place in Boyne City. There is none in Charlevoix. They need some, and we could use more housing in both East Jordan and Boyne City. I don't go along with the idea that housing for Senior Citizens is bad. Some say they are segregated, but they can have company when they want it, they're not a burden to their children, and they're not bothered by screaming kids. Statistics show that the elderly population increases by two percent a year, so we're going to need more Senior Citizens' housing.

COURIER: Tell us about the new free medical examinations for Senior Citizens.
PELTON: We are giving them in cooperation with Health Department No. 3. The purpose of the program is to help identify unrecognized diseases or defects in individuals before they become apparent, and to keep track of known chronic conditions. The examinations consist of blood pressure, pulse, blood tests, urine tests, vision and hearing, weight and height, physical examinations, breast examinations, etc. Registration for the examinations is the fourth Wednesday of each month - this month, the 27th. Charlevoix Senior Citizens may register at the City Hall from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., those in East Jordan at the Senior Center during the same hours, and those in Boyne City at the Top of Michigan auditorium at the same hours.

COURIER: Are you still taking blood pressures at the meal sites?
PELTON: Yes, we do that every two months.

COURIER: Do you have any special fun activities planned for the future?
PELTON: We're going to have a campout at Wilderness

Sequanota Club celebrates 75th

THE CLUBHOUSE at Sequanota, which was built in 1903, is the center of activity at the resort. Here members eat their lunches and dinners, gather for Sunday evening suppers, and hold their meetings.

Lower lake levels make boating hazardous in area

Now that the water level of Lakes Michigan and Charlevoix is down almost two feet from what it has been in recent years, there is danger for recreational boaters from unseen and uncharted hazards.

Petty Officer Steven Neal of the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station reports that some of these hazards have recently come to the attention of the Coast Guard. "When the water level is higher, people get used to crossing certain points and entering docks a certain way. Sometimes they cut buoys sharper than they should. Now that the water is down two feet, this could cause problems," he says.

Logs, stumps, and rocks normally covered by an ample depth of water are now just below the surface in some waterways and present a serious danger to boat hulls and propellers. The Coast Guard warns that special care must be taken when boating in such areas, particularly during periods of reduced visibility.

The best safety tip, according to the Coast Guard, is to always be familiar with local conditions before beginning a voyage

By PEG OHLE

Members of the Sequanota Club will celebrate the Club's 75th anniversary with a week of festivities beginning next Sunday.

Sequanota is located on the south side of Lake Charlevoix near Ironton. It is a small resort with 22 cottages and a clubhouse, where residents eat their noon and evening meals.

Sequanota is a quiet, friendly community. Families have known each other for generations, some for four generations.

The idea for Sequanota had its inception in 1901 when Dr. John Winter Thompson, head of the organ department at Knox College in Galesburg, Illinois, brought a party of more than 50 Galesburg residents to Ironton, where they occupied the empty cottages of a defunct iron furnace company.

Dr. Thompson had spent some summers in his early life working at the iron works in East Jordan and remembered the special beauty of the area.

He and Professor Frederick Mueller, also of the organ department, and their wives incorporated the Sequanota club, which was chartered in 1902. Thirteen cottages were built that year, and nine later, bringing the number to the charter limit of 22.

Today, only one cottage is owned by descendants of a charter member.

The program for Anniversary Week includes a tennis tournament, sailboat races, a bridge tournament, a golf tournament, a cruise and dinner aboard the Beaver Islander on Lake Charlevoix, a "speakers night" to hear representatives of the Charlevoix Historical Society, flag dedication, memorial tree planting, and a special dinner at which old movie clips and snap shots will be shown.

Erwin E. Schulze of Libertyville, Illinois is chairman of the event. Present officers of the Sequanota Club are William Klingbeil of Grosse Pointe, president; Mrs. John Voelker of Ishpeming, vice-president; and Mrs. Franklin Lounsbury of River Forest, Illinois, secretary.

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

A public hearing will be held at seven-thirty PM, on August 9, 1977 in the Hayes township hall, to hear public comment on a proposed Hayes Township Zoning Amendment.

The proposed amendment involves a zone district change from A-1 to C-1, on the following parcel of property:

In township of Hayes, part of Government lots 1 & 2, Section 3, T.34N., R.7W., approximate land area, 10 acres, far Phase one site plan. Owned by Roy V. and Nancy R. Wood.

Lillian Bergmann, chairman
HAYES TOWNSHIP PLANNING COMMISSION

SEVERAL LOCAL officials were on hand during special ceremonies Friday celebrating Big Rock Nuclear Plant's new record for continuous days in operation. Here Cyril Hartman, plant manager, receives commendations from Charlevoix Mayor Edward Hansen, Clyde Cunningham, chairman of the board of directors and Lee Sneathen, Jr., Hayes Township supervisor.

Big Rock breaks operating record

Charlevoix is the home of a new world's record.

The Big Rock Nuclear Power plant, owned by Consumers Power Co., has set a new world's record for continuous generation of electricity by a nuclear power plant.

The plant has been in continual operation for 343 days since Aug. 13. The former world's record of 322 consecutive days was held by an Italian nuclear plant.

Several Charlevoix County officials were on hand Friday to congratulate officials and employees at the nuclear power plant located on the shores of Lake Michigan four miles north of Charlevoix, on their operational and safety record.

Charlevoix Mayor Edward Hansen presented Cyril Hartman, plant supervisor, with a certificate of commendation both for the operating record and what the plant has done for the socio-economic community of Charlevoix.

Clyde Cunningham, chairman of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, presented a letter of recommendation and Lee Sneathen, Jr., supervisor of Hayes Township where the nuclear plant is located, presented a plaque of commendation.

During Big Rock's world record setting operation, it produced more than 520 million kilowatt hours of electricity. Based on BTUs (British Thermal Units), it would have taken a train of full oil tankers 110 miles long to produce the same amount of energy.

The Big Rock plant will be out of service for about seven weeks for refueling, inservice inspection and maintenance. About 12 tons of uranium fuel or one-fourth of the fuel in the reactor core will be replaced.

Since it started operation in 1962 as the nation's fifth commercial nuclear plant, Big Rock has generated over 5.09 billion kilowatt hours for Consumers Power.

Rabbi conducts services in Petoskey

He presently is completing his final two years before ordination at Hebrew Union in Cincinnati.

Rabbi Caminker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Caminker of Farmington Hills.

Mrs. Ethel Wiesinger, general chairperson for the sale, said books of every description are acceptable

While in Petoskey he is staying at the Forrest Eggers home on Division St.

The Friday worship services will be followed by a reception (Ong Shabbat) in the temple parlor.

Rabbi Caminker and may be left at her residence at 201 Petoskey-Ave. or at the Charlevoix Public Library.

The sale is sponsored by the Charlevoix Women's Club to raise funds for the CHICO projects that assist native American children.

And You'll Know You've Found The Shopping Area More Reminiscent Of Earlier Days, More Creative And Nostalgic Than Any Place You've Ever Been.

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun spreads its radiance over the waters, it is indeed lovely from the vantage point of the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands, the setting sun provides a spectacular show. The Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers and sightseers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all.

Very few white people had seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that late fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line.

On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting on the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset.

The metamorphosis of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small Indian settlement at the mouth of Bear river, to a dynamic, busy village catering to the needs of sightseers and homebuilders. To house the visitors, the Arlington and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Rooming houses for the less affluent were soon to follow.

By 1890 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flour mills, hardwood flooring industries, butter bowl factories, and furniture making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town.

Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and rooming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Island Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Conway. Until the quaint little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and team.

In 1880 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1900's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new tangle of summer resorts spelled the doom of the delightful little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt. The dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon.

Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnetism remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

Former Charlevoix resident wed in outdoor ceremony

A former Charlevoix resident was married Saturday during outdoor ceremonies at Stoney Hill Lake near Ilesperia.

Deborah Jean Potter and Dale R. Houghtaling, both of Gunnison, Col., were married before 75 guests during double ring ceremonies performed by Rev. Peter Kunn of White Cloud.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Tubman of Sault Ste. Marie. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Houghtaling of Fremont.

For her wedding, the bride made her own gown out of floor-length ivory cotton eyelet based on a design by Oscar de la Renta for Vogue. She carried a bouquet of ivy, yellow daisy pompons, Queen Anne's Lace and yarrow. She had a matching headpiece.

Diane Potter of Goleta, Calif., assisted her sister as maid of honor. She wore a floor-length pale blue eyelet cotton dress of the same design as the bride's dress. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies.

Steven Paris of Woodland Park, Col., was the best man. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Tubman wore a floor-length yellow polyester knit sleeveless dress. The groom's mother Mrs. Houghtaling wore a floor-length green and blue print dress with a chiffon overlay.

Following the wedding was a picnic buffet given by the bride and the parents of the couple.

After a wedding trip through Northern Michigan, the couple will make their home at Stoney Hill Lake, Ilesperia. The bride is a registered nurse and the groom is an elementary school teacher.

114 units of blood donated during local bloodmobile

The recent visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile resulted in 114 units of whole blood.

The heat combined with the fact that this is a summer resort and many donors are working were credited with keeping the community below its quota of 175 units.

A total of 121 donors responded, among them eight first-time donors, with seven being deferred for various reasons a spokesman for the Bloodbank said.

Unless an emergency arises this is said to be the last visit of the bloodmobile until May 1978.

Condominiums--Problem or solution?

Condominiums are one of the oldest forms of land ownership that exists.

The idea of the condominium can be traced back to early European history when people developed their housing close together in clusters and went out to the surrounding fields to work.

"It made sense to them to have cluster housing and to leave the open space open for use as farm land," Rick Smith, developer of Wildwood on Walloon, said reflecting on the ancient custom.

"And it makes sense for today, especially in this area where the land is very desirable."

Historical or not, condominiums have raised the ire of many Northern Michigan residents. And whenever a large tract of land, that is near the water or has a view of one of the lakes, goes up for sale, immediately there is speculation that a condominium will be built on it.

The concerns expressed by local residents about condominiums are not without reason. Since 1973, 18 different condominium groups consisting of a total of 2,600 units have been constructed in Charlevoix County, many of them on valuable lake front property or in scenic view areas.

And many of the condo groups such as the Wharf, an 11-unit condo sitting between Round Lake and Belvedere Avenue in Charlevoix, or Wildwood on Walloon, a 16-unit group sitting on 200 acres around Walloon Lake, are planning to expand.

But area residents are beginning to stand up and be counted as far as condominiums are concerned. They are asking governmental officials to turn down requests for rezoning to accommodate more condominiums.

A recent request for the rezoning of property along Lake Charlevoix in Hayes Township from single family to multiple family for the construction of condominiums was turned down following much protest by area residents and visitors.

Of the more than 20 letters received by the Hayes Township Planning Commission, 100 percent were opposed to the construction of condominiums, Todd Warner, commission member, said.

One of the biggest concerns expressed by residents was that the land had always been zoned for single family use.

"The lake has a tradition of being single family and most people said they would hate to see it go to condominiums, especially since most of them had bought their land because it was zoned for single family use," Warner said.

"Others expressed environmental concerns."

Some of those concerns were about the added pressure a septic system for 40 condo units would place on the lake. Another concern was about the construction of a breakwater for the additional boats that would be showing up on the lake and the pollution that would create.

Special groups have even cropped up to protect their interest in the use of the lakes.

"We're concerned about lake use and water use," Josh Barnes, of the Lake Charlevoix Environmental Protection Foundation, said.

"Our big concern is that the people have the right to know what's being planned for the lakes so that they can protest what they feel is a misuse of it," Barnes explained.

Whatever their reasons, people seem to have an ingrained dislike for condominium units or multiple living units in general, according to Bill Mercer, former Charlevoix County planner.

And that's too bad, Mercer said, because vertical housing structures may be the way of the future.

"There's just a certain amount of land," the former planner explained.

"In order to shore it we need to go vertical with our living arrangements."

"I really think that having a congregation of people in one area sharing services allows them to have more open space and undeveloped space than they would have with individual homes."

"If you go cottage, cottage, cottage, then you need more roads, more wires and more developed area than if these services were combined."

Smith said that area residents have to accept the premise that the area will continue to attract people and will continue to grow.

"It's no longer a question of shall we have growth, but now that we do have it how can we put some control on the quality of the growth," he pointed out.

Smith is convinced that a carefully planned condominium unit is the best way to handle the growth. He believes that the restrictions surrounding the sewage systems and other technical aspects of condominiums will protect the citizens and the environment.

"I think condominiums are the best alternative to satisfy growth pressures with the smallest degree of impact on open space," the developer said.

"Condominiums have a bad reputation because of the poorly conceived high rises on Miami Beach. But it doesn't have to be that way."

Smith said the condominium could be used to the advantage of area residents to leave open space instead of consuming the land as individual homes do.

"The land will always be here. We should be careful how we treat it while we have control of it," he cautioned.

Young Belgian visitor finds Charlevoix to her liking to visit, according to Barbara Thevelin.

Miss Thevelin spent the last two weeks visiting Charlevoix and parts of Michigan as a guest of the Peter Kleinpeltz family through an International Rotary Club exchange.

About 170 students between the ages of 18 and 22 participated in the exchange, visiting many communities throughout the state. Miss Thevelin was the only student staying in Charlevoix, but another student visited the East Jordan area.

"I think I will come back, perhaps next year," Miss Thevelin said bubbling with enthusiasm.

"I would like to see New York, the west and the petrified forest," she said.

"And I'd like to come to Charlevoix in the winter and see the snow."

The Belgian girl explained that it rarely snows where she lives near the border of France. She has to go to Switzerland or France to ski.

"I've only been to Switzerland once to ski and see the snow," she said. "And I would like very much to see it here."

Miss Thevelin said she was impressed with many things she had seen during her 16-day stay in Michigan.

"I was surprised by all the water in Charlevoix," Miss Thevelin said. "The first time I went to Lake Michigan, I called it going to the sea."

"It's so big and it's not salt," she exclaimed, her blue eyes flashing.

She also enjoyed seeing the Mackinac Bridge and Mackinac Island.

"Mackinac Island was nice, but I don't like so many tourists," she said.

"I know I'm a tourist, but still..."

The young woman said she had noticed some differences between the American and Belgian way of life. She said the dress here was much more casual with people wearing shorts or even bathing suits downtown or while visiting. She said she and other Belgians wore skirts and were generally more dressed up.

Miss Thevelin also noticed some differences in the food. While Belgians are acquainted with the hamburger, they usually don't eat it on a bun and they rarely have cheeseburgers, which Miss Thevelin thoroughly enjoyed. She also liked the buffet lines at area restaurants. In Belgium, the buffet line is only used during wedding receptions, she said.

She also noticed some differences in the English she heard being used here and the English she had studied at home.

"In your language you have a lot of words that mean a lot of different things," she said. "They had to keep explaining to me what cool meant."

In addition to English, Miss Thevelin has also studied Dutch, German and French in school. At home she speaks yet another language, a kind of dialect of the Dutch language.

The young woman, who is studying art, has one more year of schooling to complete before she goes to college.

During her stay, Miss Thevelin has been collecting things to take home to her parents, brother and two sisters.

"I'm taking home fudge, of course," she laughed. "And some Petoskey stones I found on the beach."

She also purchased some jeans here because they were much less expensive than in her own country and she plans to take back some sweets, crackers and instant cake mixes.

Opening day for school set Sept. 7

The opening of school for the 1977-78 year is just around the corner.

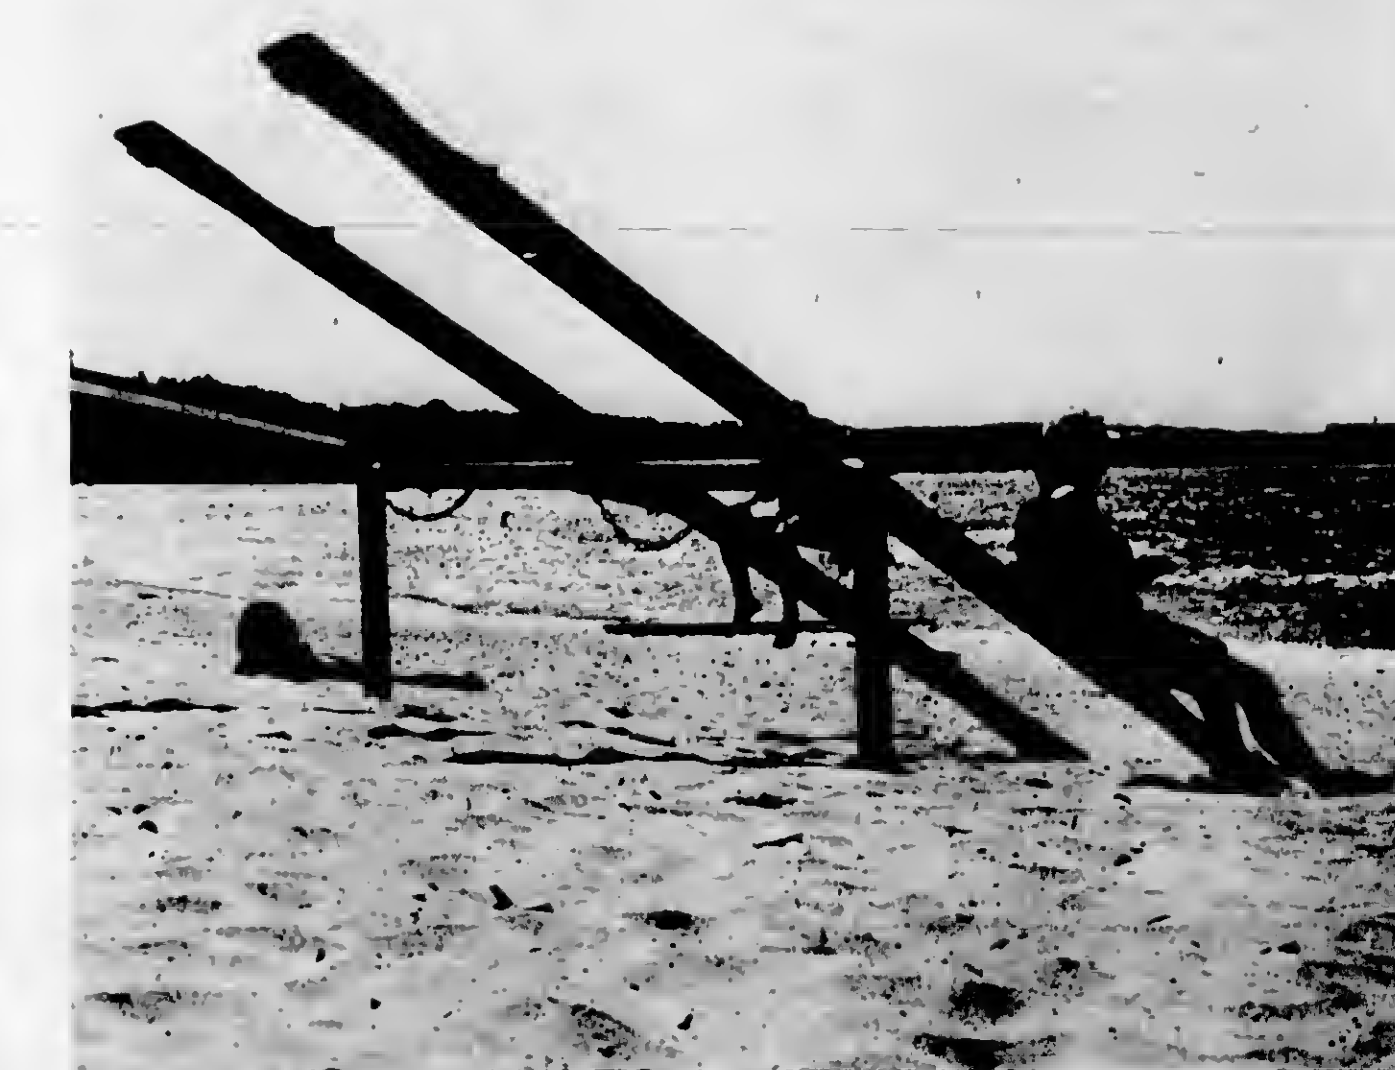

The Charlevoix Board of Education set the calendar for the upcoming school year at its regular meeting Monday.

School will open Wednesday, Sept. 7, Sept. 20, 21 and 22 have been designated as days for mini-sessions when parents will attend abbreviated classes with their children in the middle and high school and parents of elementary students will meet with the faculty to discuss goals for the year.

In other action, the school board heard a request for the transfer of property to the Charlevoix School District, discussed curriculum recommendations made by Superintendent Gordon VanWierden, awarded a bid for sealing the Charlevoix Elementary School driveway and accepted a bid for two school buses being offered for sale.

Superintendent VanWierden presented curriculum recommendations that included setting up a reading program in the middle school and a complete testing program throughout the school district including a readiness test.

VanWierden stressed the importance of the test in helping teachers determine how to use outside resource people from the intermediate school district and the state.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE the beach to bring peace to a weary soul and a battered body. And there's nothing like a water tower for providing a good vantage point. To find out how else people enjoy the beaches in Charlevoix, see the photo display on page 14.

Need New Signs

First, may I ask a question? Do you try and rectify the "wrong" and comment the "right"? I have two wrongs, which I wish would be corrected. First, on the road from Boyne City and East Jordan, known as the Ferry Rd., just past the Hemingway Rd. (turn right) there are two signs, one on each side of the road. ROAD ENDS. Now, I ask you, are you, a stranger, going on? The road evidently ends in water, so you turn and go back!! Miss the ferry ride and the short way to Charlevoix. What those signs should read and please try to do something about it, "FERRY AHEAD." Second, a few weeks ago I took the little train ride from Boyne City to Boyne Falls and it is a nice ride. But, it was spoiled for me. Wherever you looked were small saplings loaded with the tent moth nests. Now, unless they are BURNED the results next year will be completely out of control. I'd like something done about this, too.

Michigan Beach Litter

We have nice beaches here in Charlevoix, and Michigan Beach is one of the nicest. I was just wondering, though, if someone forgot to put disposal cans on the long stretch of road leading into the beach area? It is littered with bottles and cans. If these cans were placed along this road, I'm sure it would encourage neatness. Thank you.

Thanks Venetian Committee

I want to thank the Charlevoix Venetian Committee for the lovely Venetian Parade, a terrific day in the park, and most memorable the Venetian Night activities. I would also like to thank the dockmaster and his wife for all their efforts on behalf of us, the boaters, who are here in the park. Carol Shaw, well No. 10, City Dock.

Enjoyed Venetian

I just want everyone to know that I enjoyed the Venetian Festival thoroughly.

There's a lesson in Waldner's conviction for all citizens

There is a lesson for all of us in the recent conviction of Karl Waldner.

Waldner, a Boyne City resident, was found guilty of violating Michigan election laws by a six-member jury 10 days ago. The decision was reached in 15 minutes following one day of proceedings.

Last spring Waldner circulated a petition to nominate his wife, Janet Waldner, for a position on the Boyne City Board of Education.

Witnesses testified during the trial that Waldner, as the carrier and circulator of the petition, had not been present when all the signatures were signed on the petition, as it required by state law. School officials also complained that the length of the term sought for Mrs. Waldner was changed by Waldner after several people had already signed the petition.

No doubt all of these things have happened before on other petitions for other candidates in other races. But until now, one had been prosecuted for doing something that is a pretty well accepted practice in Northern Michigan and other areas even though it is illegal.

And that brings up a good point. Elections are a serious business. Running for office is a serious business and helping someone run for office through circulation of a nominating petition is also a serious business.

Americans are a fortunate lot among the people of the world. The founding fathers of this country saw fit to set up a government for the people, by the people and of the people.

And one of the things they included in their governmental plan was the petition system for running for office.

The founding fathers felt that if anyone wanted to run for office they could, providing they had enough support from their friends and neighbors to get their name placed on the ballot.

Misuse of this form of government only cheapens the meaning behind it and may result in the loss of a right Americans have held dear for two centuries.

No month on the calendar is filled with omens and portents as August. Now don't get me wrong, August is a perfectly fine month. Although the days are growing noticeably shorter, there are still lots of good weather ahead. Probably more important, August is the month when corn ripens in Charlevoix gardens and plates of plump red tomatoes become a familiar sight on the dinner table.

The problem with August is that it is only a hoot and a holler from Labor Day, the resumption of school, September rains and nippy weather.

Pity the poor kids in Boyne City! Before another month passes they'll be back in school. And Charlevoix and East Jordan kids won't be far behind. August also is a time to hurry up and do all the things you planned to do last May. The weekend trips you kept postponing. Picnics that never materialized because you were too busy in June and July. Beach outings that were cancelled because something else came up.

The eighth month also is when Charlevoix can expect its first three-day blow, a harbinger of autumn storms to come. Ah! August! It's a lovely month, but it's fraught with portents of what's to come.

IN THE OLDEN DAYS in the newspaper business, ingenious reporters could be counted on to enliven a slow news day by filling stories about bird and wonderful world of natural oddities—some of which were more fiction than fact. I suspect that the Loch Ness Monster received much of its early publicity on slow news days.

Lately, however, monsters keep creeping into the news on perfectly ordinary days and have managed to hold their own despite Middle Eastern wars and protests against nuclear proliferation.

At first I was patient. Carefully I watered the plant and rotated it so that all the leaves got equal amounts of sunlight. I talked with it daily and encouraged it to put forth some blossoms. When that didn't work I began to ignore it, giving the violet only the minimum amount of attention.

Finally, for the last six weeks I have been bawling the plant out and even cursing at it. Just to let it know how mad I was. After all, a college educated house plant grower doesn't take defeat lightly.

I even accused the plant of being deformed, defective and a traitor. After that I just gave up.

But to my surprise, when I went into the kitchen to have breakfast one morning last week I was greeted with two beautiful deep purple blossoms. And my love affair with the plant started again.

OK, I'll admit I'm a bug on the subject. Many years ago I pledged myself to never look for those facial features and personality traits which are supposed to reveal whether a person is a rich kike, a dumb Polack, a greedy Wop or a lazy nigger. I knew I was reaching for a special kind of blindness that couldn't be attained outside of Utopia. But I figured my vision would get plenty blurred in the reaching, and that would be something.

This summer, "Big Foot," the elusive monster which reportedly has put in appearances in Asia, Oregon, Washington, Florida and Northern Michigan, is very much in the news, as monster-hunters report sightings matter-of-factly to the press.

The Japanese also have grabbed headlines with their catch of a two-ton monster from a watery grave off New Zealand. One Japanese professor has tentatively identified the ugly creature as a type of dinosaur—a plesiosaurus—thought to have been extinct for more than a million years.

Unfortunately, the fishermen who snaggled the critter in their nets were forced to dispose of the smelly hulk because they were afraid it would contaminate their fishing catch. All we have left are a few fuzzy photos, sketches by one of the fishermen and chunks of flesh dissected before the monster was returned to the Pacific Ocean.

Now, out of the sleepy farmlands of central Illinois, come stories of monstrous birds capable of lifting a 70-pound boy two feet off the ground. Over the weekend, the birds were sighted—and filmed—wheeling from tree to tree on their 12-foot wingspans.

Of course, Nessie—the Loch Ness Monster—is a veritable fixture in the daily press, as a harbinger of dedicated, responsible naturalists take advantage of summer weather to get a more positive fix on the elusive creature which inhabits the murky waters of northern Scotland.

And so it goes, day after day, as phenomena once believed to be the fantasies of fertile imaginations, gain stature in the annals of natural science.

If such monsters do indeed exist, what other fantastic creatures wait to be discovered in this little-explored world of ours?

If it Fitz by Jim Fitzgerald

Last March I laughed at Anita Bryant. But now she has won an election, and young John is dead, and I'm not laughing anymore.

I knew John for several years, but not well. He promoted dances in my old hometown and he regularly sought publicity in the newspaper where I worked. He seemed a shy but friendly kid and I enjoyed talking to him.

I had no idea John was a homosexual. I didn't know whether he was Protestant or Catholic, either. I have never been good at finding the labels on people. I figure it is not my responsibility, so why should I care whether a person is drip-dry or should be sent to the dry cleaner?

OK, I'll admit I'm a bug on the subject. Many years ago I pledged myself to never look for those facial features and personality traits which are supposed to reveal whether a person is a rich kike, a dumb Polack, a greedy Wop or a lazy nigger. I knew I was reaching for a special kind of blindness that couldn't be attained outside of Utopia. But I figured my vision would get plenty blurred in the reaching, and that would be something.

A few years ago there was a story in the newspaper about a woman I'd known in my youth but hadn't seen since. There was a clear photograph of her and her 2 sons, both adopted. It wasn't until recently that I saw my old friend and her family in the flesh, and noticed that one of the sons is white and the other is black.

I hadn't noticed in the photograph, or at least I'd forgotten because it wasn't important enough to remember. That's the type of blindness I'm dreaming about. We should all have it.

So anyway, it is not surprising that I was probably the only one in town who didn't know John was gay. He hadn't told me, and he hadn't tried to freshen his ranks with me, even though Anita Bryant says all gays are recidivists.

I'd seen John's obituary in the newspaper, but I didn't say the young man, not yet 30, had died. I found out a few days after the funeral. The information came in a letter sent me by one of John's friends. That's also how I learned that John had been gay.

There is a connection between John's death and his sexuality. Add another notch to the Bible as wielded by the link

Letter to the editor

Mrs. MacArthur surprised at reaction to letter

Dear Editor:

Just got the Courier & read the Hotline—I seemed to have touched a sensitive nerve in my one sentence remark about Medusa's odor. I wonder if any of the dozen or so people who've complained to me about Medusa also will back me up in print? Or the businessman who is disillusioned because he was told his taxes would go down if Medusa was allowed to operate in Charlevoix. I am sure the word "allowed" is correct, as I probably had the right without any official blessing.

I guess I should have explained that my family connections in Charlevoix covers four generations, that we pay well over $2000 in taxes yearly, we own a home in Charlevoix and come up for more than the traditional two weeks.

It's too bad that the real point of my letter is being misread—that ugliness is insidious and we should be alert to it. But living in a community day to day is difficult to realize what's happening until it's too late. Incidentally, the community where I spend most of my time has a population just over 25,000, and the lichen grows on the trees still.

I spend most of my spare time here fighting ugliness because the same problem exists, apathy and lack of awareness. I think you would do the community a service if you could editorialize some aspect of the problem. For instance, I think the economy and the environment can co-exist but only if a balanced viewpoint is presented. All too often only the economic viewpoint is presented, to the detriment, in the end, of everyone, including the business. Every decision should include the economic, social and environmental results.

As a sidekick I can't help commenting on the side tone of these letters—why are the natives so scornful of visitors? Aren't they their bread and butter? If they don't want visitors, they're on the right track to allow anything and everything to go in. One woman, I understand, begged the council to require some trees preserved when Oleon's shopping center was built—think how nice it would be today if they had! You probably never saw it as it was before—a corner of grass and trees where the asphalt is now. If you ever go to Washington D.C. and see the new White Flint shopping center—it's a veritable park-lush landscaping around the stores & in the parking lots.

This is an increasing trend as many are beginning to recognize that landscaping keeps the urban environment more humane. Sincerely, Barbara MacArthur

Erma Bombeck

I'm as crazy about dogs as the next person, but long ago I realized we had inherent differences.

(a) When I mistrust people, I do not bite them on the leg; (b) I cannot shed all over the sofa and still expect my hostess to be a good sport; and (c) Newspapers are meant to be absorbed—not absorbed.

If I have one major criticism of orthodox dog lovers, it would be their inability to view their pets as they really are—animals. I have noted dog enthusiasts, in particular, have a couple of catch phrases that seem to be universal.

"He won't bite." This would be reassuring if it weren't for the fact that the dog is rigid, his teeth are bared, there is a guttural sound coming out of his throat and he has just penciled a bull's eye on the calf of your leg.

"I am going to leave the room so that you and Killer can get to be friends." That's a phrase that hasn't popped up since they gave Daniel a plastic bone and put him in the lion's den.

"Oops, you're sitting in King's chair." You already suspected that when you sat down and King covered you with his 90-pound body.

"Is that Fritz smelling up the room?" This is awkward as the only other person beside the host is you and Fritz doesn't look like he is going to admit to anything.

"He won't hurt you. He's just (check one) teething, playful, needs attention." Which is exactly what I told my doctor. "He didn't hurt me. I'm just bleeding, hysterical and need stitches."

"Get down, Brute. She's not used to dogs tearing her stockings." (Could you throw in licking my toes and eating my fountain pen?)

I had one friend who always admonished, "Don't make any sudden moves as Flossie is a high strung." Sudden moves included chewing gum, swallowing and breathing in and out. In the eyes of the owner, Flossie had become human.

It became quite apparent one evening when a policeman knocked on the door at the request of my friend. He told him that the police were going to have to do something about all the male dogs who were arriving by bus and trains from as far as 80 miles away to court Flossie.

"They are nothing but sex maniacs," said my friend. "And I want them off my property or I will have all of them arrested."

I breathed a sigh of relief when Flossie refused to sign the complaint.

John is dead, Anita

One day John was found dead. His co-workers said he was accidentally electrocuted by a hair dryer.

"Because I knew John, I understood it was more than that," his friend wrote. "He was an army-trained electronics expert with years of experience in that field. He would not have been electrocuted unless he wanted to be."

"I think he did it because the pain of fighting had grown to be too much," Anita Bryant says the Bible proves that homosexuals, "have no place in the kingdom of God." I say the Bible also "proves" that people who eat pork are sinners.

Anita Bryant says the law must protect our children against abuse from homosexuals. I say the laws are already there, to be applied equally to homosexuals and heterosexuals. There is no need for separate drinking fountains marked "Gay" and "Straight."

In this column, I changed John's name. I wish I could have changed his story. But the Anita Bryants of this world were too much for him, and there is no changing that. Anita Bryant is a clown, but I can no longer laugh at her.

Meet Charlevoix

...John and Pearl Rowe

John and Pearl Rowe's truck garden on Park Avenue is one of the few left in the area. This week the Courier talks with them about their produce and the work involved in growing it.

COURIER: How long have you been working the garden? ROWE: We've been in business 12 years, since I retired as manager of a sporting goods company in Detroit, where I worked 37 years.

COURIER: How did you happen to settle in Charlevoix? ROWE: We visited my sister at Oyster Bay and liked the country. This property was for sale so we bought it. COURIER: Was there a garden here when you bought the property?

ROWE: About one-third the size of this one. We now have four acres of grapes, currants, raspberries, fruit trees, vegetables and flowers.

COURIER: How do you sell your produce? ROWE: Right from the house here.

COURIER: Do you can or freeze any of it for your own use? ROWE: Oh, yes, we have two deep freezers and we fill them up. We even freeze grape juice, apple juice, and cherry juice. What we can't freeze we put in jars.

COURIER: Are there any vegetables that can't be grown in this area? ROWE: Well, we grow about everything, including broccoli and cauliflower.

COURIER: Do you have any help working the garden? ROWE: No, we do it ourselves. It keeps us busy most of the year. Of course, most of the work is in the summertime, but in the fall we have to clean it all up and in the spring we rototill, fertilize, start plants in the greenhouse, and in April begin planting outdoors—things like peas, lettuce, carrots, and beets. We also transplant the flowers, cut out the raspberry canes, prune the grapes and fruit trees, and apply the dormant spray. That's the only time we spray.

COURIER: Has the cost of materials you use gone up much? ROWE: We use animal fertilizer, which we get for the hauling. We save some seeds but buy most of them in large quantities by the pound. We also buy quite a few flower plants each year. We have almost every flower that can be grown in the area, but we lost some last year because of the cold weather. This year one of our biggest expenses is water. We have our own well because we couldn't afford city water, but even so, it cost us over $70 for water in May.

COURIER: What do you do in the wintertime? ROWE: We catch up on our housework, paint, clean the cupboards, and do odd jobs. We also take short trips to the ski resorts and other places of interest.

COURIER: Did you know anything about gardening when you started into the business? ROWE: We knew a little about it. We had always had a garden of our own. We learned by trial and error. What didn't survive we didn't plant again.

COURIER: You seem to have a lot of raspberries right now. Is it a good crop? ROWE: It's our biggest crop ever.

COURIER: Do you encourage people to pick their own berries? ROWE: Adults, yes, but no children.

COURIER: When will your tomatoes be ready? ROWE: About the middle of August. We start them from seed in the greenhouse, but had to replant them twice this year because of the late frost.

COURIER: You have a lot of birdhouses around. Do you have many birds?

ROWE: We have 27 birdhouses and a big variety of birds. We feed them year around. We have a pair of scarlet-breasted grosbeaks, ten pairs of cardinals, Baltimore orioles, indigo buntings, purple finches, and some swallows. The swallows eat the bugs. We also have a badger in the garden which eats the fallen fruit from the ground. Our squirrels are so tame they eat out of our hands. We try to keep our place as natural as possible.

COURIER: Do you have any plans for the future? ROWE: We're thinking about making the garden a bit smaller so it will be easier to keep up. The reason there aren't many truck gardens any more is because it's all hard work.

Letters to the editor

Calls celebration of Big Rock absurd

Dear Editor: Yippee we're sitting on an atom bomb.

I am amazed and dismayed that any so called "intelligent adult" can celebrate the new world record of 342 consecutive days of operation set by our Big Rock Nuclear Plant, when the waste product of that plant is the deadly plutonium, a waste product that threatens the lives of our children, ourselves and our world.

If we are intelligent enough to overwhelmingly indicate that we do not want our state used as a dumping ground for nuclear waste, we must be responsible enough to demand and find alternative energy sources to produce our much needed energy.

Until a safe reliable method is found to reprocess the tons of waste generated by our nuclear plants, tons of waste that are being stored within a few miles of most of us at this moment, I will continue to mourn each second of the plants continued operation.

Dave Phillips says thanks

Dear Editor: A week ago Monday, our restaurant and home was struck by fire. The fire could have very easily destroyed the building and everything we own. But, instead, the tragedy of fire gave us the opportunity to experience the beauty of friendship which is abundant in our community.

The Charlevoix Police and Fire Departments and the volunteer firemen displayed their skill by confining and extinguishing the fire before it could do more extensive damage. Our friends, neighbors and employees came to our aid in the middle of the night to help us clean up and to lend moral support. What was accomplished in a 24-hour period was astounding—the entire restaurant operation was completely taken apart and re-assembled in order that we could re-open the business. Carpenters, roofers and electricians were on the job at 8 a.m. to repair and replace parts that had been burned out. The carpet cleaners began their work at 10 p.m. and worked into the early morning hours. The news media was very co-operative in reporting that the fire had temporarily interrupted business and telling when we would re-open.

Most important, our friends and employees volunteered hundreds of man-hours to scrub walls, ceilings, floors, chairs, curtains, windows, dishes...literally everything that had been damaged by the fire, smoke and water.

The success we've achieved in business and in life in Charlevoix is attributed to these people and the assistance they've given us in such instances. I sincerely thank God for each of them and their friendship.

Local kids enjoy 4-H camp

"I'm a camper, not a camper, and my ears are made of leather. How they flop in windy weather. Gosh O' Henlock, I'm tough as a pine knot, cause I'm from Ocqueoc Group Camp."

That merry little jingle was learned by eight Charlevoix County campers as they joined more than 200 4-H members from eight Northern Michigan counties recently for camp sessions near Onaway. Jennifer Clock, Cinda Crozier, Keisha Crozier, Julie Pail, Diane Tolas, Sue Stolt, Julie Stolt and Bob Parsons enjoyed a week of classes including swimming, weaving, African mask making, tree identification, canoeing, archery and folk dancing.

Camp followed a safari theme and campers were divided into groups of ten with such names as hyenas, giraffes, lions, tigers and many others. The campers ranged in age from 9 to 13 years old and they had counselors, who are also 4-H members, ranging in age from 14 to 19 years old.

Bob Bellairs, 4-H Program assistant from Charlevoix County and Beverly Voss, 4-H Assistant from Presque Isle County, were camp directors. Several special events highlighted the week. Square dance instruction was given to all campers and a chicken barbecue and camp olympics were held. Each group of campers was also given special responsibilities with all campers sharing in dinner detail, grace and song, flag raising, flag lowering and reflections. Campers from Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan, Alcona, Alpena, Montmorency, Oshtemo and Presque Isle counties attended the two-week camp sessions. Many of the Charlevoix County 4-H members attending camp were assisted by Health department to begin survey of water systems

The local Health Department will soon begin conducting a survey of public water systems in the area to determine the number and location of public water supplies that are subject to the standards and monitoring procedures of the Federal "Safe Drinking Water Act". Under the law, the Federal Environmental Protection Agency is charged with the ultimate jurisdiction of all public water systems in the country, but a state may be granted primary enforcement responsibility if it demonstrates the ability to carry out the requirements of the act. It is anticipated that the State Health Department will assume primary responsibility for the enforcement of the act in the near future. In the act, a public water system is defined as a system for the provision to the public of piped water for human consumption if that system has at least 15 service connections or regularly serves at least 25 individuals daily for at least 60 days a year. Besides community water supply systems such as cities, villages, mobile home parks, condominiums, etc., the law also applies to non-community systems provided they meet the usage requirements of the act. Non-community supplies could include such sources as wells supplying motels, schools, campgrounds, marinas, roadside parks, churches, restaurants, factories, golf courses, and gas stations. The health department is requesting the cooperation of the public and especially the owners and operators of such facilities.

Modern dance demonstration set Aug. 11

A MODERN DANCE demonstration will be presented by students of Joan Karff at 8 p.m. Aug. 11. Demonstrating some of the moves are Kim King, Debbie Tollas and Jenny Wright.

5 local women to show techniques

Ever wonder what modern dance was all about?

A special demonstration of modern dance techniques will be presented at 8 p.m. Aug. 11 in the Body Work Studio upstairs in the Market Mall.

The demonstration will be danced by several local residents who have been studying under Joan Karff throughout the summer.

Participating in the demonstration will be: Jenny Wright, Kim King, Debbie Tollas, Joanie Garthe and Jeanine Etienne.

Some funds available for energy conservation

Low-income families whose homes are in need of weatherizing to conserve fuel may qualify to have the work done through the "Emergency Energy Conservation Program" sponsored by the Northwestern Human Services Agency.

Applications may be obtained by writing to the Agency at 202 Beaumont Place, Traverse City, Michigan 49684.

Weatherization consists of minor repairs, replacing windows, caulking, weatherstripping, storm doors and windows, and insulation at an average material cost of approximately $250 to $300 per dwelling.

With priority to the elderly and handicapped, the principle eligibility for the weatherization service is family annual income. A family of four, with an annual income at or below $7,300, would qualify for this service.

Survey reveals to Davis how constituents feel

State Senator Bob Davis learned in no uncertain terms how his constituents feel about important legislative issues when he read the answers to his recent questionnaire.

Bob Davis

A compilation of the answers shows that the greatest percentage favored requiring minimum mandatory sentences for certain serious crimes. Not far behind were those who favor reforming the state's welfare system by adding several additional requirements for qualification.

They also favored granting the elderly a voluntary discount through a statewide senior discount program, and for the younger generation, raising the legal drinking age to 21.

A little further down the line, those surveyed wanted the state to devote more funds to tracking down absent fathers whose children are supported by ADC, wanted the state to institute the death penalty to deter serious crimes, wanted to deny unemployment benefits to those who voluntarily quit jobs, wanted to reform the single business tax to assist smaller and less profitable businesses, and wanted to ban phosphorus from laundry detergents.

A few number, but still a majority of those answering the questionnaire, favored earmarking lottery revenues specifically for school aid, favored requiring Medicaid recipients to pay a minimum charge per service, favored lowering PBB tolerance levels and compensating farmers for losses, favored an increasing emphasis on vocational or career education in schools, favored funding education through personal income tax rather than property tax, and favored creating a budget stabilization "rainy day" fund.

The most "no" answers were related to the questions on allowing striking workers to collect food stamps and other public assistance and increasing gas taxes and license plate fees to improve all aspects of travel in Michigan.

City crews busy with various projects

Charlevoix city crews were busy last week with a variety of projects.

The street crews are working on the installation of new directional signs along local streets. The city is participating in a program funded by the federal government that replaces worn out signs and posts. The program was designed to help communities bring their signs and posts up to date with standard markings and height.

The electrical crews have also been busy installing a new hook up for Huffard Industries in the industrial park on the north side of town.

The company plans to relocate its East Jordan plant in the industrial park. Work has already begun on the construction of the new plant. Sewage treatment plant crews were also busy last week. The crews are working to widen the back driveway to the plant. The driveway needs to be widened to allow the tanker, which transports chemicals used in the plant, easy access to the plant.

Special division of United Way reaches 1/2 of goal

The Special Gifts Division of the 1977 Charlevoix United Way Campaign has reached about 50 percent of its $4,325 goal, Tom LaBlance, division chairman, has announced.

The Special Gifts Division is made up of contributors from the Belvedere Club, Chicago Club, Sequanota Club and other residents of Charlevoix who do not live in the community for the entire year.

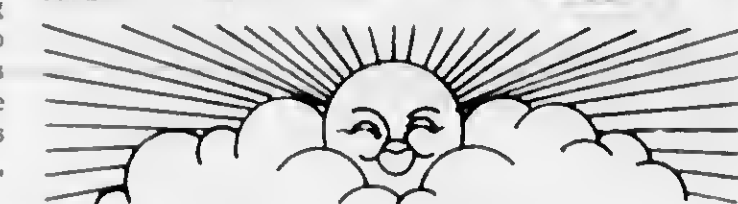

The division is aiming to collect 25 percent of the United Way's 1977 goal of $17,300, LaBlance said. Contributors were contacted through mailings around the middle of July.

"The early response to our campaign has been gratifying," LaBlance said. "And I and all of the members of the Charlevoix United Way Board of Directors would like to express our appreciation to those special friends and residents of Charlevoix that make up the Special Gifts Division."

The chairman said if the response to the division's campaign was any indication of what the United Way could expect this year, he didn't anticipate any problem reaching the group's goal.

"These people should be commended for their continued contributions, not only to the Charlevoix United Way, but to the many other organizations in our community that depend on their continued support," LaBlance said.

Hospital practices disaster techniques

The story is true. The incident was simulated. The collision of two single engine planes was a test of the second at 5:02. Each made two trips, so that all the victims were on their way to further treatment by 5:13 p.m., only twenty three minutes after the initial phone call.

The hospital's Disaster Plan went into action with the arrival of the first mock casualties at the emergency room. Most hospital personnel, physicians and nurses included, were not aware that the incident was only a test. A nursing supervisor helped unload the first ambulance and the initiated the hospital's "call up plan," whereby all physicians and key nurses were alerted and asked to report to the hospital.

Also called to the hospital were the necessary services of X-ray, lab, inhalation therapy (for resuscitation, oxygen administration and blood gas tests), operating room staff, and a nurse anesthetist.

When so many casualties are arriving at once, someone must assess each injury and quickly send each injured person the proper place for care. A triage officer is the physician specifically charged with that quick examination of each patient and the appropriate assignments to X-ray, operating room, emergency room, or other area of the hospital.

At this point, with each patient assigned to an area for care, the drill was declared over. The time was 5:45, less than an hour from the initial phone call to the police.

Hospital staff, administration and patients held an immediate critique of the exercise, rearranging a few procedures for increased efficiency, but declaring the drill an overall success.

Roeters explained that Disaster Drills are conducted twice yearly at Charlevoix Area Hospital, as required by the Joint Commission for Accreditation.

The Safety Director also disclosed that the Disaster Plan was actually put into operation a few weeks ago to care for the victims of a nine person car accident south of the city, involving a fatality and critical injuries. Then, too, the hospital staff implemented the plan quickly and smoothly.

place at 4:50 p.m., on the grass runway at the Charlevoix County Airport. Eleven mock casualties, with injuries ranging from minor cuts and bruises to fatal wounds, were involved.

The Charlevoix City Police Department was called immediately. Police were at the scene of the accident by 4:53. The only individuals who knew the accident was staged to test Charlevoix Area Hospital's Disaster Plans, were Hospital Administrator Richard Krueger, Police Chief Jack Mol, the eleven volunteer victims and a very few observers.

Four minutes after being notified by phone, two city ambulances and a city fire department truck were on the scene. The victims' specific wounds were described on paper bibs pinned to their shirts. Ambulance, fire and police personnel were told to proceed as though each were a real case, treating the injury and making snap judgements as to who should be transported to the hospital first.

Charlevoix Area Hospital Safety Director Barney Roeters, who arranged the drill, explained, "While police directed traffic away from the scene, ambulance and fire personnel assessed each casualty's injury and proceeded to load those most critically injured into the ambulances."

Roeters reported that the first ambulance left for the hospital at 5:00, followed by Booklet describes future job market

By PEG O'LE
High school and college students, preparing for the careers in the near future will find a new booklet, "Michigan Job scene," helpful in selecting a field of work in which jobs will be available within the next few years. The booklet describes the number and kinds of white collar, blue collar, and service job openings that will be available in Michigan through 1980.

According to the booklet, white collar jobs, which include professional and technical occupations, managerial and administrative jobs, sales and clerical positions, account for about 46 percent of all jobs in Michigan. Approximately 166,000 openings per year are anticipated in this area, with a steep increase in demand for medical professionals and technicians.

Blue collar workers (skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled) account for about 39 percent of the jobs in the state with expected openings of 44,200 per year. About 33,300 job openings are expected for service workers, such as police officers, hairdressers, cooks, and practical nurses.

The outlook for laborers and farm workers is less favorable with only slight growth in manual labor openings and a decrease in farm jobs by three percent each through 1980. "Michigan Job Scene" provides specific breakdowns of the types of jobs in each category, the duties of each job, and the skills and/or education required for each occupation.

The booklet is available free of charge from the Michigan Employment Security Commission office, South 131 Highway, Petoskey.

Carnival closes season for summer recreation program

Come one, come all, to the greatest show on earth. While the carnival at the Charlevoix Elementary School may not have been the same as going to the Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Circus, the Charlevoix area children visiting it probably had just as much fun.

Children manned the sponge throwing and ring tossing booths while their friends came to try their luck. Others sold balloons, pop and popcorn or told fortunes.

There was even a surprise performance by some acrobats. All in the under 15 years set.

The carnival closed out a summer of activities held at the elementary school under funding from the Juvenile Justice program.

Students from Central Michigan University conducted daily activities at the school playground Monday through Friday with more than 200 local children participating in the various events.

The children were a part of such special events as a pet show, bike parade and olympic games during the six-week session.

And most of them agreed it was a fun way to spend the summer, but it sure went fast.

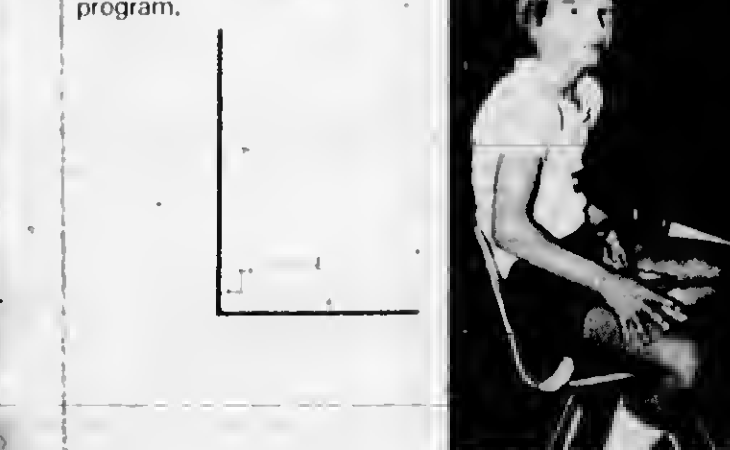

JACKIE SADOWSKI heaves a sponge at her victim during the summer recreation program carnival.

SHELLEY SZUDZIK, one of the leaders of the recreation program, wins as a sponge bounces off her during the carnival. The carnival was the final activity for the summer recreation program.

SHERYL MILLER tests her luck at the ring toss during the carnival sponsored by the summer recreation program.

IT'S THAT SIMPLE!

THE SIMPLE INTEREST INSTALLMENT LOAN IS NOW AVAILABLE.

Here's how it works:

With a simple interest installment loan, you pay interest on only the amount of money you owe.

Pay early - Pay Less

If you make your payments sooner than the due date, you'll pay less interest.

Pay more - Pay Less

If you make more than one payment during each month, you'll pay less interest.

Pay extra - Pay Less

If you pay, for example, ten or twenty dollars extra on each payment, that extra amount is applied against the principal and that saves you interest!

Family, child services looking for local board members

Child and Family Services is looking for people from Charlevoix County to serve on its board of directors.

The agency was formerly known as Michigan Children's Aid and Family Services and serves families and children of the 13-north-western counties of Michigan.

The board of directors is a policy-making governing board which controls the budget. Board members are citizens representing the 13 counties served. At present, Charlevoix County is not represented on the board.

The board meets once a month from September through June at the agency office in Traverse City. Members also serve on committees to carry out their responsibilities as directors.

Directors must be interested in children and families and be concerned with welfare of all citizens. They will be made familiar with the many programs of the agency such as adoption, foster care, counseling for families and individuals, and services to youth.

Anyone wanting to learn more about serving on the board should contact Dr. Philip Miske, Child and Family Services, 210 Beaumont Place, Traverse City, Michigan, 49684.

HOUSEPLANTS AND YOUR VACATION

You can send the kids to the neighbors and the dog to the dog kennel but what do you do with your houseplants when you leave on vacation? You plan ahead!

Pastor Hugh A. Cowan of the church invites everyone to hear and enjoy this musical treat. A free-will offering will be received.

My favorite way to take care of them is to water the plants thoroughly and seal them in clear plastic bags. Then place them in a cool location out of direct sunlight. If your plants are in porous containers, stand them on clay bricks placed in a watertight container. Bring the water level up to the top of the bricks. Reduce the light intensity to decrease evaporation. Another suggestion is to take your plants potted in porous containers and plant them outdoors in a shady location. Bury the containers up to the rim in soil or saturated peat moss.

Horticulturists suggest not leaving your houseplants more than two weeks unattended. Flowering plants are the most difficult of all and often will not last without routine care.

In fact, severe heat waves have been known to increase the death rate from heart attack by more than 50 percent.

Why?

A combination of reasons, Dr. Pickard says. "A person's whole lifestyle may change in the summer. There's lawn and garden work - unaccustomed exercise in itself. Sports can be added to that - hauling a boat in and out of the water, hiking, swimming. Along comes a hot spell and sets the body's 'cooling system' into high gear, adding to the circulatory effects of increased exertion."

This cooling system, while efficient, causes an increased work load on the heart. More altogether. As a result they may not get enough foods containing potassium and sodium salts, necessary both for the proper functioning of the heart and to prevent heartbeat irregularities which may cause heart stoppage.

Fortunately, Mother Nature has planned for this and summer brings a bounty of foods rich in these substances.

Some foods which are good sources of potassium are: bananas, cantaloupe, grapefruit juice, orange juice, potatoes, tomato juice, cucumber and halibut. Other good sources are: beets, broccoli, buttermilk, carrots, skim milk, watermelon, lean beef, chicken and lima beans. People tend to avoid many of these potassium-rich foods, especially the meats during the summer when they may need them more than ever.

The second reason is improper diet. People tend to eat differently in the summer, sometimes eating on a grab and run basis, dieting to look good in the bathing suit, or even skipping meals altogether. As a result they may not get enough foods containing potassium and sodium salts, necessary both for the proper functioning of the heart and to prevent heartbeat irregularities which may cause heart stoppage.

Janet Potter marries Jerry VanStedum

Arrangements of yellow and white carnations with candles graced the altar at the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church for the afternoon wedding of Janet L. Potter and Jerry A. VanStedum.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Archie Potter of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Fred VanStedum of Ellsworth.

The Rev. Dan Minor officiated in the double ring ceremony before 150 guests. Sharon Aloft of Ellsworth provided organ music for the ceremony playing a program of traditional music. Mrs. Robert Klooster sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

For her wedding, the bride chose a gown of satrapeau with decorated lace and pearl beads. It had bishop sleeves with ruffled cuffs, A-line skirt and a chapel length train. Her cap-like veil was designed to match. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath. Assisting her sister as maid of honor was Mrs. Ronald Simpson. Jean VanStedum, sister of the groom, and Holly Gerten were bridesmaids.

The girls wore gowns made of flowered polyester styled with a high neckline and laced bodice with puff sleeves and full skirts. They carried bouquets of miniature roses and baby's breath with identical head pieces.

Tom VanStedum, brother of the groom served as best man. Scott Essenberg and Ron Simpson were groomsmen and ushers were Jim Potter and Glen Rubling.

Buffy Kooyer and Tracey Simpson, niece and nephew of the bride were flower girl and ringbearer.

After a trip to the Upper Peninsula, the couple will reside in Ellsworth.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents on the Friday before the wedding at the Country Kitchen in Ellsworth.

Severe summer heat requires careful health care habits

"Summertime and the livin' is easy," goes the old song. True. Summer has pleasures all its own - soaking up the sun, boating, contemplating the dazzling view of a blue-green lake.

"However," says Dr. Sol Pickard, cardiologist and president of the Michigan Heart Association, "while almost everybody is aware by now of winter's hazards to the heart, few know that a summer hot spell can bring its own hazards."

In fact, severe heat waves have been known to increase the death rate from heart attack by more than 50 percent.

Why?

A combination of reasons, Dr. Pickard says. "A person's whole lifestyle may change in the summer. There's lawn and garden work - unaccustomed exercise in itself. Sports can be added to that - hauling a boat in and out of the water, hiking, swimming. Along comes a hot spell and sets the body's 'cooling system' into high gear, adding to the circulatory effects of increased exertion."

This cooling system, while efficient, causes an increased work load on the heart. More altogether. As a result they may not get enough foods containing potassium and sodium salts, necessary both for the proper functioning of the heart and to prevent heartbeat irregularities which may cause heart stoppage.

Fortunately, Mother Nature has planned for this and summer brings a bounty of foods rich in these substances.

Some foods which are good sources of potassium are: bananas, cantaloupe, grapefruit juice, orange juice, potatoes, tomato juice, cucumber and halibut. Other good sources are: beets, broccoli, buttermilk, carrots, skim milk, watermelon, lean beef, chicken and lima beans. People tend to avoid many of these potassium-rich foods, especially the meats during the summer when they may need them more than ever.

The second reason is improper diet. People tend to eat differently in the summer, sometimes eating on a grab and run basis, dieting to look good in the bathing suit, or even skipping meals altogether. As a result they may not get enough foods containing potassium and sodium salts, necessary both for the proper functioning of the heart and to prevent heartbeat irregularities which may cause heart stoppage.

A summer day at the beach

Students in the Charlevoix Recreation Department swimming classes are learning two important things this summer.

They're not only learning how to swim, but they're learning how to keep from drowning.

More than 220 students in the five different swimming class categories have been taught the new down proofing method and will be tested on it as part of passing their swim course, according to Dwight "Ike" Bosa, recreation department director.

The down proofing method currently being taught is a variation of the front survival float that students have always been taught, Kim Mahoney, swim instructor explained.

Miss Mahoney said the students are taught to use a jelly fish float, then every five seconds they bring their hands up to their faces and push down against the water with their hands as they make a scissors kick.

This method allows the swimmer to get his or her head far enough above the water for a breath, Miss Mahoney said.

"Sometimes you'll find that it is easier for a person to float on their stomachs," the swimming instructor said. "Teaching them this method may make it easier for them to relax and stay afloat if they have a problem."

"Also this method takes less energy than treading water. It's just an added precaution."

Also teaching swimming lessons for the city this summer is Chris Davenport.

Petoskey,
Michigan

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun spreads its radiance over the waters, it is indeed lovely from the vantage point of the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands, the setting sun provides a spectacular show. The Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers and sightseers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all.

Very few white people had seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that late fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line.

On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting on the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset.

The metamorphosis of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small Indian settlement at the mouth of Bear river, to a dynamic, busy village catering to the needs of sightseers and homesteaders. To house the visitors, the Arlington and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Roaming houses for the less affluent were soon to follow.

By 1890 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flour mills, hardwood flooring industries, butter bowl factories, and furniture-making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town.

Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and roaming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Inland Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Conway. Until the quaint little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and team.

In 1890 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1900's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new lapidated summer resorts spelled the doom of the delightful little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon.

Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnetism remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

Art fair group picks Lori Bolt for scholarship

A fourth year student at the Cleveland Institute of Art has been chosen as the recipient of the 1977 Waterfront Art Fair Scholarship.

Lori Bolt, the daughter of Russell and Sue Bolt, was awarded the $500 scholarship for the second year in a row. She was selected by a committee made up of: Connie Pointner, chairman, Suzi Kels, and Bill Staffel.

Miss Bolt, 21, is majoring in textile design at the Cleveland Institute and is minor in film making.

The young woman said she has always been interested in textiles and designs and so she decided to major in the field during her five-year program at the art institute. She will receive a bachelor of fine arts when she completes the program.

She has been taking classes that cover the printing of yardage and the designs of fabrics. Following graduation, the young artist is considering starting her own business of custom designed clothing.

Samples of Miss Bolt's work will be on display during the 1977 Annual Waterfront Art Fair, Aug. 13 in East Park. She will be displaying quilts, pillows, and dolls made out of fabrics she has printed or designed herself.

The scholarship funds are raised from the proceeds of the annual art fair.

CONNIE POINTNER congratulates Lori Bolt on her selection as the winner of the annual Waterfront Art Fair scholarship. This is the second year Miss Bolt has received the $500 award.

East Jordan honored for safety

The City of East Jordan is among 45 Michigan communities to receive a Pedestrian Safety Citation in the American Automobile Association's 38th annual Pedestrian Safety Inventory for going one year without a pedestrian fatality.

Other Michigan cities received top honors included Auburn, Greenville, Holland, Lincoln Park, Grose Pointe Woods and Grose Pointe Farms, Middleville, Sebawa and Trenton.

East Jordan's award will be presented at a later date by the Automobile Club of Michigan.

Residents, visitors fight battle of the beach

By PAULA HOLMES

There's nothing like the feel of the wind whipping against your face and the smell of Lake Michigan in the air as you stroll across the beach in your four-wheel drive vehicle or on your dirt bike. There's nothing like it, that is, unless you are a person lying on the beach or a property owner who would rather not be disturbed or have his or her beach property turned into yards of tire tracks.

Each year, Northern Michigan residents face the battle of the beach. On one side of the two warring factions are the four-wheel drive and dirt bike enthusiasts and on the other side are the environmentalists and private property owners.

"This is a beautiful area for play, but people are ruining it," Harley Burris, area law enforcement supervisor for the state Department of Natural Resources, said.

Burris said the trail left by dirt bikes and four-wheel drives raises havoc with the beaches creating erosion and he said he had received some complaints about the danger of the vehicles to other people trying to enjoy the beach.

The law enforcement official said he had received many complaints about the misuse of four-wheel drive vehicles in the Mt. McSaba area, in front of the condominiums and in the Bell's Bay and Fisherman's Island areas.

Burris said he had asked some of his officers to patrol the Bell's Bay and Fisherman's Island area to try and keep it clear of four-wheel drives and dirt bikes because of many complaints about molestation of swimmers and of danger to people playing on the beach.

"I know this creates a bad situation for many of the young people, but I think if they used the area wisely there wouldn't be so many complaints," Burris said.

One attempt to get people to use the beaches wisely and to end the war between the two beach-loving groups, is the establishment of Off-Road Vehicle (ORV) registration stickers by the state Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

In order to operate a vehicle off of a commonly used roadway, drivers must have an ORV sticker, Burris said.

"The purchase of an ORV sticker just recognizes that the vehicle is used off of the road," he explained. "Purchase of the sticker does not permit people to room at large over state or private property. It does not permit people with jeeps and other vehicles to go on the beaches or in open fields.

"It just allows them to use the overgrown trails and two-tracks that are not commonly used as roads."

Burris pointed out that the sticker also gives the state an idea of how many vehicles are being used off the roads. Eventually the state plans to use the money from the sale of registration stickers to construct pathways for the use of ORVs just as it has done for snowmobiles.

"They estimate that only 5 to 8 percent of the ORVs are registered," Burris explained. "The faster we get total registration, the faster we will get the program for the development of pathways going."

"The state figures those people who are going to use it should pay for it," Burris said that violation of the new law can result in a common misdemeanor charge with a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail or a $100 fine.

He said that enforcement of the new law was incidental to the many other duties of the conservation officer.

So what can the property owner do to protect himself from what he sees as unruly hordes of four-wheel drive owners.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is encouraging property owners to come in and fill out a trespassing complaint, Sheriff George Lasater said.

"About all they can do is come in and fill out a no trespassing report," Lasater said. "We'll help them with the paperwork."

The sheriff said he had only received four complaints about four-wheel drives on the beaches this year. And, those complaints came from township officials and others, but not the regular citizen.

Charlevoix Police Chief said that many property owners don't meet the criteria they have to meet to comply with the new recreation trespassing act. Fencing and signing is required under the act before prosecution can take place.

"I don't question that there is a problem," Chief Mol said. "But it is difficult one to police."

"And it is hard to catch a four-wheel drive when you are on foot. And for the city to purchase a four-wheel drive vehicle is too expensive."

OFF THE ROAD vehicles are causing some concern among environmentalists and private property owners in Northern Michigan.

Plans study on future extension out of city limits

City to extend utilities

A request for the extension of city electrical service beyond the city limits sparked a short but heated debate during the Charlevoix Common Council meeting Monday.

Robert Sooy asked for the extension of the utility service across the city boundaries for his proposed 14-lot Birchwood subdivision.

Several aldermen said they thought it was unwise to extend city utilities beyond city limits, especially to property right next to the city boundaries, without requiring annexation.

"The real problem with extending city utilities across the boundary lines has been that people want to share the service, but they don't want to pay for it like the city people have to," Alderman Jeannine Wallace said.

However, council decided to approve the extension, which is expected to cost $5,000, with a 75 percent deposit required.

Alderman Ray Wood then made a resolution suspending any other extension of city utilities across the city limits until the current policy regarding the extensions has been revamped.

"I think we should hold on any extension until we come to a good, fair and definite decision about how we are going to handle it," Wood said.

In other action, council discussed sewer and water extension to the new shopping center on M-46, Captain's Corner.

Council agreed to extend the waterline along May Street and across M-46 to the shopping center property. The shopping center will then pay for the remaining extension to the construction site.

As far as sewer extension is concerned, council agreed to a $100 fine. He said that enforcement of the new law was incidental to the many other duties of the conservation officer.

So what can the property owner do to protect himself from what he sees as

Clean Up Depot Area

The area around the freight depot and the former passenger depot in Charlevoix is an eyesore. There are wire and cable rolls all over the place. Somebody should contact the C & O Railway and tell them that if they don't clean the area up that the city will clean it for them and then place a lien on the property. If we're going to call the city Charlevoix the Beautiful then somebody should clean up that area.

Why Penalize For Conserving

I would like to know why I pay more for propane gas when I don't use as much. I'm paying 63.9 cents a gallon for propane because I don't use as much as my neighbor, who pays 40.3 cents per gallon. Why, when you insulate your home, and try to conserve the fuel, must you be penalized 23 cents per gallon? Thank you.

The deadline for voter registration for the Sept. 13 Charlevoix School District election is Monday.

All people who are interested in registering to vote in the upcoming election should visit either the Charlevoix City clerk's office or their respective township clerk's office in order to register for the election.

People may also register to vote at the Secretary of State's office at its new location at the corner of Bridge and Hurbit streets.

The Charlevoix Board of Education will be seeking approval of an additional 1 mill for operations on the Sept. 15 election ballot.

Couple finds home wrecking interesting summer project

By PAULA HOLMES

Tom and Cheryl Sothard are home wreckers.

The husband and wife team is responsible for the demolition taking place at what was once the parsonage of the Charlevoix Congregational Church on Park Avenue.

"We call it demolishing, and they call it recycling," Rev. Raymond Giffin, pastor of the church, explained.

The young couple is dismantling the former parsonage and saving the materials for use in the construction of their own home on property between East Jordan and Boyne City.

Giffin said the church had planned to use the parsonage to house the CHIP Counseling Center, but due to state regulations it was not feasible to remodel the parsonage for use as a counseling center. So the church decided to have the home demolished to make way for a possible parking lot.

"The two needs seemed to go together rather nicely," Tom, a teacher at the Charlevoix Middle School, said. "They needed to have the house removed and we needed the materials."

Tom said that when the couple first moved to the Charlevoix area three years ago, they wanted to buy a big farm house and remodel it. But circumstances didn't allow them to go ahead with their plans, so they decided to build instead.

Tom said he and Cheryl, who is a teacher side in the East Jordan School District, had talked about recycling the parsonage for more than a year before they really decided to do it.

In preparation for the project, Tom read some old carpentry books.

"Removing a house is an unknown art," he grinned. "You can't find too much out about it."

He said he did watch a man take apart a house in East Jordan and got some pointers from him. But mostly the couple is playing it by ear.

They work at dismantling the house like it was a six-day a week, 9 to 5 job. They have until Nov. 1 to complete their project and Tom thinks they will need every day of it.

The couple began their project with a house demolition sale. They advertised in the classified ad section of the newspaper and attracted people from as far away as Kalkaska to purchase or barter for items in the house that the couple did not want.

People bought such things as glass panes, screen doors, oak wainscoting and even old nails. In exchange for a fireplace screen, the couple obtained two hard hats for when they start taking the roof apart.

Other interesting things happened as the couple began to dismantle the former home of Frank Lines, one of the early druggists in the community. They found a 1909 Free Press, a 1920 Christian Science Monitor and a 1908 picture post card of the Pines Hotel in Grand Rapids.

"It makes an interesting summer," Tom laughed as he and Cheryl told the story of their project.

The couple saves every usable item from the parsonage, including the nails, and then carts the materials to friends' barns to store. They hope to recycle it all into their new home.

Unusable burnable items are also carted away while nonburnable materials are thrown in the basement to use as fill.

Tom and Cheryl said the dimensions of the parsonage have caused them to alter their plans for their own home.

"We've had to change plans to meet the materials available," Tom explained.

Removing windows has been another interesting part of the couple's project. All of the windows and window jams had to be numbered so that they wouldn't get mixed up as they were transported to the storage site.

Just numbering the windows was quite a project—there are 43 in the house.

Tom and Cheryl Sothard pull down parts of the inner wall. The couple is tearing down the house next to the Congregational Church on Park Avenue to recycle into materials for the new home they are planning to build.

You Deserve Health

You were born with a God-given right to be healthy. Health is natural, not injected. Your body is capable of making its own drugs, e.g. insulin, cortisone, thyroid, etc., if it is working properly. Your body has the knowledge to stay healthy if the brain can tell it how to work. That's where Chiropractic comes in. Chiropractors release pressure on nerves by adjusting the spine with their hands.

We all know that the spinal column houses the spinal cord and that nerves emit from between the segments of the spine. These nerves transmit messages from the brain to the body to tell it what to do and how to do it. When one or more segments of the spinal column get misaligned it cuts off the nerve energy and the brain can no longer tell the body how to work, the end result is pain, sickness and disease.

Chiropractors release your vital nerve energy and the rest is done by the body itself, it is its own best healer. Have you tried several different medical approaches to no avail? If so, you owe it to yourself to consult a Chiropractor, for the practice of Chiropractic and its increasing prominence in the health field is based on medical failures. Pilot finds building an airplane simple

By PAULA HOLMES

It's just like building a model," the man said with a shrug of his shoulders.
"You draw the plans on the table and then you put the pieces. It's really quite simple."
With those few words, Robert Winchester described what's behind building an airplane. And Winchester ought to know what's behind it, he has built one plane and is currently working on a second.

Winchester got into the plane building business because he wanted a high performance biplane. He had been flying since 1948 and was interested in learning more about aerobatics.
"Aerobatics is just a type of flight that I find interesting," the pilot explained. "People have the wrong impression about it. It's not daredevilish. It's a real good sport."

It's somewhat between an athletic type sport and one that uses a lot of skills.
In order to practice the maneuvers that are a part of aerobatic flight, Winchester needed a special type of plane. In 1964, when he decided to learn more about aerobatics, there weren't too many of the type he wanted around.
"It's not uncommon to see these planes any more," the pilot said. "When I started building this, there were only about three in the country. By the time I finished there were probably a couple of hundred."
And now the same plane, a Pitt's Special, is being manufactured commercially.
"When Winchester started building his first plane, named the "Susie Lee" after his daughter and wife, he was not new to the business. He had already rebuilt a couple of two-place planes as a kid he had constructed several wooden model airplanes.
"I had a pretty good idea about certain design details," he said.
But still the pilot had a lot of things to learn. He took a night welding course and practiced his welds before getting started on the project.
"You read as you go along," Winchester said with a faint smile crossing his lips. "There is a construction manual that comes with the plans for the plane and that helps."
"It's a real diversion to build a plane. You have to really be concentrating on it in order to get everything right. You don't have time to think about anything else."
The Charlevoix man had some help with his first project which he estimates took between 2,000 and 3,000 hours to complete. His wife Leona, who is also a licensed pilot, helped with the covering for the wings of the plane.
"Covering is pretty easy to do," he said. "It takes a lot of time, but it's not that hard to do."
Winchester said he also got help from his kids who would hold pieces in place from time to time while he worked on them.
Winchester said the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) inspects the plane before it is covered to check out the body construction.
The pilot said if the builder has followed the plans closely he should have no problems passing inspection.

BOB WINCHESTER poses with his Pitt's Special, the Susie Lee. Winchester uses the bi-plane for performing aerobatics. He completed construction on the plane in 1971.

Committee decides on street program

The Charlevoix Common Council Utilities and Streets Committee has finalized plans for street construction this summer.

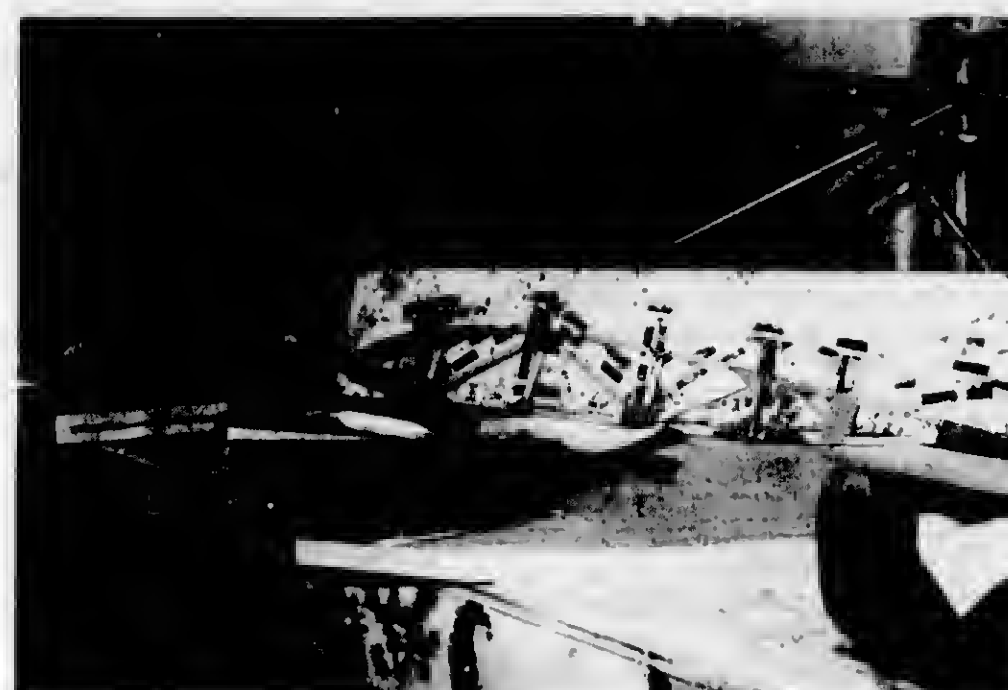

Chairman Ray Wood and committee members George Plumm and Ivan Whitley set up a schedule for repairing 7,100 feet of street at an approximate cost of $23,000.

Common council had only approved expenditures for up to $20,000 and City Administrator Allen Sandberg said he thought the city should stay within that budget even though the estimated cost of the projects is a little higher.

The schedule of streets that will be worked on this summer follows:

STREET	From	To	Length	Width	Est. Cost
Street Lewis	Dixon	Potoskey	600 feet	22 feet	1940
Burns		Potoskey
Potoskey		Auld
Auld			1500 feet	22 feet	4860
			2100 feet		6800
SECOND WARD
Carpenter	State	Garfield	1500 feet	22 feet	4860
Garfield	State	Grant	1300 feet	22 feet	4210
Grant		Norwood	2000 feet		9070
THIRD WARD
Hurlbut	900 feet	22 feet	2918
Alice	650 feet	22 feet	2106
East Lincoln	650 feet	22 feet	2106
East Hurlbut	2200 feet		7130
Total	7100 feet				23,000

"They all were home built at one time."

PARTS OF the fuselage and wing lay waiting on Bob Winchester's workbench. Winchester is constructing his second airplane, a Pitt's Special.

Top O'Michigan seeks three new board members

By PEGGIE GUILLE

Three directors will be elected to the Board of the Top O'Michigan Rural Electric Company at its annual meeting to be held at the Boyne City High School in Boyne City, August 15, at 8 p.m.

There are nine candidates for the positions, two of whom already serve on the board. Candidates for re-election are William A. Parsons of Norwood, who has served on the board since 1966, and Patrick E. Harwood of Grayling, who has served on the board since 1968.

Other candidates are James Behling of Boyne City,

William A. Burgess of Eastport, William McGowan of Grayling, Willis Walker of Johannesburg, Doris A. Pearl of Charlevoix, Emma Reinbold of Pellston, and Bruce M. Sanderson of East Jordan.

Of the above candidates those nominated by the nominating committee are Parsons, Harwood, Behling, Burgess, McGowan, and Walker. Those nominated by petition are Pearl, Reinbold, and Sanderson.

Those elected will serve three-year terms. This is the first time that a woman has been nominated to serve on the Top O'Michigan board. Both Mrs. Pearl and Mrs. Reinbold are homemakers, and Mrs. Reinbold served 20 years as extension home economist in Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan Counties.

In addition to electing the directors, those attending the meeting will vote on several proposed changes in company by-laws. A combination proxy and registration card has been sent to all Top O'Michigan members so that anyone unable to attend the meeting may designate another member to represent him. This is the first time that proxy votes have been permitted.

Charlevoix granted CETA funds for training programs, projects

Charlevoix County has been granted a still unspecified amount of money under the Comprehensive Training and Employment Act (CETA).

The grants are for positions in public and non-profit organizations and come under two titles.

Title I is a training program, and positions funded under it should provide an identifiable future opportunity to transfer the participant to unsubsidized employment within 12 months if possible.

Title VI provides funds for projects for non-profit organizations, state and local units of government, community based organizations serving Indians, or other non-profit organizations and institutions engaged in public service.

"Project" means a definable task or group of related tasks which will be completed within a definable time period, not exceeding one year, which has a public service objective, and which results in a specific product or accomplishment when completed and which would not otherwise be accomplished with existing funds.

Projects may include the rehabilitation, alteration or improvement, but not new construction, of public buildings, roads, health and educational facilities or other facilities for the improvement of the community.

Helen Phillips, Assistant Public Program Administration Director for the County, reports that the Charlevoix County Road Commission, Boyne Falls Public Schools, the City of Charlevoix, and the Department of Natural Resources have already had projects approved. Others are awaiting approval, but there will still be unspent funds to be put in circulation in the County.

Mrs. Phillips has advised all public and non-profit agencies in the County about the funds.

LIONS CLUB members have donated special equipment to the Charlevoix Area Hospital for use in the removal of eyes for cornea transplants. The Lions club members are also looking for people who would like to donate their eyes following death. George Duke, Charlevoix King Lion, gives a transplanting case to Richard Krueger, hospital administrator, while Reed Freidinger, M.D. studies a donor's card offered by Ivan Parsons, eye bank chairman for the East Jordan Lions.

Lions Clubs initiate program of cornea transplants here

A cornea transplant program has been initiated at the Charlevoix Area Hospital by the Charlevoix and East Jordan Lions Clubs. The two clubs have donated the instruments needed for corneal extractions to the hospital for use by area physicians, and the containers needed to ship the corneas to the University of Michigan and Wayne State University.

Members of the two Lions Clubs are also actively seeking area residents who would like to become eye donors. The clubs have donor cards available to people who would like to have their eyes used to help someone else see following their death.

The eyes must be removed within 72 hours following a person's death and sent downstate to a hospital which does corneal transplants. Dr. Reed Freidinger explained.

Freidinger said Little Traverse Hospital is doing some corneal transplants and that it was possible that corneas donated in this area would be used for local people.

Bandshell project needs people to support and help complete it

It seems almost weekly that the Charlevoix Courier is asked to support community projects with pictures, news coverage and editorials.

Always willing to help the community whenever it can, the Courier usually obliges, sending photographers, writers and editors to get the story for the newspaper's readers.

Unfortunately, far too many of these projects are never heard of again, as the original enthusiastic backers drift away to other things and the projects are left to die.

There is one project in town, however, that is enjoying a revitalization—the bandshell in East Park.

Clarence Odmark, former Charlevoix High School and city band director, has taken the bull by the horns and set up a meeting to get interested supporters organized and back on the track with the bandshell project.

Odmark, the chairman of the original group to get the bandshell started, believes the time to take action on the bandshell is now. City residents have talked about building it long enough.

He points out that the stage area is a great asset to the community and is used regularly by the city band. It is also available for special events such as the Venetian Festival, the Waterfront Art Fair and the Christmas Carol.

The only trouble is, it is hard to hear what goes on in the stage area even with a sound stage, because the wind blows the sound away before anyone can hear it.

The Courier joins Odmark in urging interested citizens to once again take up the cause of the city bandshell.

The city band has a long tradition in our community. For 50 summers residents and visitors alike in this community have been able to spend one evening a week enjoying music in the park. In addition, several other musical groups have been able to entertain people from the park because such a nice facility is available.

It is a shame that residents and visitors haven't been able to get it together enough to complete the bandshell and provide an even more enjoyable atmosphere for the performance of various musical groups.

It takes a lot more than talk or wishes to get a bandshell built. It takes a lot of hard work from dedicated citizens. And it takes a lot of follow up and pep talks to keep the entire group moving toward its goal.

The media can help just so much with its photographers, writers and editors, but in the end it takes some people who will see the project through.

SIDELIGHTS on the Purnell Murder Trial:
Although I didn't have an opportunity to talk to defendant David Purnell about his unscheduled mid-summer visit to Charlevoix, the Berrien County courthouse employees who have spent the past two weeks in Charlevoix seem to be enjoying their visit to northern Michigan.

Since it was impossible to find lodging for so many people (the delegation numbers about nine) for so long a time, the Berrien officials are staying at Petokey's Holiday Inn and commuting to Charlevoix when court is in session.

Some of the official party, including Court Reporter Jack McCarthy and Bailiff Thomas Gillespie have had their families with them at least part of the time.

Bailiff Gillespie, incidentally, is an uncle of Courier Editor Paula Holmes, so the trial has given her the chance to renew acquaintances.

One member of the official party pointed out Saturday while the jury was out that no one in Berrien County had a hand in picking Charlevoix as the scene of a mid-summer charade-of-venue trial. Such decisions are made by the Michigan Supreme Court.

PURNELL's retrial, incidentally, is costing Berrien County a bundle. One estimate pegs the cost between $18,000 to $20,000, including lodging for the courthouse employees and transporting witnesses to and from St. Joseph. There also are such incidental costs as feeding the jury during lunch breaks.

When the jury had failed to reach a decision by lunchtime Saturday, Circuit Judge William S. White sent the 12 jurors and the bailiff to Leuthener's restaurant.

The jurors were allowed to order from the menu and could have anything they wanted "except lobster."

A Berrien County official explained that a juror once ordered lobster at a St. Joseph restaurant and the board of commissioners threw a collective fit when the bill arrived.

"We just don't let the jurors order lobster any longer," the official explained.

BEFORE the jury was excused to begin deliberations, Bailiff Gillespie took the usual oath to keep his charges secluded from outside interference and to give them neither food nor drink, except water, without express permission from the bench.

"No Coke or coffee!" yelled Jury Foreman Norm Probert from the jury box.

Judge White said he had no objection to Coke and coffee and the jury breathed a collective sigh of relief.

A SURPRISE element in the trial last week was the revelation that the defendant is a great-grandson of King Benjamin Purnell, who bearded patriarch of Benton Harbor who once maintained a House of David colony on High Island.

There undoubtedly are many Charlevoixians who remember the village Purnell constructed on the south end of the island, complete with a school, dwellings, shops and a church.

The late Delores Fischer once told me that she spent a winter on the island as a girl during King Ben's reign. Her big sister was the school marm.

THE RETRIAL, incidentally, results from a change in Michigan law which requires judges to include "not-guilty" as an optional verdict in their charges to juries. The change could result in "thousands" of costly retrials in cases where such instructions were omitted, according to one Berrien County official.

If it Fitz

by Jim Fitzgerald

For 2 reasons, it hurts me to type the following words: There is a big hole in the roof of the house at 1020 Pine Grove Ave. Port Huron, Mich.

The first reason it hurts is that there are 3 letter 'f's and 2 's' (commas) in that sentence. In the touch system, the middle finger of the right hand is used to type 'f's and 's'. A large piece of flesh has been accidentally cut off the tip of the middle finger of my right hand.

There is blood on my hand, keys, and there are tears in my eyes, but I keep typing because this is my job and I will not back away from it, no matter how severe the pain.

Well, I have made 1 concession to the agony. The right-hand middle finger is also used to type the 'k' key. In fact, the 'k' key is home base for that finger, and a particularly hard, downward push is required to operate it. It hurts more to type 'k's than 'f's and 's'. So I am avoiding 'k's whenever feasible.

Originally, today's column was going to be about the Charlevoix Clan. But that would be too bloody. So I am substituting the hole in the roof at 1020 Pine Grove Ave.

But first, you probably wonder how I cut my finger. It was my wife's fault. Pat left me writing in the car while she dashed into the A&P to get a quart of milk. Because she was purchasing less than 9 items, she could use the express check-out line, which meant she wouldn't be gone more than half a day.

At our A&P, if you want to buy more than 9 items, you first should get a leave of absence from your job.

I figured I would pass the time by reading the newspaper. I reached into Pat's beach bag to get my eyeglasses. You remember that beach bag. It goes everywhere, and carries everything. My wife never leaves anything home for fear of mildew. And I never carry anything in my pockets because they are lined with oiled cloth and I must keep them available for smuggling slosh into the dry pavilion at Meadow Brook.

It is not easy to find what you want in the beach bag. While rummaging for the eyeglasses, I felt a sharp pain, and drew back a maimed finger.

"You must have found my razor," I said.

"I like to keep it handy for shaving my legs."

Pat said after I explained why I was sitting in my Oldsmobile full of blood.

Paula Holmes... ...Speaking Her Mind

If you get a chance this summer visit Beaver Island, especially if you like the outdoors and just want to relax and don't need to be entertained every waking moment.

I'm sure you'll meet some super people and have a good time, too.

As you have probably noticed, the Courier has had a few stories about the island in it for the past couple of issues. I've been back and forth to the island the last two weekends and I've really fallen in love with it.

The first weekend I only spent Saturday there covering the dedication of the old Mormon Print Shop by Lt. Gov. James Damman.

When I left on the 8:30 boat that morning, I was a little skeptical about going back to the island. I had been there only once before for a camping trip with 30 high school students.

As we were bedding down that evening, we discovered we were short tents. I ended up sleeping in a makeshift plastic garbage bag, leaning in the middle of one of the heaviest downpours in modern history. Needless to say, that didn't endear the island to me, nor did the island impress me as your ideal vacation spot.

But that Saturday was perfect weather-wise and I was determined to come back for a camping trip the following weekend, which I did.

Again, I left on the early morning boat and spent the day working. That evening a friend from the mainland joined me and we attended a fish fry at French's Bay with students and staff.

Friendlier people are hard to find.

An ad in a Midwest newspaper read, WANTED: Woman to do ironing for housewife. 10 years behind in everything. Must have strong courage and sense of humor. Phone _____

Now there's a woman I could live next door to in perfect harmony. I iron "By appointment only." I learned long ago that if I ironed and hung their clothes in my daughter's closet, she would change three times during dinner.

The other day my son wanted me to iron his jeans for a class play. "Which leg faces the audience?" I asked with my iron poised in mid-air.

"Boy," he said, "you're sure not like Mrs. Breck."

I hadn't thought about Mrs. Breck in years. She was an antiseptic old broad who used to live two houses down from me. She had an annoying habit of putting her ironing board up on Tuesdays and putting it away again at the end of the day. (What can you expect from a woman who ironed belt buckles?)

One afternoon I dropped in on her as she was pressing the tongues in her son's tennis shoes.

"You know what you are, Mrs. Breck?" I said. "A drudge."

"Oh, I enjoy ironing," she said. "You keep talking like that and someone is going to put you in a home."

The dear woman must be afraid of 10 a.m. shadow.

So that's how I cut my finger. Now you are wondering what is the second reason it hurts me to type those words in the opening paragraph. The second hurt is a pang, rather than a pain. I feel it in my heart, which is more useful than the middle finger, unless you are angry with some guy, in which case it is more appropriate to give him the finger and keep your heart.

For the most of the first 18 years of my life, I lived at 1020 Pine Grove Ave., in Port Huron. I loved that house, and never would have left it if it hadn't been for Hitler. When I returned from overseas, I discovered my parents had moved, swishing a leafy tree branch behind them to erase their footprints.

Anyway, the other evening I returned to Port Huron to take Mother and Aunt Madeline out to dinner. (Since I got my BankAmericard, Mother is no longer sorry that I ultimately found her new home.) On the way to the restaurant, we drove by 1020 Pine Grove Ave.

As a custom, I braked the car into a gunnedition. That's when I saw the huge hole in the roof. It looked like the type hole firemen always chop into roofs, even when the fire is in the basement.

There wasn't time to stop and investigate, but now here I am, back in Detroit, hurting for my old home. Was I gutted by fire? Most important, was the maid's room damaged?

That's where I slept. It was not as sexy as it sounds. Before the Depression, my family could afford a maid. She was laid off in 1934 and hasn't been called back yet. But her bedroom was called the maid's room forever after, even after I slept in it for 10 years.

It was mother's way of keeping a tenuous hold on a grander past. If it were always the maid's room, there was always the hope the maid might return. Mother wouldn't have to wash windows anymore, and I could sleep in a cot in the basement.

Whatever I loved that little room, and the pang will not subside. Someone in Port Huron had better reassure me about what happened at 1020 Pine Grove Ave.

An of my maimed finger, it is now a mess. The key is modest. I have paid for my go in capital letters.

from the Central Michigan University Biological Station.

The fish was great and the company even better, ending a myth I had held to be true that science majors were mostly dull people.

From there we went back to that fatid campground and, armed with a tent, proceeded to camp out for the night. It did rain, but I was dry this time around.

In the morning we prepared for what my friend labeled a "healthy" seven-mile hike back to St. James. Mentally gearing up for the walk, I helped her pack the back pack and clean up the campsite.

And then we were off, full of vim, vigor and vitality. About 300 feet along on the seven-mile trek, a pickup truck stopped and the driver asked if we wanted a ride into town. Without any hesitation, we jumped in the back and were in town in a mere five minutes.

Determined to get our exercise, we walked a mile to the township park to investigate the camping sites for future trips. Again on our way back a car stopped and picked us up.

"It's not a matter of pride that you walk, is it," the driver asked us. Evidently it wasn't, because we hopped right in the car.

I can remember times when I've had to hitch hike and it seemed like the world would end before anyone would give me a ride. But on Beaver Island they stop and ask you if you need one, no matter if you're hitch hiking or not. Friendlier people are hard to find.

"What's so bad about ironing?" she grinned.

"No one does it," I snapped. "Did you ever see the women on soap operas iron? They're just normal, American housewives. But do you ever see them in front of an ironing board? No! They're out having abortions, committing murder, blackmailing their boss, undergoing surgery, having fun! If you weren't chained to this ironing board you, too, could be out doing all sorts of exciting things."

"Like what?" she chuckled, pressing the wrinkle out of a pair of sweat socks and folding them neatly.

"You could give Thursday parties, learn to scuba dive, learn hotel management while sitting under a hair dryer, have an affair with the Avon lady's unemployed brother-in-law, sing along with Jack Lalanne, collect antique barbed wire, take a course in Hebrew Flower Arranging, start chain letters...I don't know, woman, use your imagination!"

I read the newspaper ad again. It intrigued me, so that I dialed the number and waited.

"Hello, Mrs. Breck speaking..."

Son of a gun. It sure makes you feel good when you had a part in someone's success, doesn't it?

Meet Charlevoix

...June Cross

June Cross was chairman of the Charlevoix Women's Club bicentennial project, the preservation and improvement of Lake Michigan Park and beach. The project is on-going, and this week the Courier talks with Mrs. Cross about what has been accomplished to date, and plans for the future.

COURIER: Who owns Lake Michigan Park?

CROSS: The City of Charlevoix. The property was deeded to the City by Amos and Esther Fox in 1882, to be used by the citizens for recreational purposes, and kept in a natural setting.

COURIER: What does the park consist of?

CROSS: It covers about 15 acres. The east end contains the City supervised bathing beach, parking area, and rest rooms. The remainder of the beach, to the west, is a favorite Petokey stone hunting ground, and is also used for swimming, sunning, or just relaxing. Adjacent to the beach is a partially wooded bluff cut by a number of small ravines.

COURIER: Why does the park need rejuvenation?

CROSS: Because it became an eyesore and health hazard. Piles of garbage were being left on the grounds, broken glass covered the area, rats were running around, and the area was completely overgrown with brush.

COURIER: Why did the Women's Club select this project for the bicentennial?

CROSS: Because of the above facts, and because of the historic background of the area. A Woodland Indian trail once ran along the same dunes toward Norwood.

COURIER: What are your specific plans for the beach and park areas?

CROSS: First, a general cleanup, which has largely been accomplished by members of the club as well as other local persons and organizations. We recently received the help of four CETA employees to carry on along these lines. We have repaired the steps running from the bluff to the beach, started putting wood chips on the trails, and are building the ramp from the parking lot for handicapped people. The next phase will include preventive measures against wind and water erosion, paving the parking lot and placing benches and picnic tables. We have other long range plans, too.

COURIER: How is this work being financed?

CROSS: The City of Charlevoix voted to spend up to $20,000 if we could get matching federal or state funds. So far we have received $5,900 from the Department of Natural Resources and have been granted, but not yet received, about $7,000 from the Northwest Michigan Resource Conservation & Development Project.

COURIER: How did you secure these funds?

CROSS: It took a lot of paper work, going from one agency to another, being turned down, re-applying, getting letters from professionals such as Ed Beutner, a geologist, John Campbell, a landscape architect, and William Grimm of the Soil Conservation Service. We did all the paper work and log work for the City. We spent $1,200 for a conceptual design for the park and for a topographic map. We raised the $1,200 through book sales, meals and mileage.

The resolution was introduced by outgoing Alderman Robert Tumms and applied only to those aldermen and the mayor who were newly elected and had not voted on the resolution in effect giving themselves a raise.

The salaries and mileage and travel costs earned by the current mayor and aldermen during the 1976-77 fiscal year were: Mayor Edward Hansen, $4,220; Sue Erber, $600; Joe Morris, $600; George Plumm, $600; Jeannine Wallace, $600; Ivan Whitely, $450; and Ray Wood, $507.

Mrs. Erber, Mrs. Wallace and Morris were the first council members to come under the new salary schedule. However, they did not enter office until the middle of the fiscal year, so they only received half of the new $1,200 annual salary.

Other expenses of the council and mayor and how they compared with the 1975-76 fiscal year follow:

Letters to the editor

Janet Begrow expresses feelings about Charlevoix

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is an essay written by Janet Begrow, a Charlevoix student attending Michigan State University. In the piece entitled, "Heritage Hill," she describes her feelings about the development of the area, a subject that evokes strong emotions from residents and visitors to our community.

HERITAGE HILL
By Janet Begrow

It was a long way to the top of the hill and he was tired and worn. But he puffed away crunching the leaves beneath his moccasins as he threaded his way through the trees. He reached the summit, took a long deep breath and turned. The wind caught his face and froze his brown wrinkled skin into place. His eyes sparkled like a young man's his face showed wisdom and pride.

This weathered warrior looked out over the land—like was Chief McSaubu and this was his home. Below, the multi-colored trees shimmered in the setting sunlight. On one side of him was Lake Michigan, fierce and vicious, crashing its waves on the sandy beach in rebellion of its barriers. Beyond the valley was Lake Charlevoix which extended its diamond studded tentacles for miles to the east.

The only sound to break the whistle of the wind was Chief McSaubu's deep heavy sigh which started at the bottom of his heart and flowed through his body into the roots of life itself.

The echo remained. "This is my home."

That was Charlevoix 200 years ago. The town was only a settlement of proud Indians and rugged missionaries. There were no big barges or condominiums. There were no streets or houses.

Today Charlevoix is a lively, exciting resort town. Tourists have been renamed "Fudgies" because of their frequent use of the town's novel fudge store. These Fudgies clatter about the streets stopping to feed the ducks, snap pictures of the drawbridge going up, or gaze in one of the many curious little shops.

They come from Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati to lounge in white cushioned wicker chairs on the veranda of their elite clubhouse. They come from Detroit, Flint and Grand Rapids to stretch out on a secluded sandy beach on either Lake Michigan of Lake Charlevoix. They come to build memories of laughter and new experiences in a timeless zone.

Some of the people who have always lived in Charlevoix have a different perception of what has become of their home since the time of Chief McSaubu. I found this poem which appeared as an advertisement in the Charlevoix Courier one summer.

IN MEMORIAM
(to Charlevoix)
1778-1978

Died a violent death.
One of the most beautiful bays in the world.

Its stately trees uprooted,
Its shoreline gouged and converted by bulldozers
Into gravel pits and quarry roads
Its wildlife destroyed.
Its quiet beauty lost forever.

MAY ALL OF US WHO HAVE robbed future generations of their inheritance, learn from this sad experience; MERE OWNERSHIP OF LAND DOES NOT GIVE MAN THE RIGHT TO OUTRAGE IT...

Charlevoix has indeed transformed considerably since the time of Chief McSaubu, but it is still an enchanted quaint resort town. Some people who have lived in Charlevoix all their lives feel that Charlevoix has been destroyed by all the new construction and continual flow of vacationers. I feel that Charlevoix has only matured and grown through the years enabling it to bring a little more happiness to more people. The new condominiums, homes and offices have enabled those who live here to stay here. The new expanded shops, new parking areas, and shopping arcade have opened up a means of income for those who depend on the tourist industry so that they may stay here also.

Charlevoix, even through its many changes, has not lost its mystery. The essence of Indian lore and beauty permeate the air and settle into the bones of all who come here.

I grew up in Charlevoix. I've watched many people come here. I've watched many people leave and go back to their cities. Every one of them have whispered, "I shall be back."

Now, as I reach the top of the summit which has now been named Mt. McSaubu, I too gaze over the lakes and valleys and crimped sparkling trees and sigh, "I will always return here to remember, to forget and to appreciate God's gifts. Yes, this is my home."

IT'S THAT SIMPLE!

THE SIMPLE INTEREST INSTALLMENT LOAN IS NOW AVAILABLE.

Here's how it works:

With a simple interest installment loan, you pay interest on only the amount of money you owe.

Pay early - Pay Less

If you make your payments sooner than the due date, you'll pay less interest.

Pay more - Pay Less

If you make more than one payment during each month, you'll pay less interest.

Pay extra - Pay Less

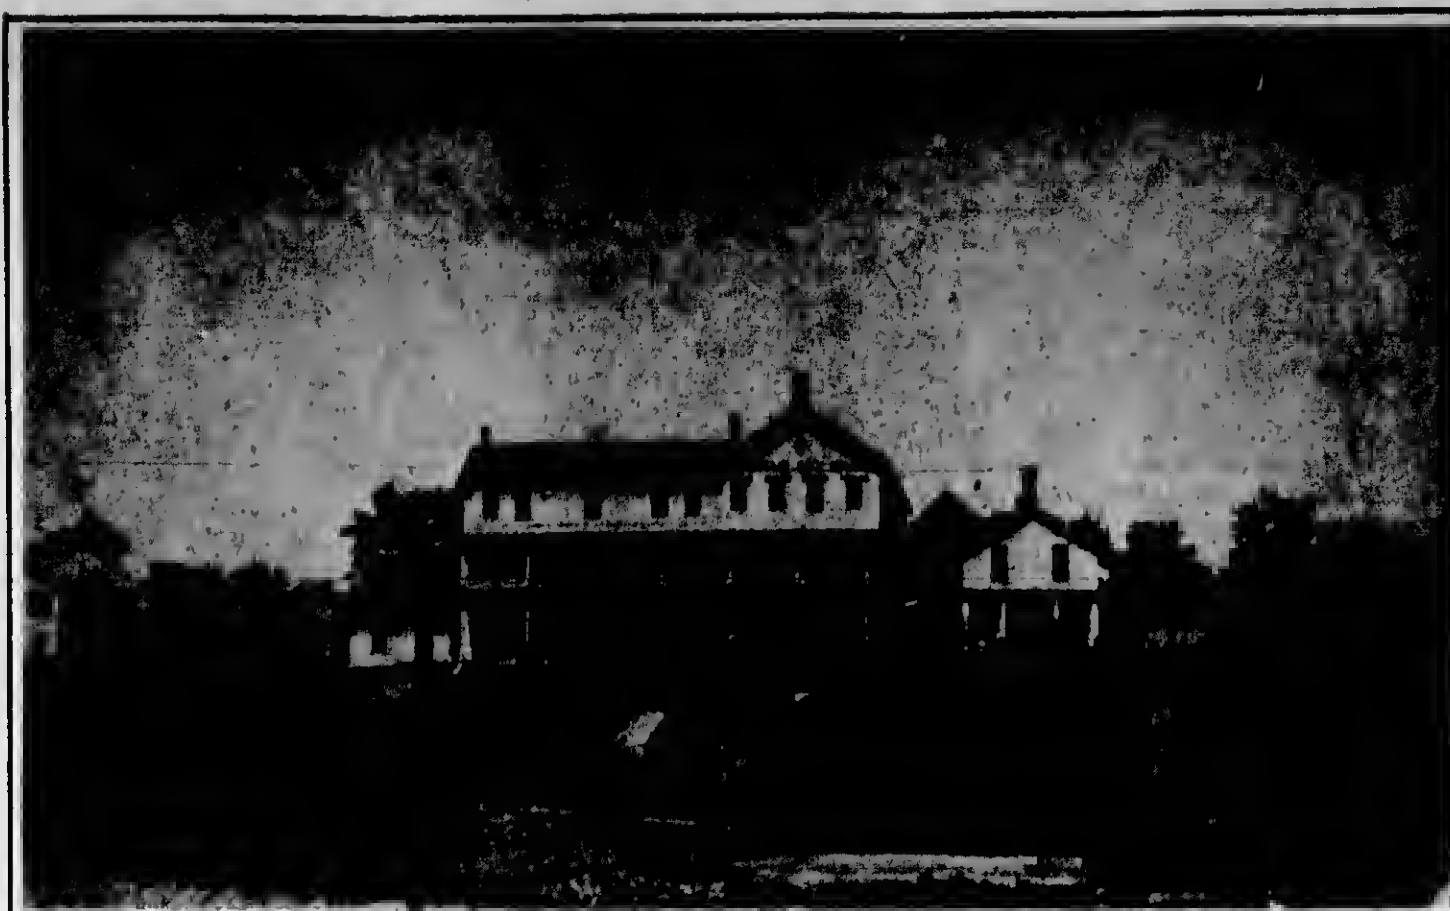

If you pay, for example, ten or twenty dollars extra on each payment, that extra amount is applied against the principal and that saves you interest!

Here's where to get your simple interest loan:

New newspapers in county possible, but not reality yet

The names East Jordan News Herald, Boyne Citizen and Boyne Publishing Company have been registered with the Charlevoix County clerk's office under new assumed names for businesses in the county.

George A. Colburn, who has a summer home near Walloon Lake, registered the names with the clerk, but he said he isn't going to start any new newspapers in the county, at least not right away.

"I have thought about going into business in the Boyne City area because I like the area and because I have a home near Walloon Lake," Colburn explained in a telephone interview from his office at the University of California.

"And those were the names that I wanted to be mine if and when I go into business," Colburn, who is the director of the Newspaper in the Classroom project for the University of California, has been in the newspaper and book publishing business all his life. He is the author of one book.

He has also served as an instructor at Michigan State University and as a city councilman in East Lansing. Colburn said he has a number of friends in the communications business and that he and his friends have talked about going into business for several years.

"It's still very indefinite, but I've been thinking more definitely about it now that I'm approaching 40," he quipped.

"If the opportunity for starting a book and magazine publishing company or for opening a newspaper came up in that area, I would start one. But at this I'm just planning for a business opportunity for my golden years." Businessmen must register their names with the county clerk every five years.

Apprenticeships can increase people's chance of getting jobs

It seems like a good job is not so easy to find these days. But an apprenticeship or technical training can increase your chances. Competition for apprenticeships is less. They usually involve from two to five years of on-the-job training as well as some formal classroom experience. Technical training can be on the job or in a technical school or college. It can run from one year on up to continuing education for some jobs.

If you have been thinking about becoming a chef, a cosmetologist, a medical assistant or any other occupation field that requires apprenticeship or technical training, send for one of the new booklets made available by the U.S. Department of Labor. Jobs for Which Apprenticeships Are Available (681E) describes the kinds and lengths of apprenticeships offered for over 50 occupations. Jobs

Requiring Junior College or Technical Training* (680E) gives qualifications and training requirements for more than 35 occupations. Both booklets also give employment trends for each job through 1985. For your free copy of either or both booklets, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009. Please note the item number (s).

Although they vary widely from state to state, here are some basic requirements for apprenticeship positions:

—Plumbers and Pipefitters. Usually you need to be at least 16 years old to apply for a plumbing apprenticeship. It takes five years to complete with on-the-job training and at least 144 hours of related classroom instruction each year. Prospects for employment look good.

—Cosmetologists. To apply for a cosmetology license you need to be at least 16 years old; you must complete the 10th grade; and you usually need to finish a State-approved cosmetology course. However, some states will accept an apprenticeship in lieu of a cosmetology course. Employment prospects are about average.

—Medical Assistants. Training may be obtained in vocational high schools or institutes and in junior colleges. Most medical assistants also receive training in a physician's office. Employment prospects are excellent, particularly if the medical assistants have graduated from accredited junior college programs.

—Carpenters. Apprenticeship applications must be at least 17 years old, and it is helpful to have a high school or vocational diploma. The program is 4 years of on-the-job training plus a minimum of 144 hours of classroom instruction each year. Employment prospects are average. —Roofers. You must be at least 18 years old, and a high school education or its equivalent is important. The program lasts three years, with a minimum of 1,400 hours of on-the-job training, in addition to 144 hours of classroom instruction in subjects like blueprint reading, mathematics, and safety. Apprentice roofers will have very good job prospects.

Jobs for Which Apprenticeships Are Available (free) and Jobs Requiring Junior College or Technical Training (free) are two of over 200 selected federal consumer publications listed in The Consumer Information Catalog. The Catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, and it is free. For your copy, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 65 E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Summer's the time to think about winter energy saving plans

Sure, you turn the heat down to save energy when you go to bed. But getting up to turn it back up in the morning is a bear. Have you considered getting a timer for your thermostat? It will turn your heat down at night and back up before you get up in the morning. A timer can save you energy and money on your heating bill. And cold toes. To learn more energy saving ideas, get a copy of the free booklet, Tips for Energy Savers. Send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 591 E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

If your window had a five-inch square hole letting in cold air, you'd fix it, right? Well, you may be letting in that much air if you have an eight-inch space around your outside door and no weatherstripping. That's costing you a lot of money. If you really want to save, weather strip your windows as well. You'll be warmer and your bills will be lighter. Want do-it-yourself ways to save energy? Get a copy of the Bank of Up the Chimney. It's $1.70 from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 64 E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009. Been up in your unheated attic on a cold day? If you weren't really cold, you need more insulation. Most home heat that is wasted is lost through the attic. You need at least six inches of insulation so you're not having the outside. And in some areas of the country, you need more. To figure out how much insulation you need, whether you need storm windows and doors, and how much all this will cost, get a copy of Making the Most of Your Energy Dollars. It's 70 cents from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 65 E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Several new types of exhibits will be on display along with a mixture of sculpture, pottery, batik, oil, watercolor and acrylic painting.

glass and hand-blown glass. Also, Larry Oughton, who specializes in porcelain raku pottery, will be giving demonstrations of face masks during the afternoon. He will be making masks from faces of people in the park.

Pigeons pondered as postmen

A postman with wings and feathers may be called into action if the cost of delivery mail and messages continues to soar.

Some people in England are suggesting homing pigeons as the answer to rising postage costs. Says a homer expert: "Once you are established, the cost of running a pigeon post is incredibly low."

A small package service is even more imminent. A hospital in Plymouth, England, already has decided to test pigeon parcel post. The feathered couriers will fly specimen vials from the hospital to a central laboratory in the city for analysis.

Pigeons Promise Savings
Taxis now deliver the specimens, and would still come to the rescue if bad weather grounded the birds. As many as 20 hospitals in the Plymouth district eventually may use pigeons, saving thousands of dollars in taxi fares.

Humans have been using the homing pigeon's remarkable navigation instinct to provide fast communication for centuries.

Many think Noah had the idea first. The Bible says he released a dove after the flood, and it returned with an olive twig. But bird fanciers insist a dove doesn't "home," so it must have been a pigeon.

Egyptians were breeding special strains of messenger pigeons as early as 3000 B.C. The winged heralds sped the names of Greek Olympic victors to their home cities. The Roman naturalist Pliny marveled at the immense price and prestige commanded by the birds: "Nay, they are come to this pass, that they can reckon up their pedigree and race." The Sultan of Baghdad linked his empire with a pigeon post system in 1150. Seven centuries later, a message-carrying pigeon started Paul Julius Reuter on his way to founding a global news service. And just a few years ago a newsmen had his photographic film of a moon shot airlifted to the office by a homer.

Fly for Sport
Today, most pigeons fly just for sport. Organized racing began in Belgium in the early 1800s and soon spread. Fan-ciers breed and race their own birds. Even Queen Elizabeth of England has her own pigeon loft.

Training begins when birds are about four weeks old. First they sit in the loft. Then they "roam" on their own nearby. Finally owners take them on longer and longer trips before releasing them.

In races, specially banded birds are taken in crates to a starting point and released. When each bird comes home, its owner removes the band and inserts it into a device that records the time. Distance from starting point to loft is measured; times are checked and the bird that made it home fastest wins.

When all goes well, a homer can clip along at 35 to 70 miles an hour. With the right wind, birds have been clocked as fast as 90 miles an hour. Flights of more than a thousand miles are common for mature racers, and one United States Army pigeon made a 2,300-mile flight

Alderman Erber advised Council that City ambulance divers will be taking an eighty hour first aid course from Dr. Custer in conjunction with Charlevoix Hospital. This course will be mandatory for all ambulance drivers. There will be twelve or thirteen drivers taking the course from Dr. Custer at the cost of $75.00 per person.

Alvin Ranger, City Building Inspector, appeared before Council to discuss the Charlevoix Municipal Airport Master Plan. He stated that copies of the proposed plan had been sent to the governmental agencies involved for their recommendations and approval, but that certain areas of the study are not complete and that there is further work to be done on the plan. He urged the Council to act on the proposed contract as soon as possible as a Federal grant can be received. The City Attorney pointed out that the proposed contract made no provision for the Township sharing in the cost of separating City storm and sanitary sewers. The matter was referred to the Committee of the Whole meeting to be held on August 1, 1977 for further discussion.

Moved by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Wallace that the City use Anti-Recession Funds in the amount of $5,368.00 in the September payroll. Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas: Aldermen Whitley, Erber, Wallace, Morris, Plumm, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: None.

What would happen if the lights went out here?

By Paula Holmes
What would happen in Charlevoix if the lights went out?

Well, as the old saying goes, when the lights go out, you're in the dark.

And while that may be humorous, it wasn't so funny to the millions of New York City residents who were left in the dark for 24 hours when a series of lightning bolts combined with an electrical system strained to capacity by hot weather, shut down Consolidated Edison.

Consolidated Edison supplies all the electricity for the Big Apple. The latest blackout was the second time in a dozen years that the electric company and the city had found themselves in the dark.

Could the same thing happen in Charlevoix?

It's very unlikely, according to John Keane, district public affairs director for Consumer's Power Company, which sells electricity to the City of Charlevoix.

Keane explained that Consumer's generation and transmission sources are more widely distributed than Consolidated Edison's.

"I'm not knocking the New York system, it is a real fine system," Keane said. "But over the years, we have looked at our system and tried to figure out what the extremes are."

"We have tried to take into account anything that could happen and tried to find a way to prevent it. We have one of the finest transmission systems in the business."

Keane said Consumer's Power and Detroit Edison make up the Michigan power pool. The two companies are also a part of the American Electric Power group and they can draw power from the New England States and Niagara Mohawk if they need some extra power on peak days.

He pointed out that New York City is covered by water on one side and so has no other power sources to draw from in an emergency.

"We're surrounded by other power companies," he said. "We have a working agreement with other companies within the industry that if they need help with some major repairs we will be there and if we need help, they will come," Keane explained. He said that when the severe ice storm paralyzed southeastern Michigan two years ago, repairmen from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio came to this state to aid with the repairs.

Keane pointed out that utility lines are not that extensive and can be handled by Consumer's repairmen within a matter of hours.

But of Consumer's couldn't get its lines fixed for an extended period of time, the City of Charlevoix is ready. James Whitley, superintendent of the electrical department, said the city has a 1,000 kilowatt diesel-powered generator that could supply some electricity to certain areas of the town.

Some trunks run to the Wastewater Treatment Plant, to businesses with refrigerators in the downtown area and certain other crucial places, Whitley said. These places would continue to operate even if the blackout started.

He said it takes four to six hours to get the generator operating.

Whitley said the city is planning to put all trunks underground in the near future so that they cannot be knocked out during severe weather.

Safety for the city's residents in case of a blackout would be well provided for, according to Charlevoix Police Chief Jack Mol. Mol said the Charlevoix

Insects, disease hide in souvenirs Invaders strike country through suitcases

Every 12 minutes an enemy is stopped at a U.S. border. Sometimes the invader turns up in the luggage of an unsuspecting traveler.

The "enemies" are insects and disease organisms that hide in souvenirs—a box of peaches from Rome or a bonnet from the Orient—and are often escorted by tourists who don't realize the threat they pose to the country's crops, livestock, and trees. Last year pests and disease cost taxpayers $12 billion in damage and control measures in this country.

Guarding the Gates
America's main line of defense against foreign pests is 600 Department of Agriculture inspectors stationed at more than 80 ports of entry. At the request of a customs agent, an inspector will search anything from a backpack to a commercial shipment to find potential troublemakers.

Even so, the pests sneak by. A small box cost taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars after slipping through quarantine inspection in 1966 with three giant African snails in his pocket. The snails later escaped from his Miami, Florida, home and reproduced. More than 100,000 snails—half descendants of the original pair—were destroyed in the six years it took to eradicate the pest. Their legacy: a path of destroyed fruit, vegetables, and flowers. Sick parrots from South America are believed to have been responsible for exposing California poultry to exotic Newcastle disease in 1971. In the two-year program to stamp out the disease, more than 31 million birds were destroyed at a cost of $50 million.

Customs inspectors are especially on the lookout for citrus and tropical fruits, which could carry fruit flies, and meat products, which could be contaminated with foot-and-mouth disease. "Foot-and-mouth disease is a highly contagious disease," said "It is as fatal as tuberculosis is to people."

Eye Out for Smugglers
A last-minute attempt to smuggle contraband souvenirs can mean embarrassment—and even a fine—for the traveler, says Robert Forsyth, supervisory customs inspector at Dulles International Airport near Washington.

"We can usually tell if they're hiding something by their expressions and the way they answer questions," he said. "Sometimes they get mad when they're told their souvenirs are going to be destroyed."

American tourists tempted by a Nile crocodile purse or a leopard skin coat in one of those Paris boutiques should save their money; those items are made from endangered species and won't be admitted to the United States without special permits.

Some souvenirs that can't be brought home without permits are tortoise shell jewelry, carved whale teeth, coats made from skins of Children reviving tree house tradition

By now it is probably the world's most famous tree house, the hideout Amy Carter perches in behind the White House.

By now any number of fathers, big brothers, and neighborhood do-it-yourselfers are being pestered for old boards and maybe a little help with the hammer.

And with kids' taking measure of the tall maple trees in the empty lot—the tree that up to now has had to put up with only the old truck tire swinging on the rope—building inspectors are flipping through building codes.

This latest White House event has unofficially inaugurated one of the yearly warm weather pursuits of many Americans, mostly those still young enough to shilly a sapling: building a tree house.

Serious students of the endeavor have tried to use words to tell about a tree house. But anybody who has ever climbed up to one, built one, or fallen out of one knows what a tree house is.

A tree house is where to go to get away from it all, a place to be overpowered by an attack of daydreaming, a place to hide out with buddies and get a new slant on life at age 9 or 12 or whatever.

Screened by leaves, unseen by all but the nosy bird or squirrel, a tree house is still near enough to hear a call to dinner, though beyond range of a summons to mow the grass.

A tree house is also a refuge from natural enemies, as many a jungle tribe knows. A refuge from kid brothers, a peppy would-be girl friends, and from neighborhood bullies whose threats are grounded when the ladder is pulled up.

Because of tree houses, nothings may worry about broken collar bones, and wonder whether daughters are ever going to quit being tomboys. Fathers may get nostalgic about tree houses, even envious.

Tree House Kit
With a call for more father and son togetherness, a newspaper ad offers a $284 pre-cut tree house kit, promising it can be nailed into a tree in only a weekend afternoon.

To traditionalists, this is heresy. Tree houses usually start with a couple of usually two-by-fours framed into the catch of a tree. Approved building material is scrap lumber, or at least boards and nails scrounged at no cost. Trap doors and pull-up ladders are refinements.

Ingenuity may lead to garden-hose water supply and extension-cord power for lights and portable television. Long-saved allowances may finance elaborate arboreal dwellings of several rooms with sinks and even fireplaces.

Building inspectors may take an "I was a boy once myself" attitude to tree houses, or hard-heartedly they may decline to look the other way, usually when prodded by an anti-tree house neighbor.

But all inspectors suggest applying for a building permit, if only to be sure tree houses are safely put together.

Amy Carter's tree house was put together by White House carpenters out of "inexpensive" lumber. It is a

5-by-4-foot platform, supported in a venerable Atlas cedar on the South lawn by four posts about five feet high. It is not nailed to the tree, but is accessible by climbing lower branches. Architectural advice was provided by Amy's father, who some years back used to be the occupant of a Plains, Georgia, pecan tree.

How come no rope ladder, Amy?

Petoskey, Michigan

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun preads its radiance over the waters, it is indeed lovely from its vantage point on the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands. The setting sun provides a spectacular show the Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers of settlers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all.

Very few who have seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line.

On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset.

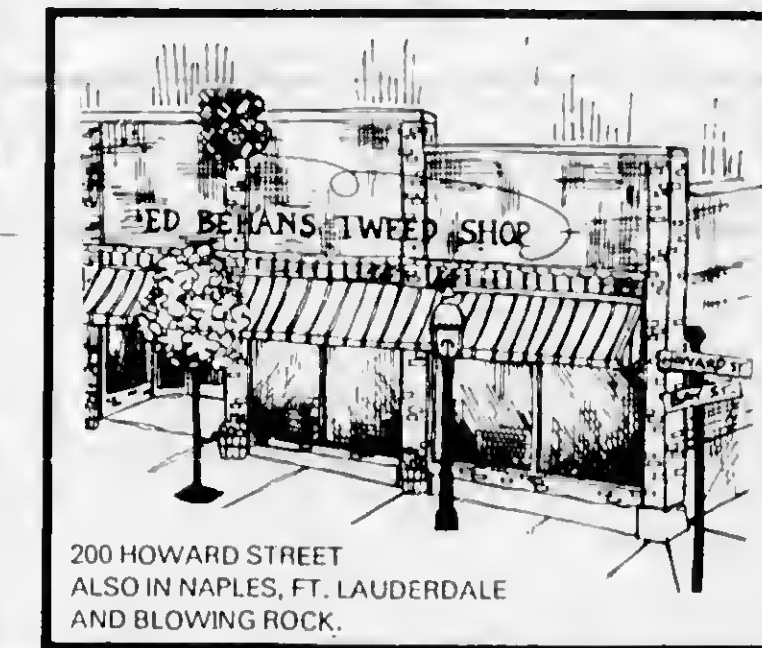

The megaphone of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small Indian settlement at the mouth of Bear River, to a dynamic, busy Indian catering to the needs of sightseers and homebounders. To house the visitors, the Arlington and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Rooms houses for the less affluent were soon to follow.

By 1890 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flour mills, hardwood flooring industries, butter bowl factories, and furniture-making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town.

Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and rooming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Inland Route. This lengthy excursion took the trolley up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan, and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Conway. Until the quaint little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and team.

In 1880 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1900's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new fangled summer resorts spelled the doom of the delightful little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon.

Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnetism remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

Voting made easier than ever

If voter apathy was the day and puts the next President in the White House, it won't be because it is too hard to cast a ballot.

Voting in America has become easier through the years, struggling to overcome confusing election dates, prejudice, loophole law-breaking, and ballot box stuffing.

Democrats and Republicans alike fear that analysis of the election may show that efforts to get out the vote have been thwarted by non-voting citizens.

As election day dawned, about 150,000,000 Americans were eligible to vote, about 70 percent of them, or some 105,000,000 had registered, and predictions on how many would actually cast their ballots ranged from 49 to 61 percent.

Turned-out Voters in the 1972 Presidential election, only 55 percent of eligible voters cast their ballots, the figure approaching the all-time low turnout of 50 percent in the 1948 victory of Harry S. Truman over Thomas E. Dewey.

Some 82 percent of the 1972 votes were cast by professional people such as doctors, engineers, and lawyers, and 78 percent by farmers to lead voters with other occupations. Men voted women 64 to 62 percent. Seventy percent voted among those eligible aged 45 to 64, and 48 percent of the youngest voters, aged 18 to 20. Eighty-six percent of graduate students led voting in 1972 according to educational background, compared with 82 percent of college graduates, and 65 percent of those who finished high school.

Turnouts were much bigger on the election days of the last century. Starting with only 27 percent of the eligible voters casting their ballots in 1824, the voting jumped to 58 percent in 1828. By 1840 the turnout was 80 percent, and it never dropped below 70 percent for the remainder of the century.

Election analysts point out that a more exclusive electorate, which lured blacks, women, young people, and citizens without property, may have been the explanation for the high figures, not necessarily greater civic mindedness.

By 1900, Americans voted by voice in the colonial tradition until years after the Revolution, with people announcing their choices out loud and subject to the comments and often jeers of eavesdropping bystanders.

Pepper in short supply

The high cost of black pepper, America's most popular spice, is nothing to sneeze at.

The wholesale price of the seasoning recently soared to $14.03 a pound. The retail cost is about $2.75 a pound in the familiar four-ounce tins.

The price hasn't hurt pepper's popularity, however. In 1975 the United States imported a record 51 million pounds of the spice valued at $37.5 million. Most of it came from India, Brazil, Indonesia, and Malaysia.

A statistically minded pepper fan put it another way: "Americans are using nearly 200 more black pepper pinches a year than we did as recently as 1965. And if you rule out

Secret ballots eventually were adopted by all the states, but when New York first tried them in 1852 they were abandoned and denounced because they "insulted the nobility and independence of the laboring man."

Paper ballots were first produced by the political parties themselves, printed on colored paper so poll-watchers among the party faithful could little non-pinchers, the adult pepper pinching rate may well be increased a pinch a day."

Pepper in short supply

Too Coarse for Shaker Those who add a pinch of the seasoning to their favorite dish with their fingers often get a better shake than many pepper users. A lot of pepper is ground more coarsely these days and the holes in many old-fashioned pepper shakers just aren't able to cope.

"Even normal grind isn't as fine as it was before World War II," reports the American Spice Trade Association. "Larger than normal is 'coarse grind' black pepper, and coarsest of all is cracked black pepper or 'butcher's grind.'"

Wild pepper vines when left unattended grow to some 20 feet. Cultivated ones are cut to about half that height, with better yields.

Berries turn from green to red. After they are dried by sun or fire, they become black, wrinkled peppercorns. Then they are ready for export and grinding.

Pepper has been cultivated for food and fortune throughout recorded history. The ancient Egyptians left peppercorns in tombs, along with food for the deceased. Early Greeks, Romans, and Hindus prized the condiment. When Alauk, the Gobi stormer, Rome in 110, he demanded pepper along with gold and silver tribute.

Kusina, Dairy Queen still tied

The neck-in-neck race between the top two contenders for the Charlevoix Women's Six-Pitch League title continued last week. Kusina Motors and Dairy Queen both won their games last week to continue a tie that has been broken only once this season. Kusina Motors dropped Village Inn Plaza 14-3 during play last week. Pam Parcel was the winning pitcher with eight hits while Marge Carey took the loss on 15 hits.

Tammy Mitchell belted in a home run for Kusina. The Dairy Queen defeated the County State Bank team 10-3. Cindy Kitley took the win on 11 hits while Jodi Alger was credited with the loss on 10 hits.

In other action, Tri-City Asphalt went one for one last week. The team tied Ken tucky Fried Chicken 24-10. Clara Martin took the win on a mere nine hits while Carla Sienkora had the loss on 16 hits. Jackie Habel had a home run for Kentucky Fried.

Tri-City dropped one to the Topside 10-8. Carol Vasellou took the win in that contest on eight hits while Sue Vidon took the loss also on eight hits.

Topside had a hot week as the team also defeated Medusa 27-5. Carol Vasellou was again the winning pitcher, this time on only five hits while Carol White took the loss on 19 hits.

Sherrie Sellasen had one home run and Lee Mowryak had two for the Topside.

However, Topside's momentum ran down as they dropped a game to Village Inn Plaza, 11-3. Marge Carey had the win on a mere seven hits and Carol Vasellou took the loss on 13 hits.

Judy Lynn Adams weds Robert Joseph Murray

The First Congregational Church of Charlevoix was the setting for the wedding of Judy Lynn Adams and Robert Joseph Murray, Jr. on July 30.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John William Adams of Mt. Clemens and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Murray of Charlevoix.

The Reverend Raymond Giffin performed the double-ring ceremony before 100 guests. Mr. Adams gave his daughter in marriage. Giant daisies and Fuji mums decorated the altar and there were white and yellow daisies on each pew.

The bride's gown was white silk organza over peau de sole with a bodice of lace and seed pearls and an illusion veil and chapel train. Her bouquet was of white daisies and roses with an ivy cascade.

Fawn Schroeder, wearing a pale yellow gown of silk organza with sheer cape and head dress, served as maid of honor. Patricia Adams, sister of the bride, Donna Salagan, and Tina Moore were bridesmaids. Their gowns were of pale green silk organza with sheer cape and head dress. They carried bouquets of daisies and roses.

Robert Westfall served as best man and groomsmen were David and John Murray, brothers of the bridegroom, and Richard Radtke, Bruce and Chris Murray, twin cousins of the bridegroom, ushered the guests.

Kimberly Ann Kierman was flower girl. Her costume was pale yellow, matching that of the maid of honor. She carried a basket of daisies. Trevor Adams served as ringbearer.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Adams wore a pale green polyester gown with a sheer cape. Mrs. Murray's gown was of beige Quiana.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the garden of the groom's parents. The newlyweds flew to Beaver Island for the weekend and will honeymoon in Florida later. They are at home in Kalkaska.

He is married to the former Margaret Kroll and they have two children, Amanda, 18, and Christopher, 5. The family lives at 216 Belvedere Ave.

Alcoholism strikes everywhere

It may be something that you haven't thought a whole lot about until a dear friend takes you into her confidence. But, your mind and heart will be opened when she tells you that she is an admitted alcoholic and is actively working to combat this illness.

Distressing as this may be, the experience may cause you to be more honest about your own drinking.

Alcoholism is a treatable disease and is no more a sign of weakness or moral disipation than diabetes or German measles. Alcoholism has very little to do with when you drink, how long you've been drinking, or even how much alcohol you consume. What makes women vulnerable to alcoholism, and how to treat the disease effectively are discussed in a new booklet from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. For a copy of "Alcohol Abuse and Women", send 35 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 38E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

The sponsor you recognize a drinking problem in yourself.

Has someone close to you sometimes expressed concern about your drinking? When faced with a problem, do you often turn to alcohol for relief? Are you sometimes unable to meet home or work responsibilities because of drinking? Have you ever required medical attention as a result of drinking? Have you ever experienced a blackout—a total loss of memory while still awake—when drinking? Have you often failed to keep the promises you have made to yourself about controlling or cutting out your drinking?

If you've answered yes to any of these questions, then your drinking is probably affecting your life in some major ways and you should do something about it before it gets worse.

Treatment for an alcohol problem doesn't simply involve taking away the bottle and sending you on your way. The aim of treatment is to make you a stronger, happier, more self-aware person who doesn't need alcohol to function. It will help you learn to understand and deal with the fears, feelings of inadequacy, tensions and other conflicts that contribute to your drinking problem.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Oltvee of Detroit are spending the summer in their home on Washington Street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison of Middletown, Ohio, are spending several days in their local home.

We are extending congratulations and best wishes to our local high school graduates who are: Thomas Bennett, Calle Cooper, Nancy Podskalny, Kevin Kemp, Scott Kemp, Rimmona Oudekirk, Diane Saunders, Laura Barry, Thomas Bacon, and William Kruse of Eastport who is our pastor's son. A reception was given in their honor in the dining room after the morning church service Sunday and each one was presented with a Bible wishing them every success in their future.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Noltzen (Edna Howe) of New Port Richey, Fla., are spending several weeks in their home on Sweet Brier Lane.

Mr. and Mrs. William Vanderwall have had their home covered with yellow aluminum siding. It looks real nice.

Mrs. Roy Fisher of Plymouth was a recent guest of her daughter, Mrs. Marian Podskalny, and family.

I was interested in reading about the boys chosen to attend Boys State in Lansing in June. In June, 1940 the Legion sponsored Sam Alexander and Don Meggison and Charles Harter and Robert Westfall by the Kiwanis. Boys attended from every county in the state and were divided in cities and set up their own government with their election of officers. It all was wonderful training in citizenship and government and learning to work together. It all will be a wonderful experience for them this year as it was then in 1940.

Mrs. Ada Williams has been transferred from the Charlevoix Hospital and is a surgical patient in Little Traverse Hospital in Potosky. She has the best wishes of all her friends and neighbors.

Over Half Our Customers Pay Off Their Loans Early. Simple Interest Saves Them Money. Why Not You Too?

AS WITH MOST LOANS, EARLY PAY-OFF SAVES INTEREST. BUT WITH CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK SIMPLE INTEREST LOANS, EXTRA OR ADDITIONAL MONTHLY PAYMENTS AND ADDITIONAL LUMP SUM PAYMENTS CAN SAVE YOU MORE INTEREST THAN WITH A CONVENTIONAL INSTALLMENT LOAN.

Simple Interest vs. Conventional Installment Loan Interest — Here's the Difference.

WITHOUT GOING INTO TOO MANY DETAILS, THE BASIC DIFFERENCE IS THIS: THOUGH BOTH CONVENTIONAL INSTALLMENT LOAN AND SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN PAYMENTS ARE CALCULATED ON THE BASIS OF A PRESCHEDULED SERIES OF MONTHLY PAYMENTS, ONLY WITH A SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN IS INTEREST RECALCULATED EACH TIME PAYMENTS ARE MADE, BASED ON DAILY INTEREST CHARGES. THIS MEANS THAT YOU PAY INTEREST ONLY ON THE BALANCE YOU OWE, NOT ON THE AMOUNT YOU BORROWED.

How a Simple Interest Loan Can Cost Less Than a Conventional Installment Loan

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS: LET'S SAY YOU BUY A NEW CAR, USE YOUR OLD CAR AS THE DOWN PAYMENT, AND FINANCE THE BALANCE OF $3,500.00. IF YOU TAKE OUT A TYPICAL 36 MONTH LOAN AT A CONVENTIONAL INSTALLMENT LOAN RATE OF 11.08% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE, YOUR MONTHLY PAYMENTS WOULD BE $114.72 AND THE COST OF THE LOAN WOULD BE $629.92 FOR THE THREE YEARS. THE SAME INITIAL COST AS A SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN AT THE SAME RATE. BUT SEE WHAT EXTRA PAYMENTS, IN ADDITION TO REGULAR MONTHLY PAYMENTS, DO TO REDUCE INTEREST COST. IF TWO MONTHS AFTER YOU BUY THE CAR, YOU PAY $200.00 IN ADDITION TO YOUR MONTHLY PAYMENT, YOU WOULD SAVE ONLY $2.84 IN TOTAL INTEREST CHARGES WITH A CONVENTIONAL INSTALLMENT LOAN. WITH A SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN FROM CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK THAT SAME EXTRA $200.00 WOULD SAVE INTEREST CHARGES TOTALING $71.33. THE CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN IS REALLY VERY SIMPLE... THE MORE YOU PAY AND THE EARLIER YOU PAY, THE MORE YOU SAVE.

Example of Interest Savings: Simple Interest vs. Conventional Installment Loans (*200.00 extra payment, in addition to regular monthly payment at two months, on a $3,500.00 thirty-six month loan.

When a Little Extra Cash Would Come in Handy, Skip a Payment

WITH THE SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN FROM C.C.S.B., YOU ALSO ENJOY THE OPTION OF SKIPPING 1 PAYMENT PER YEAR. DURING THE HOLIDAY SEASON, OR ON YOUR VACATION, OR IF AN EMERGENCY COMES UP, NATURALLY, INTEREST IS CHARGED ON THE OUTSTANDING BALANCE, BUT THERE IS NO EXTRA PENALTY FEE FOR THE SKIP-PAYMENT PRIVILEGE. YOU MAY SKIP A MONTHLY PAYMENT PROVIDED YOUR PAYMENTS ARE UP TO DATE, IF YOU HAVE MADE AT LEAST FIVE PAYMENTS.

For Your Next Loan, Make it Simple at C.C.S.B.

AND, IT'S EASY TO APPLY FOR. SO WHEN YOU DECIDE YOU WANT TO BORROW MONEY, JUST STOP IN AND TALK TO ONE OF THE LOAN OFFICERS AT THE MAIN OFFICE. IT'S THAT SIMPLE.

Pay Off Your Full Balance Without Penalty

AND IF YOU PAY OFF THE FULL BALANCE OF YOUR LOAN EARLY, YOU SAVE ALL REMAINING INTEREST CHARGES WITHOUT PAYING ANY PENALTY. SO, WITH A C.C.S.B. SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN, OUR CUSTOMERS CAN ACTUALLY CONTROL THE AMOUNT OF INTEREST THEY PAY. THE SIMPLE INTEREST LOAN FROM C.C.S.B. THE EARLIER YOU PAY, THE LESS INTEREST YOU PAY, THE MORE YOU SAVE!!!

4 area doctors attend seminar

Four Charlevoix doctors recently attended the 57th annual Collier-Penberthy-Thirby Medical Conference in Traverse City.

Drs. John Lignell, W. E. Mosher, III, Merle Plage, and G. B. Saltonstall of Charlevoix were among the 400 who heard 30 noted physicians present scientific papers on subjects ranging from sun-induced skin disorders to advances in the treatment of lung cancer.

The Munson Medical Center staff sponsors the conference each year. It has come to be recognized by physicians and medical scientists as one of the most important conferences held yearly in the United States. It also allows Michigan physicians an opportunity to earn necessary credit hours toward continuing education requirements.

Other area doctors in attendance were Dr. James Arnold of Central Lake and Dr. J. Van Dellen of Ellsworth.

Vets should apply early for benefits for school

Veterans planning to attend a school with registration in September should apply for advance pay in July, Ron Geer of the Charlevoix County Office of Veterans' Affairs advises.

For veterans to receive the advance, the school must agree to process the advance payment and the veteran must have had at least a full calendar month break between school terms, he said.

A veteran ending a term in May would not be eligible for advance pay unless he or she were re-enrolling in a term beginning after June 30.

The new advance payment procedures are the result of legislation passed by Congress last year to reduce the number of GI Bill payment abuses.

The legislation also discontinued the VA practice of making GI Bill payments at the beginning of a month rather than the end of the month after a veteran had attended school for 30 days.

New agent joins Metropolitan Life

A new agent will be representing Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in the Charlevoix area.

Bruce Livingston, 27, recently moved to Charlevoix from Kalamazoo to take the position with Metropolitan.

Livingston attended Western Michigan University and is taking training courses from Metropolitan.

He and his wife, Mary, and their two children are making their home on Newman Street in Charlevoix.

Livingston's mother is the former Laura LaBlance, who was born on Beaver Island and raised in Charlevoix.

"I spend a lot of summers in Charlevoix," Livingston said. "And I'm glad to be up here year round."

Roy Hayes re-elected to Prosecutor Assn.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Roy C. Hayes was recently re-elected to the board of directors of the Prosecuting Attorneys Association of Michigan.

The election took place during the Association's 50th annual conference, held on Mackinac Island.

The Prosecuting Attorneys Association has over 500 members, which include Michigan's 83 elected county prosecuting attorneys. Hayes was re-elected to serve the professional group for a one-year term beginning immediately.

State may discontinue bus service here

By Paula Holmes
Intercity bus service may soon come to a thing of the past for the City of Charlevoix.

Unless Charlevoix residents show more interest in using the bus service provided by Wolverine Stages, a Pellston based bus line, in conjunction with the State of Michigan, the service will be discontinued, according to Cindy Knepp of the Bureau of Urban Transportation of the Department of State Highways and Transportation.

Wolverine Stages has been running a mass transit system in Northern Michigan with the aid of state subsidies for the last three years. The bus line opened its service with a run from Mackinaw City to Boyne City in 1975. The company added a second state-funded run from Charlevoix through Petoskey a year ago. The run came through Charlevoix twice a day at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. and stopped at Veterans Memorial Park and the Charlevoix Airport.

In June, the bus company revised its Charlevoix schedule in hopes of attracting more riders. Buses began leaving the city northbound at 7:30 a.m., 11:25 a.m. and 3 p.m. A bus also began running from downtown Charlevoix to Ferry Avenue Beach in the morning and afternoons.

The revised schedule was designed to meet what the state felt were the basic transportation needs of Charlevoix residents.

"We felt the basic needs of Charlevoix residents for a bus system centered around getting to the community college in Petoskey, getting to the doctor's office and shopping," J.J. Rudnick, also of the Bureau of Urban Transportation, explained. "So we tried to adjust the schedule to the travel habits of the majority of the people."

Ms. Knepp said that during the rest of August and September the state will be studying the use of the bus system by Charlevoix residents.

"We will be trying to determine if the use is going to increase," she said. "If it doesn't we plan to discontinue service completely in October."

The transportation official said the bus company and the state are looking for support in the form of regular riders.

"We've been averaging between one and three riders a day," Ms. Knepp said. "We're looking for an increase of riders to 10 passengers a day, every day."

"If we had that number of riders, then we could operate at close to a break even point. And we would be encouraged about the possible growth of the system."

Ms. Knepp said the state and the bus company feel that they have received primarily negative reaction to the bus service from Charlevoix residents since it began operation.

"People are always asking why we run the bus if nobody rides it and they ask why a bus service is even needed," Ms. Knepp said.

And she does not think this attitude will change.

"Frankly, we don't expect that there will be any community reaction at all to the discontinuation of the service," she said.

The state agreed to subsidize various runs operated by Wolverine Stages for up to two years to help get the system off the ground. After that if the run wasn't self-supporting it was to be dropped.

So far the Mackinaw City to Boyne City run has become self-supporting, but even after an investment of $60,150 by the state the Charlevoix run has not reached a break even point.

"With the energy crisis, buses are going to become more and more important," Rudnick said. "Michigan is way ahead of many other states because we have mass transit systems already in place. We're not like other states which have yet to set the systems up."

"All we're asking people to do is on one out of every 10 trips they take, take the bus. This would represent a fuel savings of 10 percent in our state."

"And some day we may need that fuel."

Medusa reveals plans to school board members

The Charlevoix Board of Education was advised Monday night of the possibility of a conversion and expansion program at the Medusa Cement Co. plant located at South Point.

Elbert Kaiser, superintendent of the plant, and Thomas Pointner, the company's local legal advisor, told the board that the company had been conducting a feasibility and cost study regarding the proposed conversion from manufacturing cement by a wet process to a dry process. Kaiser said technology had proven that the dry process was an energy-saving process that resulted in a more efficient operation in a highly competitive field. He said the company's board of directors would make a decision later this year regarding its plans.

He went on to say that the possible conversion and expansion program had been discussed with the board of Charlevoix Township, where the plant is located, and that this board had been receptive to the idea that the company might seek an Industrial Development and Rehabilitation District rating designed to encourage construction and expansion by industry.

The creation of the Industrial and Rehabilitation District, Kaiser said, would result in greater benefits to the school district than if the program was carried out without it. Because the company pays the largest tax bill in the school district, Kaiser said the company wanted to keep the board aware of its plans. He advised the board he would keep them up to date with the plans.

If the conversion and expansion program does become a reality, it would mean the addition of 28 or 29 more employees. This, also, is of interest to the school board because of the already-overcrowded condition in the middle and high schools.

The transfer of four parcels of property from the Ellsworth School District to the Charlevoix School District in exchange for other property of comparable value was again discussed. Charles Crosser, assistant superintendent of the Char-Em School District, was present to explain what had been done to date. Mrs. Bruce Bergmann and Mrs. James F. Wilhelm who are among those asking for the land swap advised the board that they would continue to seek the land trade though the Ellsworth board had turned down the proposal last week. They propose to bring their request before the Char-Em board next week.

In other action, the board approved the expenditure of an additional $4,500 for needed additions and corrections in the middle school playground project.

Approved the release of Betty M. Henne for a maternity leave during the 1977-78 school year.

Heard a request to accept Lisa Guidi as a student on a tuition basis.

On Fish and Indians

As far as John Cross buying the fish from the Indians, good fish and lesser fish, which he will probably smoke. Well, that's nothing new, for John Cross. When my husband fished for John Cross 16 years ago, he did the same thing. So you see, John Cross is only putting across to the people who don't know their fish like my husband knows a good fish, being a good commercial fisherman, and his father before him on Beaver Island. So you see, John Cross is not putting anything over on the public, just the resellers.

Need Signs Not Recreation

I would like to know why it is that some of the more important things in Charlevoix, like signs along the roads, are not as important in this town as the recreation for people, and what not. I notice that the City still has not put up the curve signs on the Ellsworth Rd. by the Brookside Cemetery, on the large curve just before you get to the bank. Also, the large trucks coming out of Bell's Bay slow down but seldom stop. They pull right out in front of oncoming cars and they have to slow down to prevent hitting them. I think that the city should do something about these things that are more important to the safety of the people and not for the recreation of the people. Thank you.

Liked Old Time Picture

It was so lovely to see the picture of the Fountain City House in this week's Courier. We used to go there for Sunday dinner. For 50 cents we would get a complete dinner of whitefish or roast beef, mashed potatoes and gravy, corn on the cob, homemade bread and butter, coffee, milk, or tea, fritters, and ice cream and pie for dessert.

Clean Up Property

As a northsider, I am concerned with the condition of the house on Main St. and what the Charlevoix Oil Co. has let it become. If we're going to call the city, Charlevoix the Beautiful, then the ex-mayor should clean up his property. Thank You.

Where are 1976 Yearbooks?

The school year of 1978 is about to start. The year 1977 has past. The year 1976 ended and, as in past years the graduates went their way, some to college some to work etc.

However, the graduates of 1976 have not, as of this date, received their 1976 yearbooks although they have been paid for. Will the supt. of schools or the Board of Education please check on this matter and advise when and where the yearbooks will be available.

1976 being a centennial year, the yearbooks will be of historical interest 100 years from now to our ancestors.

Rare antique map collection on display at Reis Gallery

By PEG OHLF

People interested in buying, or just looking at, rare antique maps and sea charts will have an opportunity to do so this Friday evening from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Reis Gallery in Charlevoix.

Harry L. Stern of Chicago, dealer in antiquarian books, manuscripts, and maps, will be on hand during the special showing of his collection. He will also be available by appointment for two weeks.

Several early maps of Michigan are included among the 100 to be shown. One is Father Pierre Francois-Xavier Charlevoix "The Great Lakes", engraved by Paris Bellin in 1744. This was the first separately printed map of the five Great Lakes by a traveler.

There is also another Father Charlevoix map, hand-colored in outline about 1774 in Paris. The City of Detroit, a lithographic map produced in 1835, will be in the exhibit. It is based on the Woodward Plan, showing grand diagonal boulevards terminating in great open spaces. Stern classifies this as a good example of an exceptionally rare map.

Another map, produced in 1761, shows the Mackinac region and the Straits area, as well as the Beaver Islands, which were early landmarks for seafarers. This is the first English language map of the area.

Still another map, produced in 1744, shows the Sault and Straits of Mackinac area. There will be 100-year-old maps of all the counties in lower Michigan and many 19th century maps of other states in the union, as well as some of European cities and countries published in the 18th century.

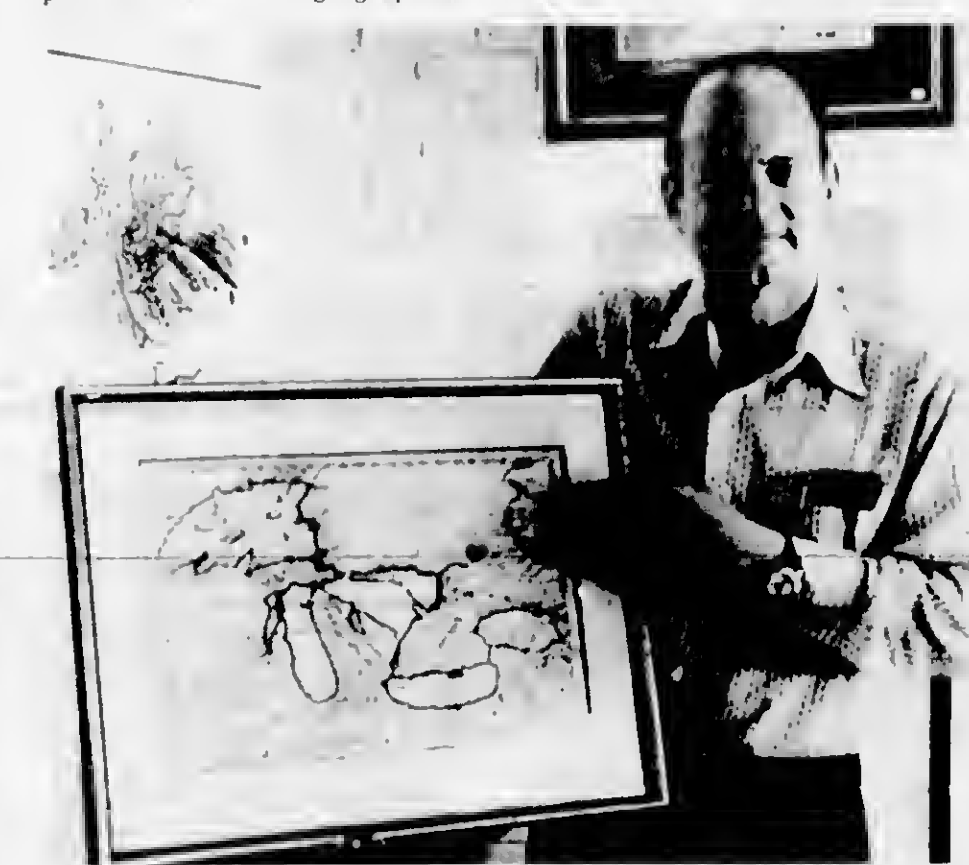

Speaking of antique maps, Stern says, "Engraved and woodcut maps began to appear in limited numbers late in the 15th century. Since copperplates and woodblocks wore down quickly, only a hundred to three hundred would generally be published before new ones superseded them. The ravages of time have made this Renaissance maps difficult to find today."

"Maps published in the 17th, 18th, and early 19th centuries were also produced in small quantities. They, too, were used to illustrate books and atlases, or occasionally issued separately to publicize a new geographical discovery."

"Some antique maps were drawn up by leading artists of the day. The cartographer would gather the latest information from overseas explorers and travelers, and have the artist produce a map beautifully embellished with ships, mythological figures, or heroes of the times."

"Antique maps are therefore both works of art and a graphic record of western discovery of the outside world. Despite their scarcity, they remain a relatively inexpensive form of pictorial art."

Pollution well monitored at Medusa

There's something about factories, chemical plants or cement plants that bugs humanity.

People say the smell or the dust created by the plants is objectionable. And they are concerned about what the pollution from the plant is doing to the environment of the community surrounding the plant, especially if it is a resort community like Charlevoix.

But industries are not allowed to pollute an area unchecked. Al Kaiser, plant manager at Medusa Cement Co., said. The plants are closely monitored by the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the state and in Medusa's case, Charlevoix Township.

Kaiser said Medusa is thoroughly inspected every two years when the state sends in a three-man team to perform an involved check of the stack at Medusa.

"But you can get a pretty fair idea of how our pollution control equipment is working through a visual inspection," Kaiser said.

A man from the state Department of Natural Resources, who is experienced with industrial pollution control equipment, visually inspects Medusa about four times a year, Kaiser said. The state also maintains air samplers around the Charlevoix area which can detect if any cement is being released into the air by Medusa, the plant manager explained.

The EPA also keeps tabs on industrial pollution and the agency is constantly updating its pollution control requirements, Kaiser said.

And Medusa always rates very well on the state tests, Kaiser said. "We are always well below the allowable level of pollution set by the state and the township," Kaiser said. "With the exception of one plant downstate, we probably have a better collection system than any other plant in the state."

If Medusa's pollution control equipment is so good, why do Charlevoix residents occasionally smell funny odors or see particles coming from the cement plant located at South Point?

"Our system is as good as any in the state and better than most, but we are not perfect," the plant manager explained. "Our stack is 99.9 percent efficient and our bag collectors approach 100 percent efficiency, but they don't catch all of the particles released during the cement making process."

"We're doing everything that--is

First donation received for bandshell, stage fund

The first donation to the new East Park Stage and Bandshell Fund has been received. Clarence Omark has announced.

Capt. and Mrs. H.E. Paddock made the first donation to the new fundraising effort. Omark has been trying to organize a steering committee of interested citizens to run a fundraising campaign to collect funds for the construction of a bandshell in East Park.

The former Charlevoix High School and city bands director said many people were volunteering to be on the committee and more information about the group's progress would be forthcoming.

Anyone who would like to make a contribution to the fund can mail it to Omark at Box 36, Charlevoix, Mich., 49720.

State reps plan to hold meeting on proposed zoning legislation

A series of public hearings to measure citizen receptiveness to a large group of legislative proposals has been scheduled by the House of Representatives Towns and Counties Committee. At a 1 p.m. meeting Aug. 24 in Petoskey at the City Hall, the group will discuss two, four-bill packages which amend the state's zoning enabling acts. One set of bills would prohibit any local zoning discrimination against the installation or use of solar or wind powered energy devices.

The other series of zoning bills is the product of a multi-year task force study, initiated by Governor William Milliken, to revise and update Michigan's basic local zoning enabling acts.

The most controversial amendments to the Subdivision Control Act of 1967, that law, which dictates the methods and procedures for subdividing residential land, is a constant subject of debate among developers and conservationists.

Area Democrats are inviting the public to a hearing on revising the State Constitution. The hearing is scheduled for this Wednesday, August 17, in the Commissioner's room at the Emmet County Courthouse.

The meeting will be run by Dudley Buffa, former aide to the late Senator Philip Hart.

Buffa is chairman of the Democrat's Commission for a Constitutional Convention. He is also considering running for the office of United States Senator.

Sandberg said the manhole had been disturbed when the plums from the Beaver Island Ferry Boat Dock to the bridge were replaced under the direction of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Apparently it was not repaired correctly and the earth around it began caving in.

The city administrator said that since the city had other manholes in that general area that the faulty one would be removed and replaced with connector pipe.

Lillian Bergmann appointed to mental health job

The appointment of Lillian Bergmann to Charlevoix as Life Consultant / Case Manager for the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board in the four counties served by the board has been announced by Harold J. Kaufman, director of the board.

At the same time, Donna G. Bruce of Harbor Springs was named accountant of the same board and Carol Sue Vroman was appointed secretary to succeed Kathryn McDonald who is returning to school.

The position to which Mrs. Bergmann has been appointed from among 27 candidates has been created by the State Department of Mental Health for the purpose of providing after-care for persons who have been involved in any type of Mental Health Program.

Mr. Kaufman further reported that Robert Greenwood of Cheboygan will now head the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board succeeding Mrs. Bergmann as chairman. Greenwood has assumed his duties as superintendent of the schools succeeding James A. McKinney who has gone to a similar position at Cadillac.

VanWieren comes to the Charlevoix schools after nine years as administrator of the Marshall School System with an enrollment of 340 students and one year as special assistant to the president of the school system.

Regier family enjoys recent trip to Japan

By PAULA HOLMES

A Charlevoix mother's determination to have her children learn about their heritage resulted in a trip to Japan for the entire family this summer.

Austin and Hinako Regier and their daughters, Michiko, Mariko and Masako spent just over four weeks in Japan visiting relatives and friends during June and July.

It was a trip that Mrs. Regier, who was born and raised in Japan, had been planning for a long time. She has been back to her homeland several times since she first came to the United States as a graduate student in 1967, but only one daughter has ever been there and she was a small baby at the time.

"I wanted to have the girls see the other side of their heritage," Mrs. Regier said explaining the recent trip. "I wanted to have them see my native country."

Originally, Mrs. Regier had planned to take the girls to Japan individually as they reached an age where they would appreciate the trip. But as she started thinking about the trip, she decided the whole family should go together.

"I'm glad we all went together," she said smiling. "There are things from this trip that we will share now for the rest of our lives."

Visit Relatives, Friends The family visited Mrs. Regier's brother and his family in Tokyo and they visited a relative of Rev. Regier's who is a missionary in Japan. In addition, they visited the many friends the family has made over the years as Japanese exchange students and others who have come to the United States for visits.

"Most of the people we visited were people we had helped while they were here, but they didn't necessarily say with us," Rev. Regier explained.

"We helped them get settled or straightened out a language problem," Mr. Regier added. "And they were so grateful for this help that they wanted us to stay with them while we were in Japan."

The family stayed with many such friends when it visited Mrs. Regier's home province of Shiga Prefecture, which incidentally is Michigan's sister state in Japan.

When Japanese visitors from Shiga Prefecture were in Petoskey last summer, Mrs. Regier had acted as their interpreter. When she returned to Japan with her family this summer, she was greeted with open arms and royal treatment because of the help she had given.

The Charlevoix residents visited many communities throughout Japan staying in 14 different places. They went to museums, amusement parks and schools, which were in session during their visit.

Take School Seriously Mrs. Regier said the Japanese students and their parents are very serious about school and the competition is keen. The children go to school from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. 240 days a year and often they are tutored at night. And even during their vacation they have homework.

"They don't change jobs in Japan like we do here," Rev. Regier said.

"And that's why it is so important to get into a good college to get a good education so that you can have a good job," Mrs. Regier said.

The three girls said they enjoyed the visit and plan to return some day. They said they were surprised at how small the country was and at the fact that there was very little open space. The livable space in Japan amounts to an area the size of Iowa.

The girls also enjoyed the food, trying such delicacies as eel, octopus, squid, raw tuna and cold noodle soup. But they missed having beef and particularly steak, which is very expensive in Japan.

Enjoyed the Bath Another aspect of Japanese life that the young Charlevoix residents found interesting was the baths. The bath is taken standing up in a tiled area and pouring water from a bucket, then after the person is clean they sit in a small tub and soak in hot water.

A highlight of the family's tour of Japan was a visit to Mrs. Regier's home town Usaka and Hiroshima. The family visited Mrs. Regier's home which had been bombed in a night raid just before the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima the next morning.

While visiting the site of Mrs. Regier's home, which was destroyed during the bomb raid, the girls found two golf balls in the yard. They brought the golf balls home to their grandfather, who lives in Charlevoix, and he said they must have been ones he had lost when he lived at the home.

The family was very impressed with the museum's and memorials in Hiroshima and Mrs. Regier said she would like to have all people visit the city not because of the atomic bomb but because of the nuclear threat we face in the future," she said.

Mrs. Regier said the residents of Hiroshima feel responsibility not to let such a thing happen again and they actively campaign against nuclear weapons.

Their concern is evident in the wording on a memorial to all who died in the nuclear explosion. Sleep in peace, the memorial reads. We promise we will never make this mistake again.

Editorials/Opinions

City should take action on parking before it's too late

Off-street parking has been an on-again, off-again issue in the City of Charlevoix. But it is an issue that should be addressed by the common council, the mayor and the citizens of the community without delay.

As any resident or visitor to Charlevoix knows, Bridge Street in the summer time is just as congested as any street in Chicago, New York or Los Angeles—it's just shorter.

Michigan State Police statistics show that Bridge Street is the scene of more accidents than any other state trunkline in Charlevoix County. The corner of Bridge and Clinton streets ranks first in the number of accidents occurring at any one corner in the county.

In fact, of the top ten corners with the most accidents in the county, Bridge Street intersections were ranked nine out of ten times.

Part of the problem is that Michigan Avenue pours traffic onto the bridge, two lanes at a time, but once the cars get across the bridge, the drivers are confronted with one lane for driving and one lane for parking and a traffic jam that is guaranteed to frazzle the nerves of even the calmest person.

And the situation is not getting any better. At first it just occurred during the summer months, but as Charlevoix becomes more and more of a year around resort area, the traffic problems will also become more year around.

And as the traffic flow through the town gets heavier it will be just a matter of time before the state Department of Highways and Transportation decides to ban on-street parking on Bridge Street so that it can have four lanes of traffic flow through the town.

It will happen, it's just a matter of time. And when it does happen, the city better be ready with some solutions. The problem will not go away or solve itself. Americans seem to maintain that it is their unalienable right to drive to work or to park downtown while they shop.

One oft-discussed solution is to have south bound traffic run on State Street and northbound traffic on Bridge Street with angle parking on both streets. This would still provide parking for shoppers near the downtown businesses and it wouldn't make Bridge Street the highway that it might turn into if all the parking were removed and it was opened up to four lanes of traffic.

However, if all the parking is taken off of Bridge Street, the city will need another solution—off-street parking.

City fathers have already taken a step in that direction by paving a parking lot near Round Lake behind downtown stores. But more parking will be needed if all of Bridge Street is turned into traffic lanes.

The former Erber garage would make a good site for off-street parking lot. It would be a sound investment for the city to purchase the property because it would connect with other parking lots already maintained by the city. A parking gate could easily be installed on the lot and the city would be able to recoup its expenses.

Perhaps the downtown merchants should get together and discuss a special assessment to pay for the proposed lot. After all, an off-street lot downtown only benefits them.

There are many alternatives to be considered. But a plan of action should be settled on now before it's too late.

Minister hopes area appreciates Greensky Hill

To the Community of Charlevoix: I wonder how many residents of Charlevoix are really aware of the natural beauty and the historical significance of the Greensky Hill United Methodist Church. As so often is the case, the local people are the last to visit and to appreciate a point of interest in their area.

As a church pastor, I have led five youth retreats at Greensky Hill. We journeyed over 1,000 miles, round trip, each year to this site because of the natural beauty, Christian fellowship, and rich historical significance. More importantly, we have returned each year because of the warm hospitality expressed by members of this small congregation and their willingness to open their facility to our group. This openness has inspired our youth groups to do a work project each year to help preserve this site.

Shouldn't the community also feel a responsibility in preserving not only the beauty but also the heritage that this site represents to the state and the country. Let all of us, residents and visitors join together in preserving Greensky Hill Church.

Sincerely,
Rev. Bruce Bequette

A mother wrote last week and said, "My son is so shy and uncommunicative I probably won't know he's going through puberty until he has passed it."

Boys are like that. If my son came home and found me unconscious on the kitchen floor, he'd yell in my unconscious ear, "What's for snack?"

Actually, there is only one surefire, telltale, infallible way of telling whether or not your son has discovered that girls need more padding on a softball team than boys do.

I call it the Shower Syndrome.

For four or five years, the only contact my sons had with water was a sponge in the back of the church filled with holy water. I had the only kids on the block who could take a shower and not get their hair, trousers or shoes wet.

I nagged them to death about it. "Did you take a bath?"

"I went swimming."

"Did you wash your hands?"

"I washed the one that was dirty. See?"

"Why don't you take a shower?"

"Where are we going?"

Then, for no apparent reason, we heard the water running... and running. And running. And running.

"What is he doing in the shower this long?" asked my husband. "Washing away his sins?"

"He has just discovered girls."

"When is he going to discover that we only have a 30-gallon hot water tank and he emptied that to wash his hair?"

"Cleanliness is next to Godliness," I quoted.

"Billy Graham isn't that religious?"

"Look," I said, "I know a boy left in water three days is not attractive, and you know it, but the point is, he doesn't know it."

If you can't hear the water running, there are still other clues to your son's discovery of the opposite sex. He will use a can of deodorant a day...for each arm...each time he takes a shower. He will use mouthwash like it runs free out of the tap. As for shampoo, I never thought I would see the day when I would hide two tablespoons of shampoo in the tea canister so I could wash my hair over the weekend.

As my husband observed the other day as he stepped from his cold shower, squirted hair spray under each arm and gargled with a cup of coffee, "I think I liked 'em better when they were dirty."

Visitors praise lifeguards

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was received by the Charlevoix City Council recently.

To the City Council... We have been visitors to your city for some seventeen years—summer, fall and spring.

We were at the Lake Michigan beach the week of July 18 a minimum of five hours a day...and we would like to tell you that the person or persons who selected the guards should be highly commended upon the choices. These guards were efficient, concerned, professional, they were fantastic and then the day of the skin diving accident, they were superb.

Our thanks to you and kudos to all. Bill and Eve Touron

Note: The lifeguards on duty at the Lake Michigan beach were Erin Arvillia and Carol Donner. The guards were selected by Dwight Boss, City Recreation Director.

by Jim Fitzgerald

That was no fire at 1020 Pine Grove Ave. in Port Huron. That was a lousy insurance company making room for a rotten parking lot.

I think I will cry. Recently I wrote about driving a boy's childhood home and seeing a large hole in the roof. I thought there had been a fire and repairs would soon be made. Wrong.

Quickly there was a phone call from Jane Jenkins, who lived with her family at 1020 for the past 12 years. Also there was a call from her son, Jim, who has been sleeping in my bedroom, waiting for the bulldozer.

Their news was all bad. The Michigan Mutual Insurance Co. is the villain. Cancel my policy. Cancel yours.

My grandfather built that house 60 years ago. My parents moved in in 1924, the year their first child was born. That baby grew up and up to be Terrible Jean. I would like to see some dumb corporation try to tear her down to build a parking lot.

My family was still at 1020 when the fourth and final daughter, Linda, was born in 1942 during the big war. I remember returning home from overseas on her third birthday. I got off the bus downtown and bought her a doll. When I reached 1020, Linda was playing out in front.

Year later I admitted that was the day I first realized nothing in the world feels nicer than a hug around the neck from a 3-year-old kid. And Linda admitted she didn't know who the skinny soldier was, but she'd hug anybody for a free doll.

For many of those years on Pine Grove, my father was a traveling salesman. When he was out of town, it was my job to take care of the furnace. I wasn't as big as the coal shovel, and Terrible Jean was as big as the furnace, but this was way before playing baseball, or fighting in the Golden Gloves.

Mary Lou was a perfectly darling little girl who wouldn't split for Terrible Jean. She would see her. Everyone except me loved her. Once I got careless and allowed Mary Lou to wander into the street where she was almost hit by a truck. The screeching of brakes brought the entire neighborhood to the scene, gawking at the narrow escape of their little cupcake.

A lynching party was quickly formed. Only the fearful remonstrances of my mother saved my life. She insisted that laws when I ask him to get out of his chair to adjust the thermostat. Progress.

When Jim Jenkins phoned to say our house was being razed, he said he was once rummaging in the spooky attic above our bedroom and he found some school papers with the name Mary Lou on them. Did I know her?

Oh yes. Mary Lou is sister No. 2, four years younger than her handsome brother. Mother made me take care of Mary Lou in summers, when the furnace didn't need me. Such baby-sitting is a task which more naturally should have fallen to Terrible Jean, but she was always too busy playing baseball, or fighting in the Golden Gloves.

I could not die the while owing her 2 weeks room and board.

To complete the picture, No. 3 sister is Nancy, more often called The Itch! She was a 10-year-old brat when I was a 20-year-old adventurer, exploring obscure taverns. When I got home late for dinner, she would make scrambled eggs sandwiches and sell them to me for 50 cents each.

As I drag back the memories, I realize it wasn't the old house that was so wonderful, it was the family. But Dad had been dead for many years. The sisters are scattered and Mother lives in a small apartment.

Only the house has remained at 1020 Pine Grove Ave. to be driven past and to be pointed out to my children and grandchildren as the place where I grew up with my awful sisters.

Now, because the people at the insurance office next door need parking space, there is no more house. There is no more 1020 Pine Grove Ave.

There is no more little boy carrying ashes out to the curb every Monday night.

I knew this dumb column would make me cry.

...Speaking Her Mind

King Tut mania hit yours truly recently. I've been talking about going to see the exhibit of Egyptian art and artifacts from the tomb of the ancient ruler for almost a month and I finally got it together enough to get down to Chicago a week ago.

I had heard story after story about the horrible lines and the long waits and I wasn't sure that any exhibit would be worth a 20-hour round trip drive and six hours of waiting in line.

But my girlfriend assured me that this was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity that I shouldn't let slip by. She also informed me that she had purchased a membership to the Field Museum where the exhibit was being displayed and that the membership would eliminate our waiting in line.

Sure enough we got into the exhibit almost immediately. It was almost embarrassing as we waited in line with people who were telling tales about bringing sleeping bags and getting in line at 1 a.m. in order to see the exhibit at 10:30 a.m.

However, even though we missed the lines waiting to get into the exhibit, we didn't avoid the lines of people as they walked through the hallways and rooms of the exhibit area.

In fact, at one point I felt as though all of Charlevoix must have been crammed into that room with me there were so many people mulling around. It looked like wall-to-wall shoulders.

For someone who gets impatient waiting in line for the Pine River Channel bridge, the crowded condition of the exhibit was almost more than I could bear.

But once I got close enough to the exhibits to examine the various artifacts, my patience dissolved. The craftsmanship of the artisans who constructed the various pieces of furniture and jewelry was incredible to see. Gold and jewels were combined to produce exquisite pieces of jewelry or to decorate the handles of daggers and staffs.

I was also impressed with the challenges carved out of alabaster. When I think of alabaster, I think of a solid stone. But these goblets were as thin as crystal ones and beautifully carved and etched out of solid stone. I was, as my brother aptly put it, blown away.

It's hard to imagine what type of advanced society the Egyptians must have had. But it must have been fantastic. Their objects point to a society that was very mobile and involved in international trade. They must also have been a highly talented society that believed in the talent that could produce finely crafted articles.

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

When I arrived home from work one night last week, I saw two pairs of heels disappearing around the corner of the Charlevoix Duerr house at 1020 Pine Grove.

Second later, Charlie himself appeared at the front door, vaulted down the steps and took off after the vanishing heels.

"What's up?" I asked Allison, who was watching the drama with yawning indifference from our front lawn.

"It's Danny and Andy Stewart. They're playing 'Ding-Dong Dig!'," she answered.

"What's Ding-Dong Dig?" I persisted. "And what has Mr. Duerr have to do with it? Is he playing, too?"

"Sort of," Allison said. "Danny and Andy rang his doorknob and he's chasing them."

"Is that 'Ding-Dong Dig?' Ringing doorknobs?"

Allison nodded and we waited to see if Charlie Duerr reappeared with two little boys in tow. I didn't want to interfere because I have a theory that neighbors should play an important role in disciplining children. Furthermore, Charlie Duerr has raised a household of his own kids and has had more experience than I have.

Furthermore, anything Charlie Duerr might say about doorknob ringing would carry more weight than a few stern words from the old man.

When no one showed up after a minute, I figured the boys had been too fast for Charlie and had ducked down the alley. I went into the house and, sure enough, through the kitchen window I could see the two "Ding-Dong Dig!" champs consulting with each other in the raspberry patch.

"What shall we do?" I asked Judy. "I was hoping Charlie would handle it, but he's not as fast as he used to be."

"Well, you can't let them get away with it," she answered.

When Danny skipped into the house for supper a few minutes later, I nailed him near the back door.

"I heard you rang Mr. Duerr's doorknob," I said, coming right out with it.

A frown erased the smile on his smudged face, but Danny didn't say a word. There was only a flicker of surprise that I knew what he had been up to.

"Did you ring it?"

No answer. He had decided to take the Fifth Amendment.

"Well, before you ring any more doorknobs, let me give you some advice. You never ring a doorknob of the house next door. Understand?"

Danny nodded, his eyes wide.

"Another thing, you never ring the doorknob of someone you like. It's strictly a prank reserved for jerks and jerks."

Danny nodded again.

"Furthermore, only a dope would ring doorknobs in broad daylight when the victim is likely to see who you are. You should wait until it gets dark. Besides, ringing doorknobs is a Halloween prank, reserved for the last week in October."

Danny listened to my lecture in silence. I thought he was going to cry, but he bit his lip instead.

"Another thing," I continued. "It's called 'Ringing Doorknobs' not 'Ding-Dong Dig!' Now are you going to ring Mr. Duerr's doorknob again?"

Danny shook his head.

"OK, then wash your face and get ready for supper."

Danny gave me a wide berth as he walked past, head down, toward the bathroom, leaving Judy and me alone in the kitchen.

Judy shook her head. "He's not a little boy anymore," she said.

I thought she was going to cry.

Meet Charlevoix

...Ralph Richardson

Ralph Richardson is a beef farmer and represents Wilson and Eveline Townships on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners. This week the Courier talks with him about his background and his work on the farm and on the County Commission.

COURIER: Were you born in the area?

RICHARDSON: No, I was born in Hastings. My parents were both teachers, so we moved around a lot. I went to school seven years in Hartford, one year in Plymouth, and attended high school in Nashville. After graduation I went to Western Michigan University.

COURIER: What did you study at WMU?

RICHARDSON: Aeronautical engineering and aeronautical mechanics. I was an animal husbandry—I've been through the school of hard knocks. Of course, I can fix all the equipment on the farm because of my previous training and my grandparents were farmers and we always lived in the country.

COURIER: Tell us how your farm operates.

RICHARDSON: Basically, we're a cow-calf beef operation. We keep a basic herd of 100 brood cows and five bulls. The calves are born in the spring and we keep them until fall and sell them to feed lots for fattening on an average of 450 pounds to 1,100 pounds. We save a few females to replace the older ones in the herd. In the summer we make hay to feed the cattle in the winter.

COURIER: How did this year's drought affect your hay crop?

RICHARDSON: Normally we get 13,000 bales. This year we got 5,000. The calves we sell this fall wouldn't pay for the 8,000 bales of hay we'd have to buy, so I'm going out of the beef farming business. It's a matter of pure economics. We're getting the same prices today as we did 10 years ago but everything we have to buy has gone up anywhere from three to 10 times. We can't keep up with expenses. We're living on depreciation.

COURIER: Why hasn't the price you receive for beef gone up along with everything else?

RICHARDSON: People are not willing to pay parity prices. The consumer will pay only so much for beef. When we went into beef farming, people were buying steaks and roasts. Now, one out of eight cows killed goes to McDonald's. People don't want steaks and roasts.

COURIER: How much do you get for your beef cattle?

RICHARDSON: Last year it was 34 cents a pound for 400 pound steers and heifer calves. This compares with 30 cents in 1962, 31 and a half cents in 1970, and 63 cents in 1973. It averages out to 34 and a half cents during the 15 years.

COURIER: How do you sell your cattle?

RICHARDSON: We always dealt with the same buyer and sold at the same time every year. We didn't try to beat the market. We kept real good records and believe we received the best prices that way.

COURIER: What are you going to do after you sell out your herd?

RICHARDSON: I don't know. There are several possibilities.

COURIER: By the way, have you operated the farm yourself?

RICHARDSON: Yes, it's a family operation. My wife and I do the calling in the spring. In the summer we hire two people for about six weeks to haul hay.

COURIER: How long have you been on the Board of Commissioners?

RICHARDSON: Since January 1, 1969.

COURIER: What committees do you serve on?

RICHARDSON: Ways and Means, chairman of Parks and Recreation, and CETA. I am also the County representative to the Northwest Regional Planning and Development Commission and represent the Board of Commissioners in union negotiations.

COURIER: Do you enjoy serving on the County Commission?

RICHARDSON: Yes, it's interesting and I enjoy it.

COURIER: Do you have a family?

RICHARDSON: Yes, my wife is the former Beth Wicksham and we have two children, Eric, eight, and Leigh, six.

COURIER: How much do you get paid?

RICHARDSON: We get $160 a month, which covers our two regular monthly meetings. We get 15 cents a mile for traveling, and $33 per day for committee meetings, no matter how many meetings there are on a day. Sometimes I go to a meeting in Traverse City in the morning, have a meeting in Charlevoix in the afternoon, and maybe another one in the evening.

Hospital crew keeps things running

When a patient checks in to the Charlevoix Area Hospital, his radio, electric razor, or hair dryer, are periodically inspected, adjusted, calibrated, repaired and rechecked on a tightly organized schedule. The emergency generator is tested every two weeks, for example.

The flawless functioning of a fetal monitor in the Obstetrical Ward or cardiac monitor in the Coronary Care Unit are vital to the hospital's parts of the hospital running smoothly.

Virtually every electrical, mechanical and important moving part in the hospital is periodically inspected, adjusted, calibrated, repaired and rechecked on a tightly organized schedule. The emergency generator is tested every two weeks, for example.

The flawless functioning of a fetal monitor in the Obstetrical Ward or cardiac monitor in the Coronary Care Unit are vital to the hospital's ability to deliver the best possible medical care to its patients.

Claude Pearsall, Maintenance Supervisor, and his two assistants, Larry Streeter and Gene Farley, make their rounds on a routine basis. Their patients are machines, tools, air conditioners, monitors, boilers, sterilizers and so on.

Each piece of machinery is inspected and tested and results are recorded on cards kept in a file.

Pearsall, who has been with Charlevoix Area Hospital for 13 years, tends to underplay his role. Yet as he shows a visitor around his eyes are constantly alert. He stops to note a small spot of peeling paint. He checks in with the nursing station to see if they have any problems. He discusses an electrical part needed by physical therapy for their ultra sound machine. And he stops to check the wheels on a wheelchair in the repair shop.

Larry Streeter explains that Charlevoix Area Hospital uses the consulting service of a Bio-Medical Engineer, a relatively new engineering specialty field, who checks the more complex medical machinery, such as the cardiac monitors.

The Bio-Medical engineering consultant visits the hospital at least once every three months to scrutinize all such machines. "He checks and we repair," quips Pearsall.

In concern with the hospital Safety Committee, a five person team, headed by Barney Roters, the Maintenance crew conducts routine drills for people and equipment.

The Maintenance crew tests the performance of fire alarms and smoke detectors weekly. Twelve fire drills are held each year to keep the human workers alert.

Pearsall laughs as he notes how people notice things only when something goes wrong, or seems to go wrong.

"It was 2 a.m., about a year ago. The phone rang. I was asleep. Someone was worried because the emergency generator was running at the hospital."

"I reached out to turn on my lamp. No lights."

"I said, 'Did you notice the lights blink down there?'"

"Oh yea, they said."

"Power was out all over town, except the hospital," he smiles with quiet assurance.

Summer preparation can make first day of school easier

"I'm not going to school."

What is a parent to do when little Suzy or Timmy refuses to take that first step away from home and into kindergarten? This September, more than six million 5- and 6-year-olds will begin kindergarten or first grade. Although most children will take that first day in stride, a few will have problems.

A new pamphlet from the Office of Child Development, Department of Health, Education and Welfare gives parents some good advice about how to prepare their child for the first day of school. You can get a free copy of the pamphlet, When a Child Begins School, by sending a postcard to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 635E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Don't treat going to school as a part of the normal course of events. It is something that is expected, not something that is any choice about.

Don't allow older brothers and sisters to tease or scare the younger child. If necessary, talk to the older children privately.

Do answer all questions about school honestly. Many children want to know the number of days in a school year, the number of hours in a school day, how students get back and forth to school, and so on. Answers to these types of questions are important because they help reduce anxiety. Some schools hold orientation sessions to acquaint children and their parents with the school and the teachers.

Many non-working mothers look forward to the free time they will have while their children are in school. However, don't tell your child how much fun you're going to have while he or she is in school. Instead, let the child know that you will be doing your job at home, while the child is doing a good job at school. You might say, "While you're in school today, I will be shopping and going to pottery class, so we can spend some time together when you get home."

When a Child Begins School (free) is one of more than 200 selected federal consumer publications listed in the Consumer Information Catalog. The Catalog, published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, is free.

Kindergarten forms, registration due Tuesday

Health records for kindergarten children who registered last spring should be brought to the Charlevoix Elementary School by next Tuesday.

The school will be open from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. so that parents can drop their youngest's complete health records off at the school.

Any other kindergarten children who will be five years old by Dec. 1 and who have not been previously registered in

The poles fly the colors of the United States, State of Michigan, and the Ecology flag, which symbolizes the company's efforts to establish itself worldwide as a manufacturer of environmental equipment.

For 30-day periods, the colors of each of the international agents presently accepting delivery of MIDWEST equipment will be honored.

MIDWEST's international agents are located in Australia, Canada, Great Britain, Greece, Israel, Japan, The Netherlands, South Africa, and Sweden. The first country honored will be Canada because of its geographical relationship to the United States.

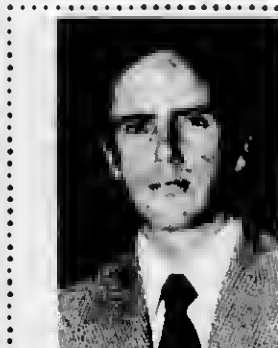

MIDWEST's future plans include the assembly of finished environmental equipment in The Netherlands for European and Middle East consumption, and in Osaka, Japan for distribution to the Far East.

After completing boot training at San Diego in September 1975, he attended Machinist Mate A School and upon completion of the school was selected as staff to instruct in the Propulsion Plant Steam Laboratory of Great Lakes, Ill. He had attended Instructor Training School before being assigned as an instructor. As staff at Great Lakes he attended, on his own time, Boiler Technician School and Engineman Mate A School.

Later he was transferred to Orlando, Fla., where he attended Navy Nuclear Propulsion School with six months of classroom phase instruction. He was then transferred to the Navy Nuclear Facility for on the job practical application at Ballston Spa, N.Y.

Upon graduation of the Navy Power Prototype, he will be a qualified nuclear power plant mechanical operator.

His wife, Sherry, and their son, Justin, will remain in Charlevoix while his is at Groton, Conn. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Marshall.

His next assignment will be at Charleston, S.C., where Mrs. Marshall and their son will join him.

A graduate of the Charlevoix High School, he attended North Central Michigan College and has 4,000 hours toward being a tool and die journeyman.

Keys to air-evac plane turned over to Peaine clerk

At the request of Sheriff George Lasater, Beaver Island's Deputy Sheriff William Welke has turned over the keys and log book of the island's air evacuation plane to Joseph B. Martin, clerk of Peaine Township.

Welke and his two sons have been piloting the plane for residents of the island but due to differences of opinion between the Welkes and local officials, they resigned as pilots.

The plane will now be flown by Wayne Chapman and Robert McGlocklin, island residents, who are certified FAA pilots.

Operation of the plane is financed by St. James and Peaine Townships but is under the jurisdiction of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. The plane was secured through the County Civil Defense Department.

Petoskey,
Michigan

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun spreads its radiance over the waters, it is indeed lovely from the vantage point of the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands. The setting sun provides a spectacular show. The Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers and sightseers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all.
Very few white people had seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that late fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line.
On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting on the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset.
The metamorphosis of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small Indian settlement at the mouth of Bear river, to a dynamic, busy village catering to the needs of sightseers and homesteaders. To house the visitors, the Arlington and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Roaming houses for

The last affluent were soon to follow. By 1870 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flourmills, hardwood flooring industries, butter bowl factories, and furniture-making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town. Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and rooming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Inland Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Conway. Until the quaint little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and team.

In 1880 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1900's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new fangled summer resorts spelled the doom of the delightful little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon. Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnetism remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

Edwards celebrate 30 years of operation

EDWARDS IGA then-1947.

EDWARDS IGA now-1977.

Edwards IGA is celebrating 30 years of business in the same place this week.

It wasn't always that way for Dick Edwards, who owns the well-known grocery store on the north side of Charlevoix.

The grocer used to be Edwards Florist and Truck Garden and he operated out of the back of a 1921 Dodge truck as he carted fresh produce from doorstep to doorstep in Charlevoix.

"Yep, I was a huckster from 1939-42," Edwards recalled. "And I did it the summer of 1946, too, after I got back from the war."

Oddly enough it was a statement from one of his truck garden customers that made Edwards decide to build his grocery store.

"I was talking with a cook on the north side who said that if I had a little store that people could go to, I'd get more business," the grocer recalled. "But instead of building a little store, I decided to build a big one."

The original store was 50 by 60 feet and its shelves were stacked with everything imaginable. Edwards wanted his store to be a supermarket. "When I opened, I was the 13 grocery store in town," Edwards said.

"There were various predictions about how long I would last and most said six months was all I could be around. They said I would die on the vine because I was so far out - five blocks from town."

Edwards said he had chosen the north side as the location for his grocery store because there wasn't anything on that side of town.

"As a kid of 26, I thought it was a good idea," he explained. And so he talked his brother Louis into going into business with him. Dick handled the meat end of the business and Louis took care of the groceries.

While the store was the 13th one to open in this town, it was first in many aspects of the services it provided. Edwards was the first store to offer barbecue chicken, the first one to offer trading stamps and the first one to sell ice cubes.

The store has grown in more than just size over the past 30 years, too. A staff of 19 now mans the store in a series of shifts. When Edwards first opened, only a handful of employees were around to keep it going. Among the first stock and delivery boys were Vane Smith, Charlevoix High School principal, and Alvin Ranger, engineer.

The services provided by the store have grown along with the size of the store and its staff. The meat counter has expanded over the years and Edwards added a liquor section after obtaining a license in 1962. In 1974, he added the delicatessen now known as Dapper Dick's Deli.

"I suppose our key to success has been to give the best quality service possible," Edwards said. "I really get mad when I catch the boys up front letting a lady carry out two sacks."

To help celebrate Edwards 30th year of business, the grocer has invited all of his customers and neighbors to share some cake and punch on Saturday. The cake will be baked by Ron Fairbanks, the same man who baked the first anniversary cake.

Edwards hopes that many other friends who were on hand for that first anniversary will come back for the 30th one.

"It's been challenging," he said reflecting on the past 30 years. "But I've enjoyed meeting and dealing with different people."

DICK EDWARDS stands behind the meat counter that was to turn out to be his trademark after 30 years in business.

GROCERIES - MEATS

VANE SMITH, principal of Charlevoix High School, talks with Louis Edwards in front of the new store 30 years ago. Smith was one of the first employees at the store.

The Chiropractor

The Chiropractor is a new and different kind of doctor. The modern Chiropractor recognizes man for the fantastic being he is. The Chiropractic principle embodies the whole man and offers a philosophy that connects the body, mind, and soul with the Universal Intelligence from whence it came.

The Chiropractor does not claim to cure anything. He only claims to be a cause mechanic who locates and releases nerve interference. When this interference is cleared the body takes over to heal itself naturally and normally. The Chiropractor understands that all the pills, poisons, and drugs only cover up symptoms, whether it be a backache, headache, or disease. He understands that there is no disease that Nature cannot cure. The Chiropractor understands full well that the pressure of bone on nerves brings about a condition where the body's control system fails to act properly. With skilled hands he brings about the proper adjustments. He finds the cause of pain and disease and removes it. The power of the body does the rest. The power that made the body heal the body.

Chainletters age-old consumer ripoff

Dear —
Trust in the Lord with all your heart and he will acknowledge and be will fight the way.

This prayer has been sent to you for good luck. The original copy is from the Netherlands. It has been around the world nine times. You are to receive good luck within nine days of receiving this letter. This is no joke, you will receive it in the mail.

Send copies of this letter to people you think need good luck. Do not send money. Do not keep this letter. It must leave within 96 hours after you receive it. An RAF officer received $70,000. Don Elliott received $50,000 but lost it because he broke the chain. While in the Philippines, General Woleh lost his life six days after he received this letter. He failed to circulate the prayer. However, he received $775,000 before his death. Please send 20 copies and see what happens to you on the fourth day. This chain comes from Vascausal and was written by St. Anthony de Cadiz, a missionary from South America.

Since this chain has to make a tour of the world, you must have 20 copies identical to this one and send it to your friends, and parents and acquaintances. After a few days you will get a surprise. This is true, even if you are not superstitious.

Take note of the following. Constantin Diaz received the chain in 1953. He asked his secretary to make 20 copies and send them, a few days later he won a lottery of $2 million in his country. Darso Gradit, an office employee, received the chain. He forgot it and in a few days lost his job. He found the chain and sent it to 20 people. Five days later he got an even better job.

Dorin Reinghild received the chain and not believing in it threw it away. Nine days later he died.

For no reason whatsoever should this chain be broken.

Chain letters like this one and others are making the rounds again in Northern Michigan. While this particular letter appears to be harmless people can be prosecuted for sending it.

"Anything that threatens great bodily harm can be prosecuted, Terry Dillon, assistant U.S. District Attorney, explained. "But usually we don't get involved with chain letters like these. The ones we are concerned about usually deal with money or bonds."

Dillon said it is against federal law to use the mails in any scheme to defraud. "We look on chain letters as a device to defraud," Dillon said. "It has been our experience that the people who pay money into them never get anything back."

The district attorney admitted it was though to prosecute for chain letters because it has to be shown that the person sending the letter has the intent to defraud.

"But theoretically you can trace the letter back to the originators and then it can be shown that the people on the bottom level had the intent to defraud," he said.

Hugh Brenaman, another assistant U.S. district attorney, said usually the originators will use false names which shows an intent to defraud.

Brenaman said his office becomes aware of chain letters mostly through citizen complaints and inquiries about the various schemes that are presented in the letters. He and the postal inspectors work together closely investigating the complaints.

Brenaman said complaints about chain letters have dwindled to only two a year at his office. He attributes the drop in the number of chain letters to publicity about the letters which has wakened people up to the scheme.

"It's not exactly a new idea any more," he pointed out. "People are more aware of what is going on with the chain letters."

Water levels down almost two feet

Lake Michigan (and Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix) water levels were down 1.84 feet in July from the same period last year, the Army Corps of Engineers reports.

The levels have been going down steadily since 1974, when they were the highest since 1960.

The lowest lake levels since 1900 were recorded in 1964, when they were 2.62 feet below the present levels.

Former Charlevoix resident selected to go to University games

A former Charlevoix resident has been selected as one of five U. S. athletic trainers for the University Games in Sofia, Bulgaria this month.

Gary Smith, a 1964 graduate of Charlevoix High School, was selected from a field of 5,000 trainers to go to the games. He is a trainer at Central Washington University.

Smith will be working with about 194 U.S. athletes who will be competing in 19 sports including track, basketball, swimming, gymnastics, wrestling and tennis.

The University Games will be Smith's second international training position. He served as trainer for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics' All-Star basketball team in 1974 when they played in the Cup of Nations Tournament in South America.

Smith received a bachelor's degree from Northern Michigan University and earned a master's degree from Indiana University. He has also served as the head

Blood, sweat, tears to pay off at fair

Almost a year of hard work, careful planning and tender loving care will come to an end for 17 Charlevoix County 4-H members as they auction off their steers at the Emmet County Fair next week.

The auction is open to the public and will take place at 7 p.m. Aug. 25 in front of the grandstand.

The students have been participating in the Market Steer Project for the past year as a part of a joint effort by 4-H and Future Farmers of America (FFA) to help teach the techniques involved in cattle raising.

Each participant in the two-year-old steer program, began his or her quest for the Grand Champion prize last November when they started raising feeder calves.

Since that time the students have carefully monitored daily items such as feed consumption and weight gain. Many materials and activities helped the members in their quest for the top prize at the fair. Project members and leaders met monthly to discuss any problems that members were having and to trade information.

In the early months of the project, special clinics were held on feed rations and fitting and showing. The feeding aspects of cattle raising is particularly interesting because of different feeding philosophies and different types of possible ration formulas, Bob Bellairs, 4-H coordinator explained. Sometimes a project member takes a chance by trying a different feed combination, but that risk may pay off in a better finished steer.

Beef tours were taken in the spring, so that members could view the competition they will be facing at the fair.

As fair time approached, the project members spent much of their time away from the farm as they actively contacted prospective buyers with information about their cattle.

At the fair, members will work in shifts to keep constant watch on the steers. Prior to the auction members will compete in showmanship, market steer and live carcass evaluation classes. Judging will begin at 10 a.m. Aug. 23. Members participating in the steer program from Charlevoix County are: Liz Heath, Sherry Jones, Kaye Ande and Bob Keller, and Jim Stowe all of Charlevoix.

Klooster of Atwood and Kaye and Tammy Thayer, and Jean and Sue Stolt of Boyne City. Second year participants are: Doug and Mark Drenth, Dave Eklings, Rich Hand, Ande and Bob Keller, and Jim Stowe all of Charlevoix.

Highlights of the fair will include a country western music show and automobile stunt drivers in the grandstand. Harness racing, horse pulling, a beef auction, amusement rides and exhibits will also abound during the fair.

There will also be a demonstration of grain cutting with a horse drawn binder, a swap meet and flea market, and a charcoal broiled chicken and ox roast.

The show will be held Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, closing at 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Girls basketball season full of promise, Coach says

The 1977 season for the Charlevoix High School Girls Basketball Team has plenty of promise. Coach Toni Feller has high hopes for her Rayder team as they begin preseason practice this week.

"Things look good," Coach Feller said. "I'm very positive about the team this year."

"I think they can run, we have some good shooters and they can play together. You know you can have all the shooters in the world, but if they can't play together it doesn't do you any good."

The basketball coach said the Rayder team is probably comparable with the league as far as height is concerned, but the Rayders don't have any exceptionally tall players this year.

On the defensive side, the coach said she wasn't sure yet where the strengths and weaknesses were.

"I have to read the players more before I know what we've got," she said.

The coach said she is looking forward to a winning season and hopes that the school district residents will turn out to support the team.

Returning to the varsity squad this year are: Louise Caldwell, Sue Hodge and Jerylyn Goss. Coming up to the varsity squad from the JV team are: Chris Lehman, Lisa Flower, Laurie Gibbs, Jackie Paul, Teresa Bears, Sherry Selassen, Chris Fiedler and Laura Dziedziel.

Coach Feller has just completed two weeks of conditioning camp with many of the basketball players for the coming season. This is the third year of the two-week camp that stresses conditioning as well as teaches ball handling skills and sets up scrimmages for the girls participating in the program.

"I think we're beginning to see some results from this program," the coach said. "The girls skills are better and they are able to work as a team."

The coach said she is pleased with this year's schedule except that there is a lag of three weeks between the opening nonconference games and the first conference game. She said she is looking for some games of scrimmages to fill in the gap.

The coach invited any interested girls to show up for daily practices at 8:30 a.m. or 5:30 to 6 p.m. Varsity and JV players should have their physical cards with them when they come.

Bud Klooster plans to attend Albion

Bud Klooster, a 1977 graduate of Charlevoix High School, has made a tentative commitment to attend Albion College this fall, where he will play basketball, according to Albion coach Mike Turner.

Sailboat designer becomes legend in his own time

By PAULA HOLMES

He looks like the legendary old man from the sea. His hair and beard are a sandy color like the sea's beaches and his eyes are the blue color of the ocean waters. His face has been worn smooth by the wind and rain like the driftwood along the seashore.

And Sandy Douglas, designer of three sailboats, the Thistle, the Highlander and the Flying Scot, is a legend in his own right.

Douglas was in Charlevoix last week for the Flying Scot North American Championship races. At 71 years of age he has quit competing on his own and is satisfied just to crew for the races. But that doesn't change anything about the seven time national champion in the eyes of Flying Scot owners.

Flying Scot owners.

to the sailboat designer just to shake his hand or to exchange some thought about the boat he had designed. By all appearances he was a living legend.

"I've been told I'm a legend," he said lightly. "But I don't think that's quite true."

Douglas' career in sailing dates back to his childhood.

"I grew up with sailing," he explained. "My father was an old time sailor. One of the best on the small boats."

"I tried some other things, but then I decided I really belonged in sailing."

He worked for Buick for a while but then the depression came along and he was out of a job. He turned to painting but not very many people were in the market for paintings during the depression, either.

Finally, in 1937, a young boat builder convinced Douglas to go into business with him. Douglas came out with his first boat design, the Thistle, in 1945.

"I'm not a naval architect, but I do have a thorough knowledge of smaller boats," he said explaining his design capabilities.

"And with that you can take the best features of all the boats you know and if you are lucky you get a good boat."

Douglas likened his first boat, the Thistle, to the Corvette of the car family. His second boat, the Highlander, which came out in 1949, is a bit bigger. And his third boat, the Flying Scot is a more general boat for all around and family use.

"It's like the family Buick, if you will," he said with a sheepish shrug of his shoulders.

The Flying Scot's popularity comes from the fact that it is a general use boat that can be easily crewed by a husband and wife team, Douglas believes.

"It's a little slower than the other two boats, but in terms of all around use it is the best one," he said of the Flying Scot.

Scot.

Douglas said it was not unusual for a boat to have an association grow up out of its users. But it's not all that common either.

"It depends on the enthusiasm the boat stirs up if an association develops," he said. "So many boats are puddle jumpers."

"The Flying Scot is the only major class sailboat where the designer is still active with the line," he added proudly.

The Flying Scot is also the only boat that has been selected by two clubs for ownership. Most clubs have members who own their boats independently. But the Detroit River Yacht Association and the Gulf Yachting Association are two groups where the club instead of the members own the boats and these clubs picked the Flying Scot.

Douglas, who participates in barbershop singing when he is not busy with the boat building company or racing, said he doesn't anticipate designing any more boats.

"I don't see any need for another design," he said. "I think each boat filled a gap in the line and is unique."

He's content now to sail his Flying Scot and to see it grow in popularity.

SANDY DOUGLAS, complete with his hat made out of an old piece of sail cloth, was in Charlevoix last week for the Flying Scot North American Championship races on Lake Charlevoix.

To cover increased costs

City raises ambulance rates

Ambulance service is going to cost a little bit more in the townships surrounding the City of Charlevoix.

Common council raised the cost of ambulance services to surrounding townships Monday night.

Council felt that because of the increased cost of operating the ambulance service due to new state and federal regulations, an increase in the charge for services was not out of line.

The new charge for the ambulance was raised from a base rate of $20 to $30 plus $1 per mile traveled round trip.

The basic contract for ambulance services with each township was raised from .8 mills to 1 mill. The city currently has contracts for ambulance service with Charlevoix, Hayes, Marion, Eveline and Norwood townships.

In other action, common council discussed at length its policy on the storage of recreational vehicles in residential neighborhoods. The issue was sent to committee for study.

Council also agreed to extend 1,200 feet of eight inch water line for Hater Industries under Plan A of the utilities ordinance.

Plan A provides that the city will act as a developer and extend the water services across vacant property and recoup the expense later when the property is developed.

Plan B allows a private developer to act in the same capacity as the city.

Council also directed City Administrator Allen Sandberg to prepare specs for bids on two small commercial mowers for cemetery and park purposes.

Junk Cars

At the corner of Bridge and Hurbut, there are 4 old junk cars for sale. They have no licenses. Why does the city permit this blot on our neighborhood?

The latest on the Yearbooks

The 1976 Charlevoix High School yearbooks will be shipped out the week of Aug. 29 from the offices of Intercollegiate Press, Shawnee Mission, Kan. Vane Smith, high school principal, reports Smith said Phil Collins, Intercollegiate Press representative in Petoskey, said the 1977 yearbooks would be shipped out the week of Sept. 23.

Smith estimated it would take the yearbooks between two and three weeks to arrive in town. He said that the Charlevoix Courier would be advised as to when students could pick up their yearbooks, but he thought that arrangements would be made to have the 1976 yearbooks delivered to students' homes.

Get Rid of Ragweed

Years ago, people came to Charlevoix to get away from the ragweed downstate. Part of the reason we live here is because I couldn't live where the ragweed was. And now I'm getting to the point where I can't walk around town very much because there's a lot of ragweed in full bloom right now. A lot is on city owned property, public buildings, around pools where people move up to it and leave it because it's hard to get to. Some of it is as much as a foot high and in full bloom. I think it would be great if Charlevoix citizens would get rid of it.

Suggestion for Bus Service

This is a suggestion for the Wolverine Stages. I wonder why they don't have the bus stops clearly marked with a permanent sign with the arrivals and departures. Out of a survey of 15 people where I work, no one knows when the bus stops or where. Most people have to have something tangible to look at. The little brochure that's mailed out 4 or 5 months ago, most people do not remember or have lost it. I feel that it would really be helpful for the summer people. This is just a suggestion for the Wolverine Stages. If they want to make money, let's get the bus stops clearly marked.

Committee selects new planner

John F. W. Hess of Marquette appeared before the Charlevoix County Planning Commission Monday evening to fill the job of County Planner, from which Bill Mercer resigned recently.

The screening committee, which selected Hess from among four candidates, consisted of Walter Thorsen, Tom Wieland, Arthur Steinbrecher, and Dennis Jason.

Hess is 32 years old. He was born in Petoskey and raised in the Harbor Springs area and is married and the father of two boys. At present he is Assistant County Planner for Marquette County. A graduate of Northern Michigan University, Hess also worked there as a graduate assistant before joining the Navy for five years.

After confirmation by the Planning Commission, Hess' name will be presented to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners for approval as County Planner.

North side power failures just a matter of coincidence

It's amazing how dependent this country has become on electricity. Television is electric. Our lighting is electric and we have electric coffee pots, hair dryers and typewriters.

So when the electricity goes out, this country really is left in the dark and even paralyzed.

North side residents in the City of Charlevoix have been left in the dark for an extended period of time three times this summer. And residents of that part of town are beginning to question the capacity of the city's electrical system and to wonder if it needs expanding to serve the north side adequately.

Why is it the north side always seems to be hit whenever there's an electrical blackout in the city?

Those residents are just lucky—or unlucky as the case may be, James Whitley, superintendent of the electrical department, said.

"There's no real reason for it," Whitley said. "This last time there was an outage, a boat must just happened to hit the power lines that transit electricity to the north side."

"And then, of course, we had that elbow that went bad (which resulted in a three-hour outage) and there was that bad storm that caused the electricity to go off, too."

These things could have happened anywhere in town, City Administrator Allen Sandberg pointed out. It was just coincidental that it happened on the north side each time.

Whitley said the fact that the city has to send power across the Pine River channel to feed the north side has nothing to do with the outages, either.

"We have three connections across the channel," the electric department superintendent explained. "The two at the new bridge are double fed and there is a single fed connection at the railroad bridge."

Whitley said that the city is also considering lowering its connections across the channel at the railroad bridge so that larger freighters can get in to Lake Charlevoix. If the connections are lowered, a double circuit connection will be installed at the railroad bridge at that time.

Many improvements are also being made by the electrical department on the north side this summer. An underground trunkline is being installed from the U.S. Coast Guard Station down Mercer Boulevard to Division-street and then up to Taylor Road.

"The trunkline will pick up all of your industry in that area," Whitley said. "And it will make it so that if there is an outage, we will only lose power to part of the north side."

Burying the trunkline will also eliminate storm damage to the electric lines.

"And in a town like this that is as tree conscious as it is, it will eliminate the need for trimming trees," Sandberg added.

"When you trim trees to prevent them from brushing electric lines, you have to trim three to four feet away," the city administrator explained. "That leaves quite a hole and the men are always getting complaints when they go out to trim the trees."

Sandberg said constructing a second electric substation on the north side was pretty much out of the question.

"In the first place, most of the city's development is on the south side and that's where a substation would be needed," he said. "But at a cost of between $50,000 and $80,000 that's a pretty expensive alternative."

The city is studying expanding its capacity at the current substation, however.

County officials expected to return today from tax tribunal hearings

Charlevoix County officials involved in a hearing before the State Tax Tribunal in Lansing were expected to return today following four days of testimony.

A decision in the case is not expected for several weeks, however, a spokesman for the Charlevoix County Equalization Department, said. She pointed out that Emmet County had its hearings before the tax tribunal in June and received a judgement last week.

Melrose Township officials are challenging the township's 1977 evaluation as it was set by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners based on a recommendation by the equalization department.

The township was one of four units within the county that received a factor on its assessed valuation. The factor was needed to bring the township's assessed valuation up to 50 percent of true value, according to equalization department studies.

Melrose is the only unit appealing the factor.

Harry Griffen, Melrose Township supervisor and assessor, testified Friday presenting 51 appraisals he made of township properties and charged that the county appraisals were incorrect.

The county was expected to present its case Monday.

The outcome of the appeal could result in one of three things. The county assessed valuation may remain the same, Melrose Township may be increased in its assessed valuation and all other units lowered or Melrose Township could be lowered and all other units increased.

This is the first appeal of county equalization in the 13 years. Joan Blanchard, equalization director, has been with the Charlevoix department.

Sheriff's department to offer security checks for residents

A special security check service is now being offered to homeowners in the county by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The new service will provide security checks on homes or cottages while the owners are absent, Sheriff George Lasater explained. Deputies will check residences on a regular basis and if necessary notify the owner of any problems that are found.

The service is available to summer residents, year around residents who are gone for the winter and to people on vacation, Sheriff Lasater said.

People interested in having the security checks should go to the sheriff's department offices in Charlevoix or the Boyne Falls substation and fill out a form giving a detailed map as to the location of the residence they want checked.

They should also provide the sheriff with a self-addressed and stamped envelope for each month they will be gone. The deputies will send notices in the mail of the number of times the residence has been checked and the status of the home.

A sticker will be given to the residents at a later date to be placed on the door of each home to indicate that it is being checked by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Lasater cautioned that the security check service is not intended to replace the private security patrol. He said the department is attempting to give additional coverage.

Warren Parker, executive director of the Walloon Lake Association; George Lasater, Charlevoix County sheriff; James Kurtz, incoming president of the lake association; and Peter Rentschler, outgoing president of the lake association; examine a new resuscitator donated to the sheriff's department by the Walloon Association. The group gave the department two resuscitators, a CB radio and a decibel meter to aid in its work.

Walloon Lake Association donates equipment to sheriff

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is a little bit better equipped thanks to the Walloon Lake Association.

A donation of two resuscitators, a CB radio and a decibel meter was recently made by the Walloon Lake Association to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The donation of the equipment was made by the lake association in response to a need expressed by Sheriff George Lasater at a recent association meeting. Lasater is attempting to equip the sheriff's department so that it is able not only to enforce the law but can also help people during emergencies and with other problems.

"This contribution from the Walloon Lake Association is rewarding to me as sheriff," Lasater said. "It is gratifying when citizens take enough pride in their local law enforcement agencies to assist them in purchasing equipment that will help us to provide the citizens of Charlevoix County with additional service."

"With this contribution of two resuscitators we can give life saving aid to the citizens of our county. I want the citizens of Charlevoix County to look at our department as an agency that enforces the law, but also is there to help them when it is needed."

The resuscitators will be assigned to the marine unit on Walloon Lake and to the sheriff's department substation patrol vehicle. The CB radio will also be assigned to the marine unit on Walloon Lake.

The decibel meter will be used throughout the county. Lasater said he hopes other area associations will be interested in purchasing two more resuscitators so that one can be placed in the marine patrol unit on Lake Charlevoix and one can be placed in the patrol unit assigned to the sheriff's office in Charlevoix.

The Walloon Lake Association is also planning to work with Emmet County Sheriff Richard Zink in donating equipment needed by his department.

Spiritualism alive and well

Elsie Beesley

'I have a message for you...'

By PAULA HOLMES

"I have a message for the young girl in the plaid jacket in the back," the medium said toward the end of the Spiritualist Church service one Sunday morning.

I stiffened. Being a visitor to the church and a cynic to boot, I had not expected to receive a message myself, especially not one from the guest medium Lillian Gleiser. Besides it was broad daylight.

"Whatever concerns you are having over your job will be resolved within the next two weeks," she said.

"I feel that you will be going away to do this?" she asked. I shook my head no.

By PAULA HOLMES

"One time a visitor came to one of our services who thought she would see ghosts flying around the room," the woman said a smile softly forming on her gentle face and a twinkling appearing in her eyes.

"When she told me after the service that she had been surprised because she didn't see any ghosts, I told her that I would like to see those ghosts just once. But I never have," Elsie Beesley, pastor of the Northern Lake Michigan Spiritualist Camp, said laughing.

Rev. Beesley is responsible for looking after the 65-member congregation that makes up the spiritualist camp, nestled in the woods on old U.S. 31, and for answering the questions of the curious who stop at her home to find out what spiritualism is all about.

She explained that spiritualism is not a hocus-focus at all, but a serious religion where followers believe they can receive guidance from the spirit world.

"We believe that after the chance called death, the spirit can return to us and help us," the minister explained. "We believe the spirit is the same mentally as it was when it was here."

"There are lots of spirits around us, there's no separation. We believe that you're just the same mentally and spiritually after you pass to the other side."

The spirits reach out to their loved ones through mediums such as Rev. Beesley. Other times the messages come to the people themselves in the form of strong feelings to do or not to do something.

"Some people are just natural and they begin receiving messages without any training at all," Rev. Beesley explained. "Others learn to meditate and concentrate so that they can receive messages."

"Still others get the messages and don't know it," Rev. Beesley learned about spiritualism from her parents when she was a young girl growing up in England. Her mother was a medium and her father was a spiritual healer.

As a young girl, Rev. Beesley would sit in on seances with her family in order to learn the meditation and concentration required to receive messages. She also went with her parents when they would expell ghosts from houses.

"My mother would find out what had happened to the person and after they had told their story they would be free and would leave the house," she explained. "The only reason they stayed around the house was that they wanted people to know what happened to them."

In addition to her training as a child, Rev. Beesley has also passed the state and national spiritualism board tests for the levels of mediumship, license and minister and is a member of the National Spiritualist Association of Churches.

She was pastor at the Royal Oak Church for 44 years.

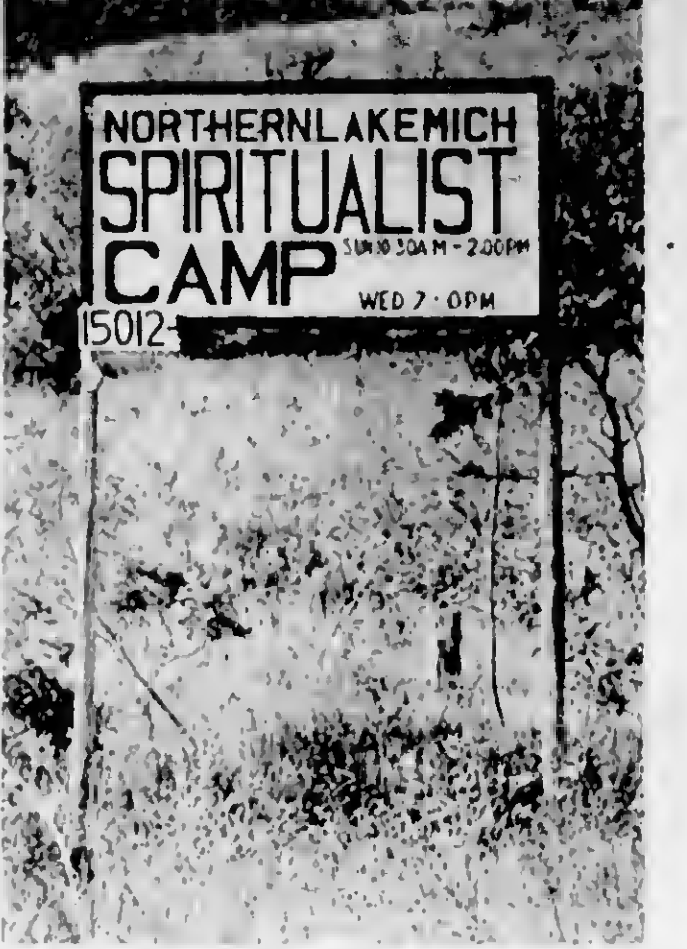

Rev. Beesley's husband, Edward, learned about spiritualism through study and his wife.

"I was raised Episcopalian," Beesley explained. "But after I met my wife I would find myself at seances hearing things that only I knew. And I would wonder how she would know or where she could get it from. There's no kidding about it. It's real," he said.

Rev. Beesley uses her powers to counsel people and to help them get back on the right track. And she gives readings not only to spiritualists but to people from many other religions, too.

"I have a lot of Catholic and Jewish friends that come over for readings even though they aren't spiritualists," she said smiling faintly. "Many years ago they used to come to the back door, look around for a while and then come in quickly."

"I don't predict or give names," she added. "I just try to help them with their troubles."

City slates hearing Aug. 31 on airport master plan ideas

A second public hearing on the Charlevoix Municipal Airport Master Plan will be held at 8 p.m. Aug. 31 in the Community Room of Charlevoix City Hall.

Airport users and interested members of the public are invited to attend the meeting to discuss the first portion of the airport study, which deals with the evaluation of conditions at the municipal airport, the traffic and the kinds of improvements that are needed at the city-owned facility.

Alvin Ranger, the engineer working on the study for the city, will attend the meeting and the city has also invited representatives of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and the Michigan Aeronautics Commission, (MAC) according to City Administrator Allen Sandberg.

Sandberg said city officials hope that the FAA and MAC officials will be able to indicate how state and federal sources might participate in funding the improvements at the airport. The officials are also expected to explain their position on the operation of the city airport.

In the first portion of the study, Ranger made many suggestions for improvements at the airport. He pointed out that in his analysis of the use of the airport some of the facilities are not adequate to meet current demand levels and will not meet future demands by airport users.

Ranger reported that 29,000 landings and takeoffs are expected to take place at the airport during 1977 and in 10 years that number is expected to increase to 53,000. By 1997, the number of landings and takeoffs at the Charlevoix airport is expected to reach 71,000.

To meet this demand, the engineer recommended the construction of a crosswind runway, additional hangar space, expanded automobile parking and expanded aircraft parking.

He also recommended the installation of new navigational aids such as a VOR (Visual Omni Range). The study also recommended that the category the Charlevoix airport is classified in be changed from general utility to basic transport.

A general utility airport is designed to accommodate all propeller driven airplanes of less than 12,500 pounds with substantial usage by aircraft having a gross weight of over 8,000 pounds. The general utility airport and its runways are intended to accommodate aircraft such as the Piper Navajo, the Beech King Air and the Cessna 440 series.

The basic transport airport is designed to handle turbojet aircraft up to 60,000 pounds gross weight. The basic transport airport and its runways are intended for use by executive jet aircraft such as the Grumman Gulfstream II and the Lear Jet series.

Boyne City church receives grant from Kresge Foundation

A $25,000 grant has been awarded by The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Michigan to the local Seventh-day Adventist Church to help rebuild its Community Service Center on North Park Street, Boyne City.

The center, which for years has been the only emergency relief agency of its kind in Charlevoix County, was destroyed by fire on April 26, 1975. Since then the Center's volunteers have been doing their best to serve the needs of the community by working out of garages.

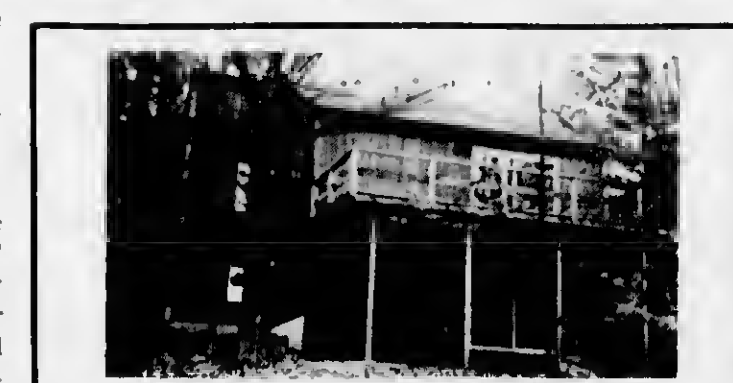

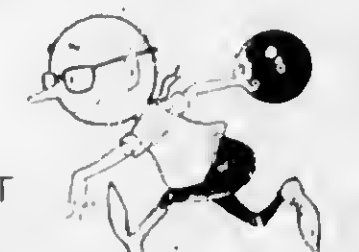

During the past 34 years, The Kresge Foundation has made appropriations of more than $283 million to institutions in the fields of higher education, health services, the arts, social welfare, and the care of the young and the aging. Construction and major renovation of facilities is the Foundation's primary concern, and grants are usually made on a challenge basis to encourage further fundraising efforts.

The Foundation, one of the largest in the United States in size of assets and appropriations, was created solely through the gifts of the late Sebastian S. Kresge, founder of the S.S. Kresge Company, now known as K-Mart Corporation. However, the Company and the Foundation are not related in any way.

Boyne City Adventist have started construction of the 30' x 67' building with December as the target date for completion. The projected value of the building, furnishings, equipment and supplies is $52,000. The local Adventist Church is making up the difference between the grant from Kresge and its completed cost. The $25,000 will be received from the Foundation around the middle of October.

Volunteer labor will be used in construction of the building and should the cost of the building come under the projected figures "we will cheerfully refund any funds received from the Foundation which remain unused," Pat Sherwood, community service director, said.

Mass transit system important to future of Charlevoix and should be used now

"Cancelled due to lack of interest" seems to be a common phrase these days.

After the activist '60s and early '70s, the attitude in the country seems to be one of apathy. And it's apathy toward everything—politics, economics and society. And Charlevoix County residents are just as apathetic as anyone else in the nation.

The latest casualty to apathy appears to be the intercity bus system. Wolverine Stages, a Pellston-based firm that has been serving Charlevoix through a state program for just a little more than a year. State transportation authorities announced last week that unless Charlevoix area residents show more interest in the bus system, the service will be discontinued.

The state has already invested more than $60,000 in trying to make the run between Charlevoix, Petoskey, Charlevoix and Mackinaw City become self-supporting, but Charlevoix residents just don't appear to be interested in riding the bus.

Granted, it is easy to be apathetic over a bus service, especially one that hasn't been properly promoted or advertised, but the point is, the day is coming—and it's coming soon—when mass transit and bus services will be very important in the lives of Americans.

Even today our representatives in the U.S. Congress are discussing an energy program with gasoline taxes that could raise the cost of a gallon of gasoline to $1. Yet, Charlevoix residents seem to be unconcerned about the pending energy situation and oblivious to the fact that this country is going to have to cut back its consumption of oil and oil derivatives.

It will be much easier for us to face the crunch when it comes if we already have a mass transportation system in operation. That's the beauty of the current intercity bus system. It's in operation now. Northern Michigan is thinking ahead for a change.

But we will lose the advantage of all this planning and foresight if we don't support the system now and help it get off the ground and stay off the ground so that when we need it, it will be here.

The state transportation officials say that all they need are ten people riding the bus daily. The officials suggest that people planning trips into Petoskey or other neighboring towns, should take every tenth trip by bus. This way we will save one-tenth of the fuel we are consuming and we will be able to support the bus system, too.

It doesn't seem like too crazy an idea and it wouldn't harm us to be prepared for the future, too.

Clockwise

The Clocks returned to Canada for the first time in five years last week. We are happy to report that Canadians generally seem to be a prosperous lot, although they are beset by many of the same problems that afflict Americans. Take inflation, for example. Up until fairly recent times, prices of foodstuffs, clothing and building materials in Canada were generally well below those in the states, although you would pay dearly for such large items as automobiles, television sets and refrigerators.

Today, all Canadian prices are out of sight—except for beef. That one commodity sells for about what it does on the American market, which, goodness knows, isn't cheap but is at least affordable. Other foodstuffs will cost anywhere from 10 percent to 30 percent more. Soda crackers, a staple of both American and Canadian diets, still can be purchased for 49 cents a pound on this side of the border. One local store this weekend had a special at 25 cents a pound. Across the border, prices ranged from 79 to 82 cents a pound.

All of which makes me wonder if there isn't a little hanky-panky in Canada's soda cracker industry. If Americans can make and sell crackers for 49 cents a pound, Canadians should be able to match up penny for penny, particularly since the principle ingredient—wheat flour—is produced in such quantities in Canada. Good mayonnaise costs about twice as much in Canada as it does in the United States. There is less difference in inferior brands. The real shocker is bathroom tissue which costs more than 30 cents a roll in Canadian stores. Remember, Canada is a major world supplier of pulp wood from which the stuff is made.

WHAT DO CANADIANS worry about? The threatened separation of Quebec Province appears to be a major concern. Some say the French-speaking province will never break away. Others say, "Let her go." Folks in Ontario agree that residents of their sister province to the east will have a tough time competing effectively with her highly industrialized neighbors, if separation does come about.

In any event, things are Frenchier in Ontario than ever before—which perhaps may be a move to appease Quebec Prime Minister Rene Levesque. French is being given equal space on the labels of national brand products and is not just squeezed down in one corner. Some road signs and business signs are in both French and English, particularly north of Georgian Bay.

However, we found a virtual boycott against French on the streets of southern Ontario.

PRIME MINISTER Pierre Trudeau, who was left to bring up the kids alone after Margaret split to do her own thing, has become something of a national hero. He is generally considered invincible, since his capture of the inebriated wife. Former Conservative PM John Diefenbacher, however, still has a wide following in the hinterlands.

CANADIAN GRAFTITI: Pierre Trudeau is a CIA plant.

THE MORNING we left Canada, we were reminded from whence comes all of northern Michigan's vile weather. We had bedded down for the night at the mill town of Espanola north of Georgian Bay after a day-long drive through heavy rain. Saturday morning, Aug. 20, we awoke to find the car encrusted with ice.

It's nice to be back...

Paula Holmes... Speaking Her Mind

It's amazing what you can do for yourself if you just give it a try. In recent years I have become an advocate of being self-sufficient. My constant struggle for independence stems from a New Years resolution I made one year in a fit of insanity.

Becoming self-sufficient would help to improve my mental and physical health, I rationalized that cold winter night. And self-sufficiency was bound to be rewarding as I conquered each problem I faced through my own efforts, I argued further.

So for those of you who saw me hanging over the end of a Volkswagen station wagon last weekend, rest assured I have not lost my mind. I was just attempting to help a friend be self-sufficient, too.

Her ear needed a tune-up. She had the tools to do the job and a manual describing how to do it. All I had to do, she said, was read the instructions to her and she would do all the dirty work.

Being a graduate of a powder puff mechanics class, which was offered by the Volkswagen dealership in Lansing, I felt I probably could be of some help, although since graduating from the class I had never done anything more than change the oil in my own car. So we proceeded. First we changed the points. By me I mean my friend changed the points and I read the directions and supervised. The next day—we didn't want to rush into anything—we adjusted the valves and fixed the timing, all according to the book I actually got into the work myself, changing the gaskets.

Having never handled a gasket before, I was surprised to find out what it was and how easily it can be changed. I thought I probably even looked like a real grease monkey as I checked out my hands and fingernails following my work on the gasket.

Then the moment of truth came. We had finished the tune up. Every part that we had removed was back in place, and by the way, in the same place we had taken it from. My friend walked around to the front of the car and got in the driver's seat.

I held my breath as I watched her turn the ignition key and waited for the roar of a finely tuned motor.

At first it didn't start right up. And when it finally did get going it wasn't the smoothest sound in the world. But finally we were both satisfied that the engine did indeed sound like it was running better.

Self-sufficiency or no, it was quite a relief.

When plump, apple-cheeked grandmothers were passed out (who insisted on babysitting while you were still carrying the child), my mother was not getting an unlisted phone.

Don't get me wrong. She loves her grandchildren. As she puts it, "I also love Smokey the Bear and Harry Reasoner, but I wouldn't want to sit with them on a regular basis."

She considers a grandchild a special bonus for having outlived her own children. "When you're a sitting duck," she declares, "you lose your role as a grandparent. Of course," she said, "if you get desperate you can call me at this number at a candy store. They know where to reach me."

I called the number last week. "Mom, I haven't had a vacation away from the kids since my honeymoon."

"What kind of crack is that?" she asked. "I told you I was desperate. Do you suppose you could sit with the kids for a few days?"

"They hurt me the last time," she said.

"That's my fault," I replied. "I should have told you that when you stand the baby up on your lap, he pushes his head against your chin and cuts your tongue in half. Besides the kids are teenagers now. It'll be easier."

"Then what?" she asked. "The problems of teenagers are overdramatized," I told mother. "Actually, there is nothing to sitting with them."

If it Fitz

by Jim Fitzgerald

Upon the occasion of my most recent birthday, my son Ned presented me with a bottle of vitamin pills and a bottle of gin. "For your health and happiness," he explained. The kid is only half bad.

The most touching birthday gift came from my baby sister, Linda. It was my old address screwed into a jagged hunk of wood. The wood was rescued from the pile of rubble that used to be my boyhood home at 1020 Pine Grove Ave. in Port Huron.

Lately I have done much sobbing, because 1020 is being replaced by a parking lot.

Along with the sobbing came some vivid reminiscing about what pains in the butt my four sisters were to their only brother.

Linda thought if I had the 1020 address to hang on my apartment wall, maybe I would shut my big mouth. Probably not.

From my biggest and oldest sister, Terrible Jean, there was a mere birthday card.

She included a note saying I had finally written something with which she agreed - my explanation of Billy Carter's popularity.

I told Billy draws crowds to carnivals because he is such a tremendous comfort to all otherwise respectable families that must put up with an idiot brother.

If it can happen to the president of the United States, it can happen to anybody. "It happened to our family," Terrible Jean said.

Several readers have questioned the truth of my contention that Terrible Jean has always abused me terribly. If the above paragraph is not evidence enough, hear this:

The birthday card she sent me was one she received herself 4 years ago. She pasted a strip of paper over the message written to her, so she would have room to call me an idiot.

"Excuse the patch job," she wrote in a postscript, "but you are not worth 40 cents." I swear to God I do not make these things up.

The most frequent complaint I hear about the Renaissance Center is that there's no place to park. I spent several days investigating this problem, on the scene, and I have a solution.

Across the street from the center there is a large parking lot that is mostly empty. Several signs say only lawyers can park there.

Just a few steps down the street is the University of Detroit Law School. The quickest way to find a parking place at the Renaissance Center is to enroll at U-D and earn a law degree to be validated at the lawyers' parking lot.

At Whiting Auditorium in Flint, you can get a lopsided pain in the neck. In the several balconies that line both sides of the theater, the seats face straight ahead. If you sit in a normal posture, the only thing you can see is the people in the balcony on the other side, staring back at you. To see the stage, you must turn your head permanently in that direction. "Now I know how it feels to watch ball tennis match," the man beside me said.

"I shouldn't complain about Disney World, says Art McCafferty of Ypsilanti. He claims he was at an amusement park "so bad the spook house consisted of a blindfolded walk through their Fortia John."

"Chorus Line" is not the most exciting musical I've seen in Detroit in the last few years. "Selma" is. That's Tommy Butler's spirit salute to the foot stomping and the message are all marvelous. "Selma" would make a great TV special, if TV producers only had that much sense.

My wife and I caught "Selma" at the Music Hall toward the end of its run. Pat noted that ours were the only white faces in the audience. After the show we went to the Soup Kitchen for jazz, and Pat noted we were the only people there with gray hair. "Everywhere you take me," she said, "we are usually the oldest people or the whitest people in the place."

"Why is that?" I told her it's because I have spring in my heart and watermelon in my soul.

My recent column on the Bible brought me more and more quotations from that good book. Probably the most succinct was Proverbs 18: "A fool's mind is his destruction, and his lips are the snarl of his soul." At least it doesn't say anything about my typewriter.

Mercer Ellington and the Duke's orchestra gave a fine concert at the Pontchartrain. After the show, Ellington joined the crowd downstairs around Ernie Swan's piano.

When Ernie congratulated Ellington on his concert, Ellington replied: "I have spring in my heart and watermelon in my soul."

I don't report this exchange of praise to make Ernie feel good. I do it to prove to my wife that part of my job is sitting around piano bars.

Meet Charlevoix

... Gordon Van Wieren

Gordon Van Wieren is the new Superintendent of Charlevoix schools. This week, as the date for school opening approaches, the Courier talks with him about his job this time of year.

COURIER: What are some of the things that must be done to start another year of school?

VAN WIEN: First, we must make sure we have the personnel to fill all positions and to carry on all programs. This includes all areas - bus drivers, custodians, cooks, secretaries, and teachers.

COURIER: Do you have problems filling the teaching positions?

VAN WIEN: No, we don't have the problem now that we did several years ago. There are many well qualified people looking for teaching jobs.

COURIER: What about the facilities?

VAN WIEN: We're making sure they are ready from a custodial aspect. We have to be sure there are enough rooms available. We've moved our offices out of the portable at the high school to make one more class room. COURIER: What about the work on the middle school building?

VAN WIEN: We're in the process of replacing the windows and improving the playground. These improvements are being made as the result of the request for millage passing a few months ago.

COURIER: What else is going on?

VAN WIEN: Negotiations are in process with the non-teaching personnel. Their contract expired August 12 and we're not sure about State's Aid. However, that will probably be the same as last year. All in all, we're trying to tie things down so we can get a fixed budget.

COURIER: Anything else?

VAN WIEN: We're working on the bus routes to determine that all the children are taken care of. There's a request to exchange some property with the Ellsworth School District - we've had many meetings on that. We're registering all new students at all grade levels. The principals and secretaries take care of that. At the high school, we're busy getting transcripts to colleges and recommending graduates for jobs. We're ordering and distributing supplies.

COURIER: Will the school population be about the same this year?

VAN WIEN: About the same, yes, and the faculty will be the same size.

COURIER: Will there be anything new in the teaching program?

VAN WIEN: No. The only exception will be at the middle school if funds are available after the millage vote. In that case we will implement a new reading program. It is a different approach to helping kids with reading difficulties.

COURIER: Do you have any special words for parents at the beginning of the school year?

VAN WIEN: Yes.

Parents of high schoolers look with them about their objectives - what they want to do after graduation. They should help them make decisions. If parents have questions about college or job requirements, they should contact the school counselors. At the high school level, it is important that students and parents know whether the education is to be technical or college preparatory. At any level, it is important that parents take an interest in school, ask questions of teachers. They should take a few minutes to see what is expected in various subject areas and encourage students. As educators, we like to see all students succeed and keep them motivated, but if parents don't take an interest, the job is difficult.

COURIER: Have you set the school calendar for the year?

VAN WIEN: It has to be negotiated with the teachers so it can't be ratified until they all get back. However, the teachers will report to work on September 6 and the first day of school for students will be September 7. The last day of school will be June 9. The tentative calendar also calls for a Thanksgiving holiday on November 24 and 25, a Christmas vacation from December 22 to January 3, and a spring vacation from noon of March 24 to April 3.

COURIER: How many years have you served as a superintendent of schools?

VAN WIEN: I'm beginning my 14th year. I served seven years in Marquette, three years in Indian River, and three years in Michigan State.

COURIER: Do you live right in Charlevoix?

VAN WIEN: Yes, we live on Pa-ba-Shan Lane.

COURIER: Tell us about your family.

VAN WIEN: My wife, Jean, is a former reading teacher from the Battle Creek school system. Now she's a housewife. Our oldest daughter, Vicki, graduated from Michigan State in Hotel and Restaurant Management. She's going to work for Sky Chef, the airlines catering service, and will probably be stationed at Kennedy Airport.

Our son, Gordon, Jr., is in the Lyman Briggs College of Math and Science at Michigan State

City gets more CETA funds

The City of Charlevoix will allow the city to complete several projects. One project is replacing the poles at the Mt. McSaubia ski hill. The city owns some poles that are standing in the Belleaire area left over from when the city operated a hydroelectric plant. These poles will be removed and used at the ski hill.

There are several other projects that need to be completed at Mt. McSaubia including the clearing of an area for an ice skating rink.

CETA employees will also assist city crews in the lowering of water services so that they won't freeze up in cold weather and the burying of electric cables.

The extra employees will also be used to paint the interior and exteriors of city buildings as well as to complete work on the Lake Michigan Beach park area.

By PAULA HOLMES

Business has been booming in the Round Lake Yacht Basin this summer.

Since May 1, 750 boats have been docked in the 31 boat slips operated by the City of Charlevoix, Curly Hartzell, dockmaster, said.

"And add to that at least another 100 boats that we've had rafted out in the harbor area," Hartzell said. "All together that makes for a better than average number of boats in the harbor this summer."

"All the slips have been filled since June 1," Hartzell, who with his wife Kay has managed the harbor for three years, said the busiest times for the yacht basin have been the July 4th, Venetian Festival and Waterfront Art Show weekends.

"On Venetian Nights we had boats all over the place," Hartzell said. "We had them rafted here and there and crossways throughout the harbor."

Hartzell said for every one boat he has docked this summer he has had to turn five boats away.

"I'd really like to see them expand the dock area," he said. "The city could build a pier from the alley on Mason Street out into Round Lake and provide more space for boats. It would be like the pier in Potosky or Harbor Springs."

"You know this harbor is a big boost to the businesses in Charlevoix. The boats spend a lot of money in town and they are a big tourist attraction, too. A lot of tourists come down to look at the boats."

Hartzell said the boats have come from California, Maryland and Florida, the Bahamas and other far reaches of the world. One sailboat pulled into the protected harbor after a 15-month cruise to India.

It was a 65-foot sailboat," Hartzell said. "They were on their way back to Chicago. They had sailed up the east coast and in through the St. Lawrence Seaway."

The largest boat that has been in the harbor on anchor this summer was a 120-foot cabin cruiser, which Hartzell estimated cost around $2.3 million. The largest boat in the dock was a 73-foot cabin cruiser.

Hartzell said the boats in the slips start at about 18 feet in length and go on up to 100 footers. He estimated the cost of the boats in the harbor this summer ranged from $15,000 to $350,000.

The Hartzells put in long hours at their job. They start work at about 6:30 a.m. and go home around 8 p.m., but they say they love it.

"We've met the nicest people here," Mrs. Hartzell said. "And we get nothing but compliments about the shops, scenery and the protected harbor here in Charlevoix."

And there have been plenty of compliments for the harbormaster and his wife, too.

"Nobody knows what they do except the boaters," one boater said as she stopped to chat with the Hartzells during their interview with the Courier. "We've never had a harbormaster like Curly. He's really great and so is Kay."

The couple said they have had plenty of experiences as they have run the docks but they wouldn't elaborate on very many of them.

"I'd love to write a book about some of the things that have happened down here," Mrs. Hartzell laughed. "But it would never get published."

Hartzell did come up with one story, however, about three little girls.

"Their dad had been in here three times seeing if he could get a slip," Hartzell recalled. "Finally we found a place for them to dock and the next morning we got these letters from the three girls."

"They were so grateful to be able to get off the boat that they wrote us a thank you note. It was addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Dockmaster and it told how they appreciated being allowed to get out and play in the grass."

Mrs. Hartzell said the couple corresponded with many of the people they met at the boat slips.

"We got a lot of Christmas cards from the boaters," she said. "And many of them stop in and see us in Florida in the winter."

The Hartzells will continue to take care of the dock until October 1 and then they will head for the southern climes, where Hartzell runs a shrimp boat during the winter months.

CURLY HARTZELL, dockmaster for the Round Lake Yacht Basin, examines the ropes for one of the yachts docked in the city slips. Checking the boats is one of Curly's many duties at the dock which has housed around 750 boats so far this summer.

Rumor unites area people in protest of old petition

Rumors are powerful things.

Last week Debbie Bellinger heard that Madelyn Murray O'Hare, well-known president of an atheist organization in this country, had petitioned the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to have all religious programs removed from television and radio.

"I thought that was just terrible," Ms. Bellinger said. "You know if they took religious programs off of TV and radio that would mean all of our Christmas and Easter specials, too."

Before she knew it she had lined up 100 local people who were willing to send letters to the FCC protesting any removal of religious programs from the airwaves.

Then she called the Charlevoix Courier to find out what the staff had heard about the O'Hare petition. The Courier staff checked with the Consumer Information Division of the FCC in Washington D.C. and found out that Mrs. O'Hare had indeed filed a petition, but the request had been denied in 1975 by the FCC.

"We were just concerned," she said. "You know no one thought she could get prayer taken out of the schools and so no one did anything about it."

"But we weren't going to stand by and not do anything this time."

The new approach uses television and radio supported by outdoor posters and billboards and newspaper advertising appeals to people to wear safety belts because "Somebody Needs You," and then added facts showing the lives and injuries that would be saved if everybody wore the belts now in their cars.

"The program has clearly demonstrated that a well conceived campaign using the right messages supported by facts and effective communications techniques can indeed persuade people to wear safety belts despite the odds to the contrary and the failures of past campaigns," Robert O. Sorsson, spokesman for Motorists Information Inc., said.

"We've had at least three calls a day since the petition was first filed in 1975. But it has been denied now."

And that was good news to Ms. Bellinger.

"We were just concerned," she said. "You know no one thought she could get prayer taken out of the schools and so no one did anything about it."

"But we weren't going to stand by and not do anything this time."

The research report connected with the initial "Somebody Needs You" campaign showed that people who said they were safety belts "always" or "most of the time" increased from 29 percent to 41 percent with a corresponding decrease in the number who said they never wore their safety belts from 42 to 37 percent.

Replicates to other survey questions reflecting attitudinal changes were similarly encouraging and consistent, Sorsson said.

Children get chance to meet bus Sept. 6

Stepping into the big yellow school bus for the first time is one of life's major events. In fact, it can be a traumatic experience for both the child and the mother.

That is why the Charlevoix School District has arranged for bus drivers to make the rounds with the big yellow buses in order to acquaint the prospective kindergarten students and their parents with the drivers and the buses. The visits will be made to the homes the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 6, the day before school opens for the 1977-78 school year. Supt. Gordon W. VanWieren has announced. Parents are urged to be available along with the children at that time. VanWieren went on to say that the first few days of school can be extremely important in determining how a child will adjust to the school environment. This program is intended to make the "first step" a little easier.

Pollution increases summer heat

People who insist that "it's not the heat, it's the humidity" are all wet. It's both — and more.

Prominent in that "more" is something described in an Orellian terms as "enrichment" of the atmosphere, more commonly known as pollution. Other ingredients include the greenhouse effect and a few dozen other islands, with perhaps a sprinkling of sunspots stirred in.

Mixed slowly and allowed to stand, this recipe has produced those shimmering streaks of stagnant air that causes temperatures to climb and spirals to sag as the United States struggles through the hottest summer of the decade.

Discomfort Magnified

What starts as a normally warm summer day can become searing under the influence of the "greenhouse effect."

Massive use of fossil fuels such as coal and oil increases the level of carbon dioxide and other contaminants in the air until these pollutants form a floating blanket, trapping much of the heat that otherwise would escape into space.

"Heat islands" are urban areas where the combined heat from houses, factories, and motor vehicles emissions make the air warmer than in the surrounding countryside.

Temperatures can vary as much as 20 degrees between a city's business center and its residential suburbs. Throngs of people in the commercial district, along with heavy automotive traffic and the solar energy reflected from buildings and sidewalks, add to the heat buildup.

Trees, shrubs, and grass help absorb some of the heat from the sun. But they are no match for the drought that has affected many sections of the prolonged heat, dry weather. When rain has come, it has been limited chiefly to brief cloudbursts that batter the weak crops before the water runs off the parched ground, causing more harm than good.

The severe summer also has exacted its toll in human life. New York City officials blamed the record heat for a 10 percent rise in the city's death rate during July.

Across the nation, hospital administrations for heat stroke and respiratory ailments rose as cities swallowed under smog laden skies.

Climatologists variously attribute the unusually sultry summer following a brutally cold winter to a global cooling or warming trend. On one thing scientists and laymen agree: Whatever the change, it's no improvement.

Green fields have been burned brown, causing grief for cattlemen and farmers alike. California alone stands to lose an estimated $1.5 billion because of the prolonged heat, dry weather.

USDA booklet explains canning process

Home canning is one of those old-fashioned things that people still do for a variety of reasons—from saving money to preserving the garden's best to perk up winter suppers. Whatever your reason, be sure you're using safe home canning methods.

To help you, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has a booklet, "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," giving different canning methods and safety tips. For your copy, send 45 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 122E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

For fruits, tomatoes, and pickled vegetables, use a boiling-water-bath canner. These acid foods can be processed safely in boiling water. Any big metal container may be used as a water-bath canner if it is deep enough for the water to be well over the tops of the jars. Allow 2 to 4 inches above the jar tops for brisk boiling. The canner must have a tight-fitting cover and a wire or wooden rack. For all other vegetables, except tomatoes, use a steam-pressure canner. To process these low-acid foods safely in a reasonable length of time, you need a temperature higher than that of boiling water.

Be sure to use only jars, cans, and lids made especially for home canning. Never use ordinary jars like mayonnaise or coffee jars. Don't reuse sealing lids. The rubber ring deteriorates easily and prevents a tight seal. Get new rings for one-piece lids and new metal lids with sealing compounds for two-piece lids. Don't overpack foods. Trying to get too much food into one jar may result in underprocessing and spoilage.

FOLLOW THE TIME AND TEMPERATURE SPECIFICATIONS FOR FOODS AND CONTAINER SIZES EXACTLY AS LISTED IN INSTRUCTIONS. Adjust processing times according to altitude. Don't use canned foods that show any signs of spoilage.

Watch for bulging lids, leaks, off-odors or mold. If in doubt, DON'T TASTE. Destroy out of reach of children and pets. Boil home canned vegetables in a covered pot for at least 10 minutes before serving. "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables" (46 cents) is one of over 200 selected federal consumer publications listed in the Fall edition of the "Consumer Information Catalog." The Catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center, Colorado 81009.

of the General Services Administration. You can get a free copy by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Food poisoning may be cause of upset stomachs after dinner

You've been up half the night with an upset stomach. Your head feels as if it's going to burst and you ache all over. You figure you've picked up the flu, right?

Maybe. But maybe not. A lot of people do get the flu. But a lot of people who think they have the flu are really suffering from a mild case of food poisoning.

A new pamphlet from the Department of Agriculture, "Food Safety for the Family," tells how you can prevent food poisoning. The pamphlet is available free, just by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 678E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009. Most germs that cause food poisoning are killed when you boil, broil, or roast foods. But if you leave food at room temperature for 2 hours or longer after cooking, some germs can produce poisons that are not destroyed by heating. So don't leave food out, and be sure to keep food hot until served and refrigerate leftovers at once.

Germs can't multiply very fast at cold temperatures. At 40 degrees F. or below, meat, poultry, eggs, milk, cheese, and other perishables can be stored safely. If you thaw frozen foods, do it in the refrigerator. If you have to thaw them outside the refrigerator, put them in a sealed plastic bag under cold running water; or put them in a closed double paper bag without use of water. This way the products will get warm enough to thaw and stay cool enough to slow down germ growth.

Every kitchen has some germs. So in order to keep utensils, countertops, hands and food clean, you're going to have to keep washing things off. Don't handle food if you have infected cuts and sores. Germs can spread from raw meat to cooked meat. Suppose you carry raw hamburgers to the grill on a plate, then use the same plate to carry cooked hamburgers back to the table? The result could be germs on your cooked burgers.

Pressure cooker necessary for safe canning

If you're going to can vegetables (except tomatoes) or meats, you need a pressure canner. Only with a pressure canner can you be sure to safely can these products.

The danger is due to bacteria which can cause botulism. These bacteria are in soil and therefore may be on the food you can. Unless they are destroyed by high temperature sterilization in canning, these bacteria can grow in the food and produce a deadly poison.

In a pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure, food in the jars reaches 240 degrees if processed the right length of time. This time varies because foods differ in density. Use the canner instruction booklet and Cooperative Extension Service publication as guides.

If you're buying a new pressure canner, an auction or garage sale might be the best place to get one. The canner may be so old that replacement parts aren't available. Also to work well, it must be in good condition, and you need the instruction booklet.

If you already own a pressure canner, check it carefully before using it each season. Examine the rubber gasket around the lid. It should be flexible, not brittle or cracked. Replacement gaskets are available at hardware and appliance stores from the manufacturer.

The dial pressure gauge should also be checked for accuracy. Contact the manufacturer to have the gauge checked.

If you plan to buy a water bath canner, the size range from one holding seven pint jars to one that holds nine quarts. Check the depth of the canner you want. Be sure it's deep enough so 1 to 2 inches of water can cover the top of the jars. A rack is needed, too, to keep jars separate and off the canner bottom. This allows the boiling water to circulate freely around each jar. Getting equipment together is only one part of managing. You also need to be organized when the job is at hand.

First, have enough space clear in the kitchen. Use the counter to good advantage by lining up equipment and planning the most efficient way to use the space.

Then have everything ready to use. For example, get all the jars washed and scalded before you need the sink for cleaning food. Also, if hot water is needed for blanching or scalding, have it ready on the range while you clean and trim the product.

If you need extra ice for quick cooling, freeze it beforehand in clean milk cartons or pans. Then have any containers, packaging materials and labels you need at the space where you'll use them.

Everyone in the family can help, provided that appropriate jobs are assigned. Younger children can help wash or rough-trim vegetables and delight in making labels for the finished products. But keep them out of the traffic pattern when you're handling hot water or jars.

Contact your county extension office for up-to-date information on canning and freezing.

"I HOPE YOU HAVE THE ANTIQUE INSTRUCTION BOOK FOR THIS ANTIQUE CANNER"

Jeanne Lynn Mutz marries John Douglas Hamilton here

Jeanne Lynn Mutz of Hale became the bride of John Douglas Hamilton August 13 at the United Methodist Church of Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Mutz of Charlevoix and the bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Hamilton of Potosi.

The Reverend Austin Reiger performed the double-ring evening ceremony before 200 guests. The church was decorated with white potted mums and ferns for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Irving Drost, the bride wore a candlelight organza gown with flocked daisies over candlelight coupe de ville polyester, ruffled A-line with full sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. She wore a matching hat and carried a bouquet of white roses, blue miniatures, carnations, baby's breath, and ferns. The bride fashioned the gown herself.

Janet Mayes of Hale served as maid of honor. Her gown, also made by the bride, was of powder blue organza with flocked white daisies over powder blue coupe de ville polyester. She carried a bouquet of blue and white miniatures.

Thomas Hamilton, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man, and Dave Mutz and John Penberthy seated the guests.

The wedding reception was hosted by the bride's parents at the American Legion Hall, with Vickie Shultz serving punch, and Jackie Hamilton and Susan Penberthy serving the cake. The bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Country Hearth in Potosi.

The new Mrs. Hamilton will return to her teaching position in Hale, and her husband will work for the Circuit Court judge in Tawas City, where the couple will reside.

Sandra Marie Chew weds Robert Davis Chest

Sandra Marie Chew became the bride of Robert Davis Chest August 13 in the First Baptist Church of Boyne City. White and yellow gladioli graced the altar as the Reverend John A. Beard united the couple in a double ring ceremony, performed before 150 guests.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Chew of East Jordan, who gave their daughter in marriage. The bridegroom's parents are Mrs. Betty Chest and the late Robert Chest of Mobile, Alabama.

For her wedding, the bride wore a floor-length gown of bridal satin with attached lace train, fitted bodice, ruffled V-neckline, high fitted midriff, flared skirt, and short puffed sleeves. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white daisies and yellow carnations.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Mrs. Charles Renkiewicz. Mrs. Keith Kenney, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Her gown was of yellow crepe, styled in the same manner as the bride's, and she carried yellow mums.

Mike Ardoin of Mobile, friend of the bridegroom, served as best man. James Chest, brother of the bridegroom, and Keith Kenney, brother-in-law of the bride, were ushers.

A reception in the church parlors followed the wedding ceremony.

Former local man discusses energy at MSU

While utility users across the country are trying to meet federally issued energy proposals, Michigan State University's engineer in charge of energy management, James Sneathen, said this year was named "Young Engineer of the Year" by the Grand Valley Chapter, Michigan Society of Professional Engineers, said time clocks had been installed in campus buildings which automatically cut back the heating or cooling, at night. Pamphlet describes rights of veterans to jobs

If you've just gotten out of the service and you're looking for a job, you should know what you're entitled to.

A free pamphlet from the Department of Labor will tell you about your rights, your benefits, and where you can go for assistance. You can get a copy of "Out of the Service and Looking for a Job" by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 677E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Veterans may be entitled to unemployment compensation if they can't find a job immediately. Sometimes, they may have the right to return to their old jobs. If you need more training to qualify for a new career, your local Veterans Assistance Center or your State employment service may be able to help you get on-the-job training or vocational or academic schooling. Many of the men and women who work in Veterans Assistance Centers (USVAC) are veterans themselves, and they can give invaluable assistance. Remember to bring your Armed Forces separation form DD214 and social security card when you visit a USVAC.

Veterans are also entitled to special consideration from the U.S. Civil Service Commission, if they are interested in finding a government job. You can get a five or ten point preference on examinations for filling jobs, and some special appointments, such as veterans readjustment appointments, may be available. Further information on Federal employment can be obtained from one of the Federal Job Information Centers listed in your telephone directory under U.S. Government, Civil Service Commission.

Out of the Service and Looking for a Job? (free) is just one of over 200 publications of interest listed in the Consumer Information Catalog. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, this Catalog is available free by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

THIS MODEL AIRPLANE enthusiast checks his plane during the annual Charlevoix Lions Club Fly In at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport Sunday.

QUITE A NUMBER of model airplanes were at the annual Lions Club Fly In. The model airplane owners also put on a demonstration of the agility and prowess of their craft.

FULL SIZE PLANES also lined the airfield during the Lions Club Fly In Sunday. Area residents and visitors had a chance to study the planes up close and also to ride in a few of them.

Lions Club Fly In a success

Foul weather put a damper on the eighth annual Charlevoix Lions Club Fly In at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport Sunday. But many area residents and visitors turned out for the festivities despite the gray skies.

Only a dozen planes were able to fly into the airport because of the bad weather that engulfed the state, but more than 30 remote control model aircraft were on hand. Operators of the model planes gave a three-hour show to interested bystanders.

Also on hand for the Fly In was a U.S. Air Force helicopter. Visitors were allowed to tour the craft and airman explained its operation.

The helicopter was disabled by one of the model aircraft during the afternoon. The craft, a flying saucer driven by Snoopy, alias the Red Baron, got out of range and traveling at 30 miles per hour crashed into the rear propeller of the whirlybird.

Replacement parts were expected to be shipped to the airport Monday so that the helicopter could take off.

Visitors to the Fly In were also able to take plane rides in small aircraft run by Lions Club pilots. More than 200 people were able to get a bird's eye view of Charlevoix.

A chicken barbecue was also enjoyed by Fly In participants at the airport.

A door prize of a gas grill from Kit Carson was awarded to Bob Hater.

DON MEGGISON and Vince Olach, Lions Club members, show their cooking ability during the annual Fly In at the airport Sunday.

A U.S. AIR FORCE helicopter was also on hand for the Fly In. Air Force officers gave residents a tour of the cockpit and the rest of the whirlybird throughout the day.

Model plane grounds helicopter

MODEL AIRPLANE enthusiasts check out Snoopy and his flying saucer following an accident. The flying saucer collided mid-air with the Air Force helicopter which was on the ground. The back propeller of the helicopter was so badly damaged that it couldn't take off.

A U.S. AIR FORCE airman inspects the damage to the rear propeller of the helicopter. The propeller was bent when a model plane ran into it.

'Team looks good,' Coach Carey says

VETERAN COACH Don Carey watches as members of the varsity football squad at Charlevoix High School goes through its paces during pre-season drill.

Gaylord captures tourney

ELLISWORTH-The fifth annual Ellsworth Open Slo-Pitch Tournament came to an exciting close Aug. 13 with Weisel Construction of Gaylord defeating Bazun Well Drilling of Atlanta.

Several Charlevoix teams participated in the two week tourney, but they were bumped out before the finals.

Weisel Construction advanced through the winner's bracket by defeating a Charlevoix team, Murdick's Fudge, R & L Auto, and Little Caesars.

Bazun blasted Charlevoix Township and then was upset by R & L Auto. The team came back with victories over Eastport Baglist, Murdick's Fudge, R & L Auto, Koboski Red-Mix and Little Caesars.

"We expect to be competitive," Carey said. "But we know there are other fine ball clubs in the league and that there will be some tough games on our hands."

Carey declined to say which

The Cubs captured the Peanut League title in the Charlevoix Recreation Department sponsored Softball program. The Cubs were awarded the title after defeating the Pirates twice during the regular season though the two teams had like records of five wins and three losses. The other two teams in the league, the A's and the Reds, had 3-5 records for the season.

Kirk Lieberman returns to Grand Valley squad

A Charlevoix resident was among the returning players and freshmen trying out for positions for the Grand Valley State College varsity football squad.

Kirk Lieberman was among the prospective football players reporting for early football drills at the college in Allendale last week.

Baillargeon picked as top player

Jim Baillargeon of Charlevoix was picked as the Outstanding Defensive Player in the 14-15 age group at Michigan Tech's recent Summer Basketball School. Baillargeon was one of 55 boys attending the one-week session July 31 to August 6 on the Michigan Tech campus.

Football fever is in the air as temperatures drop into the fall ranges and pre-season practice starts.

The Charlevoix High School Varsity football team opened pre-season practice last week with one week of conditioning. Players were allowed to wear only head gear and shoes during the week of evening practices.

This week the team is expected to begin wearing full gear and will begin two practices a day.

"The team looks good," Coach Don Carey said. "We have good numbers and depth."

Carey said the numbers and depth were lacking in the freshman and sophomore classes and that he hoped more young men in those classes would consider coming out for football this year.

Another new team in the schedule this year is Rogers City. The school is a member of the Michigan-Huron Shores League, but it had to drop from the football schedule last year to a defeat of school millage. It is anticipated that Rogers City and Gaylord both will be tough teams this season.

Leading the Rayder gridiron squad will be co-captains Tom Jones and Kip Cinnamon.

The list of players is incomplete because new members are still being added to the team. Coach Carey said any young man interested in

Dairy Queen defeats Kusina in women's play

The neck-n-neck race between the Dairy Queen and Kusina Motors in the Charlevoix Recreation Department Women's Slo-Pitch League was broken last week as the Dairy Queen defeated Kusina by one run in an eight-inning game.

Cindy Kitchy had the win for Dairy Queen on a mere two hits while Tammy Mitchell took the loss for Kusina on a low eight hits.

In other action Dairy Queen also downed Village Inn Pizza 8-6. Ms. Kitchy again had the win this time on nine hits while Sue Peters took the loss on 13 hits. Sandra Hodge had a home run for Dairy Queen.

Dairy Queen also squeaked by Tri-City Asphalt 9-8. Amy Potter had the win on six hits and Sue Holm took the loss on 15 hits.

Kusina Motors had a good week other than the loss to Dairy Queen. Kusina downed the Topside 18-4. Pam Parsel had the win on four hits while Carol Vassiliou took the loss on 20 hits.

Ms. Parsel had two home runs for Kusina and Chris Lehman belted in one for the second place team.

Kusina also defeated Tri-City Asphalt 6-3. Pam Parsel had the win on four hits again and Clara Martin took the loss on 11 hits. Tammi Mitchell took the loss on 19 hits.

Wojan, Kit Carson teams battle in finals of league playoffs

Wojan Aluminum and Kit Carson were expected to meet in the final playoffs for the league title in the Charlevoix Recreation Department's Men's Six-pitch League Monday night.

The two teams came out on top following three days of play between the top four teams in the league, Kit Carson, Wojan Aluminum, Town House and G-Men.

The playoffs opened with Kit Carson squeaking by the Town House 10-9. Jeff Collins took the win during an extra inning of play and Don Willis took the loss. Both hurlers let 14 hits go by.

Chuck Pease had a home run for the Town House and Tim Carey and Butch Klooster each belted one for Kit Carson.

Bernie DeVries slugged three homers for Kit Carson.

On the third day, Wojan

Aluminum again defeated the G-Men 5-3. Supernaw took his second win of the playoffs on a mere seven hits while Holtzman took his second loss on 18 hits.

Kit Carson came back to down the Town House 19-6. Collins took the win on a low eight hits and Willis took the loss on 22 hits.

It was a home run slug fest as Terry Blissett, Butch Klooster, Krasag, Lieberman, Bernie DeVries, Paul Klooster and Jeff Collins all belted in home runs for Kit Carson. Chuck Pease and Scott Blanchard had home runs for the Town House.

Hiking popularity turns trails into back woods freeways

"Don't fall down. You'll get trampled to death," lament backpackers these days.

Popular footpaths are turning into backcountry freeways as more and more hikers seek to get away from it all on weekends and extended wilderness journeys. Some 20 million people have tried backpacking and the number grows every year.

"We can no longer afford the luxury of sleeping on a bed of fresh-cut evergreen boughs, or of building up a roaring campfire after every mealtime," says a veteran outdoorsman. "Many of the cherished woodcraft ways are passing into memory and the sooner the better, if wilderness is to survive."

Signs Are Ignored

Despite pleas for caution, wilderness areas in many parts of the country are showing wear and tear. "Carry out what you carry in," command signs at trailheads-yet litter still mars forests, mountain paths, and meadows. The mess moves hiking clubs to organize cleanup excursions.

The rewards are still there, however, for those who love the wild backcountry, enter it lumbly, take from it only memories, and leave behind only footprints.

Anyone in good health, leading a reasonably active life can hoist a nine-pound pack and embark on a modest weekend jaunt without much physical preparation.

But many a soft, unprepared city slicker has toppled to the ground before high noon on his first day out, beat a hasty retreat to the car, and finished his vacation beside a motel swimming pool.

A person of ordinary strength with a fairly heavy load may average two miles an hour on an easy trail and hike six or seven hours a day without pain, say seasoned backpackers.

To a novice, almost any prolonged climbing can seem burdensome. "The first thing that struck me about the Appalachian Trail was that it all seemed uphill," recalls one rookie.

Like Brings Freedom

Confined backpackers feel the rewards easily outweigh the discomforts. "A 24-year-old wirman extols the virtue of solo hikes. "Traveling alone, I often see wild creatures that would flee from a chattering group," she explains. "On my back I carry my shelter and food enough for the length of my stay, and a sense of freedom fills me."

"Alone I can set my own pace, relax, and enjoy the beauty of nature without social distractions. Often I stop to thank all I see just for being there."

For beginning backpackers, however, a party of three is recommended as the smallest safe number, except on the easiest, most heavily traveled trails. A solo hiker, when injured, can only shout, wait, and hope.

A pair of sturdy, well-broken-in boots is essential to all hikers regardless of experience. But even good boots couldn't help the greenhorn who tried to ease the workload on his legs by tying a cord from each ankle to each wrist so his arms could help lift his feet.

On the first trail, he jerked one foot from under him, fell off the path and rolled into a prickly alder thicket. It took the rest of his group an hour to cut him loose.

Fun at day camp

The children were all snuggled fast asleep in their beds while tales of old Dan McSauby danced in their heads. That line describes the weekly campout held for children participating in the Charlevoix Recreation Department's Camp McSauba Day Camp. The children, ranging in age from 6 to 13 years old attended five-day sessions at Mt. McSauba throughout the summer. This was the second year of the day camp program. Each day was jam packed with activities such as archery, arts and crafts, nature study, hiking, music, camp crafts and skits and stunts. And then there were the unexpected things like the discovery of a special insect the "Walking Stick" in one camper's hair and a visit of the ghost of Dan McSauby to a campout one evening. But it was all fun and the stuff that makes a summer memorable.

Flower business a family affair

The flower business is a family affair for Gwen and Paul Arnold and their two sons.

The Arnolds operate a small flower business from a farm near Ironton. And it's been quite an experience for the young couple and their sons Paul, 9, and Jeff, 7.

The Arnolds had been city dwellers living on Sherman Street in Charlevoix until 1974 when they decided to buy the farm and flower business including a customer route in Charlevoix from the Irving Johnsons.

"I work for the Charlevoix County Road Commission and their garage is right near here. I used to pass by here quite often and I was just taken with the place," Arnold said explaining how the family found the farm.

Even though the couple knew very little about raising flowers, they decided to give the business a try.

"We had to learn everything on our own," Mrs. Arnold said. "We both took classes in organic gardening and I took a flower arranging class. And, we borrowed a lot of books from the library. The Johnsons helped us a lot, too."

The couple said their friends and relatives thought they were nuts to buy the business. "We had a little garden on Sherman Street, but it was terrible," Mrs. Arnold laughed. "Yeah, you could tell our garden, it was the one with the small vegetables and the big weeds," Arnold quipped. See Flowers page 19

GWEN AND PAUL ARNOLD cut some of the flowers from their acre garden for sale along their route in town the next day. The flower business is a family affair with the Arnolds.

Petoskey,
Michigan

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun spreads its radiance over the waters, it is indeed lovely from the vantage point of the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands, the setting sun provides a spectacular show. The Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers and sightseers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all. Very few white people had seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that late fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line. On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting on the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset. The metamorphosis of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small Indian settlement at the mouth of Bear River, to a dynamic, busy village catering to the needs of sightseers and homebounders. To house the visitors, the Arlington and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Rooming houses for the less affluent were soon to follow. By 1890 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flour mills, hardwood flooring industries, butter bowl factories, and furniture-making industries. The limestone cliffs along the Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with lime, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town. Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and rooming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Inland Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the coast to Harbor Springs and back to Petoskey. Until the quiet little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were gilded back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and team.

In 1880 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1900's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new fangled summer resorters spelled the doom of the delightful little steamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon. Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnetism remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel of the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

A FLEET OF 86 Flying Scot sailboats decorated Lake Charlevoix last week as the group held its national championships. Lake Charlevoix was chosen as the site for the competition by last year's champion Tom Ehman of Portage Lake.

Championship races held on Lake Charlevoix by Flying Scot Assn.

Lake Charlevoix was alive with sailboats as the Flying Scot North American Championships took place on its waters for five days last week.

Day sailors from across the nation came to Charlevoix to participate in the race. In all, 87 boats were registered for the championship races.

Junior races were held a week ago Saturday and the adult races began Monday. The first two days of adult races were spent dividing the boats into the Challenger and Championship classes based on the results of preliminary races.

Two local residents, Richard Pajtas of Charlevoix and Ken Moran of Petoskey, raced in the Challenger class and did fairly well. Moran took 13th place and Pajtas was behind him.

The weather wreaked havoc with the boats, Moran said. He had taken a third and fourth place in two races when his mast was broken and he ended up in 40th place.

But Moran, who is captain of the Flying Scot Fleet on Lake Charlevoix, was one of the lucky ones. More than 10 boats were overturned when a squall hit the lake during an afternoon race Thursday. Several races had to be cancelled due to weather.

Lake Charlevoix was selected for this year's championship races by Tom Ehman of Portage Lake who had won last year's championship.

The Charlevoix Yacht Club served as hosts for the event and the U.S. Yacht Racing Union managed the race.

BOAT TRAILERS FILLED the parking lot at the launching sites on Lake Charlevoix as 86 day sailors-Flying Scots-raced across Lake Charlevoix last week. The final race of the week was called on Friday due to poor weather. Several sailors had been dumped earlier in the week due to a sudden squall on the lake.

Crews roll with punches to keep concerts running

ONE OF THE SECURITY CREW members at Castle Farms takes through his walkie-talkie about the behavior of the crowd as it entered Castle Farms for the Beach Boys concert.

Sheriff serves papers to Reibel at Castle Farms

An attempt to collect debts owed by Arthur Reibel and Castle Farms, Inc., was made during the Beach Boys Concert Saturday night.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department served two writs of execution to Reibel, owner and president of Castle Farms, at order of the Charlevoix District Court.

A writ of execution is a district court order to the sheriff to locate any assets that may be used to satisfy a judgment and to present it to the court.

The writs ordered Reibel to turn over his portion of the parking receipts collected from Saturday night concert goers in order to satisfy two judgments that are pending against him. However,

By PAULA HOLMES

While 12,000-plus fans were rocking and rolling to the Beach Boys Saturday night, about 60 other people were making sure that the concert ran as smoothly as possible.

Rock concerts don't just happen, they take a lot of behind-the-scenes work, a spokesman for Castle Farms Music Theater, who asked not to be identified, explained. Work that begins around 10 a.m. the day of the event.

"Members of the staff begin to show up around 10 a.m.," the spokesman said. "There are little things that have to be taken care of like the catering of the food for the band and meals for the road crew."

The road crew, which sets up the equipment for the band and makes sure everything is in perfect running order, usually shows up around noon.

"It takes a long time to get everything set up," the spokesman said. "The road crew for Jackson Brown worked from before noon until about 6:45 p.m. getting everything ready."

The groups are responsible for their own equipment whether it is going to work or not. But the Castle Farms crew is on hand to help move the equipment around and generally to assist.

The music theater crew, which is made up of local people and people from the Netherlands, Theatrical Corporation operation at Pine Knob near Detroit, is also in contact with the performers finding out when they want to have sound checks, if they are going to be late or if they need anything. "It's just minor things, but you have to do them to keep the performers happy. And that's our job," the spokesman said.

The spokesman said the groups seemed to have enjoyed playing at Castle Farms, but he added that it takes a lot to impress a rock group.

"When you are used to first class like these groups are, even first class joints are no big deal to them," he said.

As the day wears on and the crowd begins to gather outside the gate, the attention of the Castle Farms security and parking crews turns more toward working with the crowds.

"The crowds have been great here," the spokesman said. "Security has really been just keeping people from jumping the fences and from parking on the road."

"You know, I don't think people understand rock concerts," he continued. "They think that everybody who attends one is a dope fiend and that's not true. We've had people of all ages and all types here. There were a lot of families at the Chicago concert for instance."

Following the concert the crews assist the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department in getting the crowds on their way and the next day take care of the clean up of the concert area.

"We're basically a weekend operation," the spokesman said. "And the crews just come in for the weekend. We just have three people in the office during the week handling ticket sales and other details."

The spokesman said the ticket office received a handful of mail orders everyday from throughout the state and the Midwest. He said many orders came from Sault Ste. Marie, Chicago and Detroit.

"Most of them are probably people who are going to be vacationing in the area and want to go to the concert," he said.

The rest of the time is spent getting ready for the next concert and making sure that it runs smoothly.

"We're here to keep everybody happy," the spokesman said.

MEMBERS OF THE Castle Farms security crew around the stage relax on the job while waiting for the concert to begin.

Additional operational mill needed to keep quality program

"The quality of education that a school system provides determines what type of people move into that community and what type of community the town becomes."

"If people have any community pride at all, they will want to keep the quality of education up as well as the quality of their churches and city government. But you have to have money to do that."

Gordon Van Wieren, superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, said discussing the upcoming millage election.

Charlevoix School District voters will be asked to approve an additional one mill for operational expenses during a special school election Sept. 12.

It is a vote for continued quality education in the Charlevoix area, according to the superintendent.

Van Wieren said the Charlevoix School District needs the additional mill to make up for a loss of state aid funds. Because the school district's property valuation is so high, the school system will not be receiving any state aid at this year.

The district is starting the 1977-78 school year in the red budget wise because the amount of state aid that the school officials had anticipated receiving during the 1976-77 school year was less than had been expected.

The amount of tax revenues was lower than the school district officials had calculated would be coming in, too, the superintendent said.

With the deficit and the lack of state aid funds, the additional one mill is needed to maintain current programs, Van Wieren added.

And the school district would also like to add a new reading program at the middle school level this year.

"There is no formal reading program beyond the sixth grade level," Connie Pointer, school board member, explained. "But tests and teachers have found that there are several children in the seventh and eighth grades that could benefit from additional reading help."

Middle school principal Vince Chew said about 35 students in the seventh and eighth grades were reading two levels below their grade and needed additional help.

Superintendent Van Wieren said there were many types of maintenance that were also needed at various buildings throughout the school district.

"Many things need to be done at the high school," Van Wieren explained. "Things have deteriorated there over the years and sooner or later they will have to be repaired."

"We have been putting it off because we didn't have the funds, but we can't do that any more. You can wait just so long for certain repairs."

Van Wieren said the gym roof at the high school needed to be repaired as well as the roofs at the middle school and elementary school. Doors also need to be replaced at the high school along with school furniture.

Van Wieren said he did not think the request for one additional mill from the taxpayers was out of line. He pointed to school districts surrounding Charlevoix and explained that the Charlevoix School District has the lowest millage rate of any. A table of millage rates follows.

	Voted	Total
City
Petoskey	19.15	29.15
Boyne City	17.8	31.96
East Jordan	18.4	33.5
Ellsworth	21.1	35.5
Charlevoix	15.25	26.45

Plus 1 Mill for Middle School 27.45

Van Wieren invited any school district voters with questions about the millage vote on Sept. 12 to contact him at his office or to get in touch with a school board member.

First day of school scary, rough for brand new teachers, too

By PAULA HOLMES

Fear of the unknown, anxiety about being in a new place...and uncertainty about what school is really all about. All these feelings describe the first day of school for the new student and, surprisingly enough, they also describe the first day of school for a new teacher, too.

"I'm not worried that I can't teach," she explained quickly. "I know I can do it. It's just a nervousness that comes with being new."

"I know I'll make mistakes. I just hope that I can learn from them and that the students can, too."

Miss Gengle, 22, will be teaching part time in the high school Learning Center. She is replacing Pam Smith, who is on maternity leave. It is the young woman's first teaching assignment.

"The first day of school will not be easy," the new teacher said her face lighting up at the thought of the challenge. "I don't know really what to expect."

"I've been thinking about it a lot though, trying to set up a plan to follow for the day. I think we will just do some get acquainted type things so that I can see how they think and they can see how I think."

"Yep, I'm scared," Mary Gengle, a bouncy blonde-headed new teacher at Charlevoix High School, said as she thought about her upcoming first day of school as a teacher.

"I'm not worried that I can't teach," she explained quickly. "I know I can do it. It's just a nervousness that comes with being new."

Pettiness, politics should not be running county, city

Pettiness and politics seem to be running the county these days.

Our county commissioners and city officials seem to be far too concerned with the petty and political aspects of the issues instead of being concerned with accomplishing some good for the area.

One example of pettiness and politics running the show instead of common sense and a desire to accomplish great things for the county is a recent suggestion for the revision of the planning commission bylaws.

The proposed new bylaws, drawn up by some members of the county board of commissioners, not the planning commission itself, would rule out having anyone involved in real estate transactions on the planning commission because of possible conflict of interest.

Although the county commissioners claim that this revision is not aimed at anyone person on the planning commission, it appears that the commissioners are trying to oust Walter Thorsen, chairman of the planning commission, who has served on the planning body since its inception in the 1960s.

Instead of rewriting the bylaws, the commissioners could have used a method already open to them and just not reappoint Thorsen when his term on the planning commission expires.

However, certain commissioners decided they wanted to change things now and they have devised a way to accomplish it. Other commissioners who perhaps do not care one way or another about the planning commission have gone along with the change in bylaws in order to protect their own committees and interests.

The only people who suffer in the whole mess are the residents and voters in this county who need to have a united planning body working for them. Instead the planning commissioners are embroiled in a power struggle with the county commissioners and not doing anyone any good.

The City of Charlevoix seems to be having the same problem. The city owns a beautiful recreation complex called Mt. McCauba. The city has also received a sizeable matching grant from the federal government for improvements at Mt. McCauba which would benefit children and adults from throughout the area.

But no action has been taken on accepting the grant for several reasons. One is that the property just happens to be located in Charlevoix Township. Another problem is that it might be used by people who are not tax payers in the city.

Also if the city develops something on the north side, then it should also develop something on the south side.

That's politically astute, but impractical.

And once again only the people—especially the children—suffer.

That old whipping boy—television—is taking its lumps again because "Johnny Can't Read." Or if he can read, he isn't very good at figures. But this time television isn't taking the blame alone. A blue-ribbon panel studying a dramatic slip in Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores over the past 14 years also has concluded that relaxed teaching standards, as well as television, are to blame.

All of which leaves me confused. From what I have seen of our teachers and of television, I would say just the opposite should be true. The teachers I know are mostly young, dedicated and gung-ho about their chosen careers. And television—particularly with the advent of public broadcasting—is better than ever. Of course there is still a lot of junk on the air and there always will be. But there are some terribly interesting documentaries and dramatic shows on TV today, including the best of the classics.

If you haven't seen "Anyone for Tennis," the PBS poetry show produced by the University of Nebraska, you have denied yourself an exciting educational and cultural experience. The science documentaries prepared under the auspices of the National Geographic Society are excellent.

Furthermore, just about everything the networks run has to be somewhat broadening to stay-on-the-air. Kids like ours who have never slept at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel or galloped through the Louvre.

I am greatly puzzled as to why the very instrument which has the greatest potential for abolishing ignorance since the invention of paper has been labeled a positive deterrent to the educational process. It just doesn't make sense.

If SAT test scores have dropped as sharply as the educators say, there has to be a reason, but I believe blaming television and teaching standards is the easy way out. For example, did the test probers take into account the fact that during the period of greatest decline in the SAT scores millions of minority youngsters who never took the test before have suddenly become candidates for university education?

Certainly in evaluating the scores, this one factor alone should be weighed quite heavily, since SAT tests are administered only to college-bound kids to determine their potential for success. To suddenly include a sizeable number of youngsters who will attend college only to satisfy the demands of an egalitarian society is not entirely fair to the folks who do the testing.

Certainly some reservation must be made for the culturally deprived when analyzing the SAT scores of recent years.

Furthermore, have the tests kept abreast of the times? Are the young people quizzed in areas in which they could reasonably be expected to show some proficiency?

Again, are there different tests for students whose interests lie in different areas? Are the SAT critics aware that with the coming of vocational education, specialization starts earlier than it did a generation ago? Most students and mechanics are totally unaware that an adverb may modify a verb, adjective or another adverb. And they could care less. Such knowledge is of little use in fine-tuning a carburetor.

So far as relaxed teaching standards are concerned, so be it. When you are educating the masses, you don't use the same standards as you do in educating the rich, the well born and the able.

The declining SAT scores could merely be a reflection on our changing social structure. To view them as an indictment of television and the teaching profession seems to be highly unfair.

Wants to have more road work done

Dear Editor:
Has the Charlevoix Co. Road Commission completely forgotten "Lake Shore Drive"—the extension of Bell's Bay Road beyond and south of the State Forest Campground? The road is a disgrace to the county that calls itself "The Beautiful". I pay a huge tax to the county each year. I should think myself entitled to roads that are reasonably and safely negotiable.

To avoid police layoffs, will it soon be necessary for taxpayers to subsidize crime? This question worries me more than the possible embarrassment of having my life saved by a cop who can't read.

The worrying began as the traffic cop stepped in front of my car and signaled stop. He almost dropped the copy of "War and Peace" wedged into his left armpit.

"I must commandeer your car," the cop said. "I have to get this book back to the library before it becomes overdue. It is not possible for police to stamp out crime without the co-operation of citizens."

I refused to co-operate, so the cop gave me a ticket for disobeying the lawful command of a policeman. Before handing me the ticket, he read it aloud three times, front and back, sounding a lot like Richard Burton.

"Am I not articulate?" he asked. I answered, but there was considerable applause from people standing along the curb. "If all policemen could read like that, I would move back into the city," an admiring woman said.

As you must know, there has lately been considerable fuss about whether Detroit cops know how to read. The hassle was started by crusading newspaper reporters who revealed that some new cops had flunked a test. There is nothing more crusading than a newspaper reporter who has uncovered someone who can't spell as he or she can. The reporter's satisfaction is greatest when the uncovered dunce is an editor, but a policeman will do.

The July 29 graduates of the Detroit Police Academy scored an average of 59 percent in a test administered by the Michigan Law Enforcement Officers Training Council. That is 11 below the acceptable average. The test results indicate the cops are lousy readers.

The Detroit Police Officers' Association (DPOA) said an impartial committee should be appointed to investigate the training of police recruits. But Police Chief William Hart said the DPOA was offended more by their intelligence.

And besides, Hart added, reading skills are not "indicative of job performance as a police officer."

Paula Holmes... Speaking Her Mind

Well, I made it. It's been a year since I came to the Charlevoix Courier and I have survived.

I have also learned some things along the way that I would like to share with you.

One of the first things I learned was to be very careful when attending a Kiwanis meeting. I was invited to a Kiwanis gathering once and I nearly drowned!

I was sitting at a table with some people from the Kiwanis Club in Petoskey who were visiting the Charlevoix club on an exchange. There was some good natured exchange throughout dinner and then as it came time for the speaker we settled down to listen.

I was studiously taking notes and thinking about picture angles when I felt a drop of water on my head and then another and another.

I jumped up from my chair just in time to miss being drenched by a waterfall pouring from a ceiling tile that had given way. The water poured instead on my vacant chair, never hitting the man to my right or left. I couldn't believe it.

The man sitting next to me laughed so loud over the incident that the speaker had to stop talking until the matter was taken care of. In the meantime, I tried to sneak out without being noticed.

After all, I had heard about small towns and how cliquey they were. I was a little concerned to say the least. However, I found Charlevoix to be much friendlier than even Petoskey, with people more than willing to help me out in every way they could.

And this is true of anyone, not just me. We have had some real tragedies in this town this summer involving the premature deaths of a couple young people and serious injury to others. Each time the residents of this town have rallied around the relatives trying to ease the pain and to make life bearable during that moment of sorrow.

And that's a good feeling to have for a town, and its residents. It's been a great year Charlevoix and all I can say is thanks.

The next thing I learned was never to complain about my age to the other people in my office. I am not the youngest person in the office, but I am not the oldest, either. However, when I turned 25 this year I was quite depressed and concerned about becoming old.

After all, I had never been 25 before and it seemed awfully old to me. Well I got what I deserved. When my birthday finally rolled around, the staff greeted me with a shawl, a cane and some prune juice.

I have also learned some things about small towns. When I first moved to this area three years ago, I thought Petoskey was pretty small. But when I had to move to Charlevoix, which is about half the size of Petoskey, I was pretty concerned.

After all, I had heard about small towns and how cliquey they were. I was a little concerned to say the least. However, I found Charlevoix to be much friendlier than even Petoskey, with people more than willing to help me out in every way they could.

Mothers of America! You have been given one more chance to be fashion pacesetters.

White anklets are back! They've been seen throughout Europe being worn by high-heeled shoes. I know it is only a matter of time before Princess Grace, Queen Elizabeth, Jackie Onassis and Barbara Walters are schlepping around in them.

Before you shake your head and say, "No, I'll never wear one," let me assure you. I went through the same humiliation route with white anklets that you went through back in the '40s and '50s. I too was maligned by my family.

My sons self-destructed before my very eyes once when I appeared in white anklets on the playground. My husband said they made my legs look like tree stumps, and one day when a friend of my daughter's came to the house to play she said, "What team does your mother play for?"

We let them shame us into giving up our white socks. And what did we get in return? Pantyhose. You have to be in shape to wear pantyhose. Just ask Joe Namath. I personally never put on a pair of pantyhose without thinking I got a pair that was hatched prematurely and needed another few months in the egg.

Ah, the good old days of white anklets. They never sprung a run... never slid down over your hips when you coughed... never cut off circulation when you crossed your legs. White socks went with everything, winter and summer. And you never had cracked heels.

Remember the warm, fuzzy feeling you had in white socks? Critics are the first to point out how ridiculous they looked. Sour grapes. Have you ever seen yourself standing in front of the mirror in a pair of knee-highs and a pair of glasses?

The trouble with Mothers is they are never the pacesetters of anything. They borrow a few T-shirts and jeans from their sons, kooky shoes and funky blouses from their daughters, sweaters from their husbands and a few dresses from their mothers. But they do not have one style that is exclusive, unique, and theirs alone.

Let's subsidize crime!

Who is correct? I don't care. I am worried about something more important than whether a cop can read a comic book without moving his lips. That's why I wasn't impressed by the traffic officer and his overdue book. I am worried what will happen if the FBI ever wins the war against crime. What turned me on to this scare is the compromise recently worked out to keep state troopers patrolling Detroit freeways.

Wayne County deputies wanted to replace the troopers. This would have furnished employment for deputies who had been laid off because the local jail population has shrunk.

The deputies' union pressured the state Legislature to jerk the troopers. But the Legislature received just as much pressure from Detroit drivers who want the troopers to stick around.

The politicians' compromise keeps the troopers on the freeways but it also creates jobs for the laid-off deputies. The deputies will be used to guard state prisoners and to chase bail jumpers. A posse will be formed when a single deputy would be plenty.

...Helen Phillips

Helen Phillips is the Assistant Director of the Public Program Administration for Charlevoix County, working under County Clerk Clarence Rabach. This week the Courier talks with Mrs. Phillips about her job, especially as it relates to employment of persons under the comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

COURIER: Where do CETA funds come from?

PHILLIPS: They are federal funds, funneled through the state and a consortium made up of 10 Northwestern Michigan counties.

COURIER: How are the funds and jobs and job-seekers matched up?

PHILLIPS: When we are advised that we have been allocated a certain amount of money, we contact the public employing agencies in the county and ask them to submit requests for job slots, along with job descriptions and budgets. The CETA committee of the Board of Commissioners, made up of Commissioners Lee Moerland, Ralph Richardson, and Marty Paul, then screen the requests and make job allocations to the different employing agencies. Each agency does its own interviewing and hiring.

COURIER: Who are these public employing agencies?

PHILLIPS: All branches of county government, townships, schools, cities, villages, hospitals, road commission, Northern Michigan Community Mental Health, the District Health Department, etc.

COURIER: After the employing agencies' requests for CETA employees have been approved, how do they contact people to fill the jobs?

PHILLIPS: They list their jobs with the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC). All people hired under CETA must be registered with MESC.

COURIER: Who is eligible for employment under the CETA program?

PHILLIPS: There are two programs. One is called Title II. Under present rules, a person may be hired for this program if he or she has been unemployed for at least 30 days. Jobs funded under this program should serve a training purpose and provide an identifiable future opportunity to transfer to unsubsidized employment within 12 months. The other program is called Title VI. Eligibility for this program, under present rules, calls for a person to be earning not more than 70 percent of the lower living standard, which is based on a family-size scale, and be unemployed for a period of 15 weeks out of the last 20 weeks, or have received unemployment benefits for 15 weeks. Another category covers those who meet lower living standard requirements and who were recently discharged from the Armed Services, recently released from prison, or receiving Aid to Dependent Children.

COURIER: What about the new "Projects" part of Title VII?

PHILLIPS: This is for public agencies which have a job or several related jobs which can be completed in a definite period of time, not to exceed one year, and for which they do not have funds available. A "Project" may include the rehabilitation, alteration, or improvement, but not new construction of public buildings, roads, health and education facilities, or other facilities for the improvement of the community. The Road Commission, Boyne Falls Schools, the City of Charlevoix, the Equalization Department, East Jordan Schools, the DNR, and the Char-Em School District have already had Projects approved. As an example of what might be done, the Boyne Falls Schools are having their ceilings lowered to conserve energy.

COURIER: How many people are there in CETA jobs in the county at the present time?

PHILLIPS: We have nine working under Title II and 36 working under Title VI.

COURIER: How much money does that represent?

PHILLIPS: We have an estimated budget of $76,000 for Title II for the fiscal year, and $325,000 for Title VI for the fiscal year. This does not include Title VI project money, which will probably be about $800,000.

COURIER: What kind of salaries do CETA employees receive?

PHILLIPS: Depending on the job, they range from minimum wages of $10.00, which is the top limit. CETA employees also receive the same fringe benefits that regular employees of the public agency they work for receive.

COURIER: Are all the CETA jobs now available filled?

PHILLIPS: Yes, with the exception of any new Projects that may be under-taken. Also, if anyone quits a job, we will fill it with someone else.

COURIER: Give us some examples of the types of jobs CETA employees are now holding.

PHILLIPS: Sheriff's deputies, secretaries, sanitation, media aide, cook's helpers, deputy probation officer, director of the Commission on Aging, bus drivers, laborers, accounts clerks, graphic specialist, administration assistant, custodians, and recreation directors.

COURIER: How do you feel about the criticisms that are sometimes leveled against the CETA program and CETA employees?

PHILLIPS: Well, I know a lot of people who have been helped, not only money-wise but pride-wise.

COURIER: How many other employees are there in the county CETA office?

PHILLIPS: Only one, Marge Webster. She's my right-hand man.

COURIER: How long has the CETA program been operating?

PHILLIPS: Since 1974. I started with it then.

COURIER: What did you do before that?

PHILLIPS: I've had several jobs through the years. With the Friend of the Court, Health Department, Welfare Department, Earl Young—all secretarial work.

COURIER: Are you a native of Charlevoix?

PHILLIPS: I was born on Beaver Island. My father, Peter Gallagher, was in the lighthouse service and we were transferred to Milwaukee when I was in the eighth grade. I went to high school three years in Milwaukee then came back to Charlevoix for my senior year and graduated.

Helen Phillips

COURIER: Where did you go to college?

PHILLIPS: Catholic Junior College in Grand Rapids. I took a commercial course and received an AA degree.

COURIER: How many children did you and your late husband, Ivan, have?

PHILLIPS: Three. Peter

has come back to Charlevoix from Detroit where he worked for the IRS to run the family gas station. He has a degree in business administration, is married and has two children. Ann is a graduate of Central Michigan, is married and lives in Grand Rapids with her husband and three children. Richard is a student at Michigan State.

COURIER: Does your father still live in Charlevoix?

PHILLIPS: Yes. He's 92 years old.

Ray Peltz supports peaceful nuclear research

To the Editor:

In the past oil and gas producers encouraged the use of their products, and now most of the world's industrial nations are dependent on them for energy. 75 percent of the energy used by the United States comes from oil and gas. Since the 1973 Middle East oil boycott the oil industry claims that increasing prices will be necessary to finance the discovery and development of new petroleum and gas resources, and eventually world demand for oil and gas will surpass supplies. Expert estimates of when this crisis will occur range from 4 years to 100 years with the official United States estimate at about 10 years.

Considering the fact that when the United States and the Allies cut off Japanese supplies of oil in the early summer of 1941 we got the Pearl Harbor attack in the late fall of 1941, and during the 1973 oil boycott some American officials admitted that if our economy were threatened war could not be ruled out, a successful resolution of the energy crisis, worldwide, could be more than the "moral equivalent of war" failure could result in the literal equivalent of war.

The President Carter response is long range research and development of solar power systems, conserve petroleum and gas supplies by reducing waste while shifting to more abundant coal, a modest increase in U-235 nuclear power stations, a delay in breeder reactor construction and reprocessing nuclear wastes to reduce chances of nuclear proliferation, and this would leave much of our, and the world's, nuclear power locked into weapons systems.

While the Carter plan is better than a blind drift toward disaster there are alternatives that should be considered. Six nations now have nuclear weapons and two dozen nations have the economic and technological requirements to produce them. In 4 to 10 years that number will undoubtedly be higher.

Environmentalists seem to be fanatically opposed to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, especially plutonium, where scientists try to make nuclear technology as safe as possible, and they ignore nuclear weapons systems where scientists try to make nuclear technology of plutonium for weapons purposes and cannot account for thousands of pounds of that nuclear material.

The energy available in the world's fissionable nuclear resources exceed the energy available in organic resources by far, but using the only known naturally occurring fissionable isotope, U-235, directly for energy without breeder reactors and without reprocessing nuclear byproducts is a waste of energy resources.

The world reserves of U-235 are estimated to be about 3,000 tons. The world reserves of U-238 that can be converted to fissionable plutonium 239 are about 330,000 tons. The world reserves of thorium 232 that can be bred into fissionable U-233 are about 1 million tons.

If it comes down to a choice between an energy crisis where the world's organic resources are in dispute for Cancer society volunteers honored

HARRY CUSTER, M.D., and member of the Charlevoix County Unit of the American Cancer Society, receives a certificate of honor from Patty Muma, Cancer Crusade chairman. Mrs. Muma honored all volunteers that worked in Charlevoix County.

Thanks and congratulations were given to volunteers working for the Charlevoix County Unit of the American Cancer Society last week.

Patty Muma, Cancer Crusade chairman, held a special meeting to thank the people who had worked with her on the fund drive and gave each a certificate mentioning their hard work.

"I want to congratulate you and thank you," Mrs. Muma said. "This is the 10th straight year that Charlevoix County has gone over its goal."

"And this has been a special year for me, too. I was going to resign at the end of this year, but for the second time in five years, cancer struck my family," she told a silent audience. "My mother died of it five years ago and my husband had it this year but has been completely cured thanks to the research that has been done in the last five years."

"So I have decided to stay and work for the cancer society and I myself would like to start a World War III against cancer. If we form an army together we can wipe out cancer in our lifetimes."

The Charlevoix County goal for its Cancer Crusade this year was $15,000. Workers collected $14,152 with $7,750 coming from Charlevoix; $2,520 coming from East Jordan; $3,341 coming from Boyne City and $500 from Beaver Island.

Dr. Harry Custer also addressed the group. Dr. Custer told the volunteers that not much progress had been made in the fight against cancer since he talked with the group a year ago.

"But we are making progress and it is worthwhile to continue our efforts," Custer said. "The secret to cancer is the secret to life itself and that's what the fight boils down to."

"Can we wipe out cancer in our lifetime, I don't know, but I hope we can control it."

Historical group to honor author Rex Beach

By PEG OHLE

Members of the Charlevoix Historical Society will honor the memory of Rex Ellington Beach at the Society's next meeting, Tuesday, September 6 at 8 p.m. in the Community Room of the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

The famous author was born 100 years ago just ten miles south of Charlevoix in a homestead on what is now known as Rex Beach Road. A feature of the evening's program will be a book review by Mrs. Eleanor Carson of an autobiography by the famous writer. A birthday cake is planned, and on display will be a number of Beach's 30-odd novels, 27 of which were made into movies during the silent film era. Although no original pictures of the Beach homestead have been found, a number of conceptual paintings based on later snapshots will be shown.

Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida, Beach's alma mater and recipient of his endowment, joins in the September celebration. A granite boulder from the Beach homestead and a polished Petoskey stone from the area were provided by Historical Society President Ed Bestner and presented to the Society to Rollins College by the Arthur and Robert Weststaff families during their trip to Florida last winter. The boulder has recently been set in a concrete block in the College's Famous Walk adjoins the library. The Petoskey stone will be displayed in the new Art Gallery as a permanent addition to Rex Beach's memorabilia.

The Historical Society urges all who are interested to attend the September meeting to honor Beach's contribution to American literature as well as to add to this belated recognition of a native son.

Social Services Dept. tries new schedule

Employees of the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services are now working a four-day, 10-hour a day week. Their hours are from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., with one-half hour for lunch.

However, the Department is open five days a week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to serve its clients. There is someone on duty in each office every day.

Vasco Zucchini, assistant director of Charlevoix Social Services, reports that the four-day work week schedule is now available to Social Services Departments throughout the state upon approval of the State Department of Social Services.

The Charlevoix schedule is on a trial basis and will be re-evaluated at the end of December.

The Charlevoix County District Court is looking for a new East Jordan magistrate by paid $2,000 a year with no fringes.

The judge also said the city had agreed to give the magistrate's office some space in what was formerly the secretary of state's office.

Fershee said that after reviewing the position, his office had determined that it was important to keep a part time magistrate in East Jordan. He suggested that the magistrate be paid $2,000 a year with no fringes.

Fershee said he had gotten several applications for the magistrate job already even though he hadn't advertised it yet.

New store offers alternatives

OLAV SPAULDING and Dan Osmer discuss one of the wood burning stoves they keep in stock at their new store Heartwood Alternative. The store is located on Mason Street across from the post office.

Looking for a way to ease your heating bills this winter? Charlevoix residents are now being offered an alternative means of heating through a new store called Heartwood Alternative.

The store is located on Mason Street across from the U.S. Post Office.

The new store, owned and operated by Dan and Reta Osmer and Joe and Carol Spaulding, stocks two types of wood stoves for area residents and visitors who would like to try their hand at an alternative means of heating. The new business also offers saunas and natural foods.

"We feel this business fulfills a need in the area and offers an important service," Osmer said explaining how the two couples decided to go into business. "And it combines our lifestyles with the business."

Osmer said both he and his wife and the Spauldings heat with wood and have been for some time and they both eat natural foods and have been vegetarians for seven years.

The businessman said that the couples were very concerned about the environment and the energy crisis.

"We see heating with wood as a short-range solution to the problem," Osmer explained. "And it uses a fuel that can be replenished."

The store stocks the two top brands of wood stoves, Merru, a stove made in Denmark, and Fisher, an American-made model which is built in Schoolcraft, Mich.

The couples also have Nippa Sauna Heaters in stock.

Institute in Detroit, and Spaulding, a carpenter, offer free delivery and a complete installation service with their products.

"We can handle most any type of installation including stonework," he said.

The store owner said the couples hope to expand their stock to include other items needed for wood burning such as chain saws, axes and fire extinguishers.

In the natural food department, the store offers whole grains, whole grain flours, unfiltered fruit juice, nuts, beans, seeds and natural food snacks such as dried fruits, cookies and corn chips.

"Since the Industrial Revolution we have been refining everything from toast to jam," Joe Spaulding explained. "We take the nutrients out of the food and then bleach it and treat it and then put artificial nutrients back in.

"Here we are offering foods that haven't been refined and that still have some life left in them. Foods that are better for you," Spaulding said.

Osmer added that studies have shown that preservatives and sugars have increased hyperactivity in children. He said the two couples believe that eating natural foods would cut down the rate of hyperactivity in children and would probably also prevent the onset of intestinal diseases in older people.

"We're here to take responsibility to help people become more aware of the joy of living," Osmer said. "And mostly to offer alternative."

Backaches common ill of civilized man

Oh, my achy back!

How many times have you heard someone say that? Or said it yourself?

Backache is a common ailment among civilized men that there are very few adults who haven't had a touch of it now and then.

Some physicians credit soft beds, soft chairs and other comforts of modern civilization with an increase in the number of persons suffering from low back pain. The American Medical Association points out:

Once called lumbago, back pain is often caused by poor posture, obesity, ill-fitting or inappropriate shoes, a sedentary life, overly strenuous work, or participating in sports. It may also be caused by disease not directly relating to the back, or to injury or strain.

Low back pain may occur at any age, but it seems to bother middle-aged persons most. It occurs in both sexes and in all races, and is more common among people who do work that requires stooping or lifting.

Good posture of the entire body is important in preventing low back pain. Sit with head, shoulders and trunk erect. Stand straight. Not the military ramrod posture, but straight.

A soft, saggy bed and low, soft chairs contribute to backache. Chairs ideally should be firm, straight and have the contour of a normal back.

A low-heeled shoe is best for standing or walking. High-heeled shoes throw the posture off balance and increase strain on the lower back. Loafers, ballet slippers or sneakers may contribute to backache if worn extensively.

In lifting heavy objects, keep the back straight and lift with the knees and thigh muscles, rather than bending over and straining the spine.

Like most other ailments, backache may be aggravated by emotional tension or anxiety.

Treatment of backache varies with the cause. When it's due to strain, usually rest, heat and a pain reliever will help. Massage in moderation may relieve discomfort. Your doctor also may recommend exercise to strengthen the muscles of the back and to improve posture.

Homemade treats make great gifts

What could make a better gift than a jar of sweet strawberry jam you made yourself? Unless it's a jar of homemade pickles. Or, better yet, give both!

Just so you go about making these treats comes your way in two booklets from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. For a copy of How to Make Jellies, Jams, and Preserves at Home send 40 cts., and for Making Pickles and Relishes at Home, send 5 cts. to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Here are some helpful highlights from each booklet:

Alum and lime are not needed to make pickles crisp and firm if good-quality ingredients and up-to-date procedures are used.

Use tested recipes. And be sure to measure or weigh all ingredients carefully.

Select tender vegetables and firm fruit.

Use pure granulated salt if available. Do not use iodized table salt; it may darken pickles. Uniodized table salt can be used, but the materials added to salt to prevent caking may make the brine cloudy.

Uncooked Berry Jam Sort and wash 2 cups of fully ripe berries (such as strawberries, blackberries, and raspberries). Drain. Remove caps and stems. Crush berries. Place prepared berries in a large mixing bowl.

Add 4 cups of sugar, mix well, and let stand for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Dissolve 1 package powdered pectin in 1 cup water and boil for 1 minute. Add pectin solution to berry and sugar mixture. Stir for 2 minutes. Pour jam into freezer containers or canning jars, leaving 1/2 inch space at the top. Cover containers and let stand at room temperature for 24 hours or until jam has set. Makes 6 or 8 half pint jars.

Store the uncooked jam in your refrigerator or freezer. It can be held up to 3 weeks in a refrigerator or up to a year in a freezer. Once a container is opened, jam should be stored in the refrigerator, and used within a few days.

How to Make Jellies, Jams, and preserves at Home, (45 cents) and Making Pickles and Relishes at Home (45 cents) are two of over 200 selected federal consumer publications listed in the Fall edition of the Consumer Information Catalog. The Catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration. You can get a free copy by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Charlevoix residents enjoy Emmet fair

It may have been called the Emmet County Fair, but a lot of Charlevoix County residents participated in it. Charlevoix area youth and adults took part in the beef auction as well as participated in the exhibits and many residents of this county were among the 265 exhibitors at the fair.

In addition to winning some of the top prizes, some interesting things happened to Charlevoix residents at the fair, too. A grand champion dairy cow, owned by Robert Stowe of fronton, gave birth to a calf Friday afternoon at the fair as the fair manager Wilfred Sterzik assisted. Stowe knew the cow was going to give birth, but he just happened to be away when she decided it was time to deliver. In the Market Steer competition David Elzinga of Charlevoix won the Grand Championship Showmanship award. Elzinga, 16, first took the senior showmanship award for the 15-18 age group. The steers in the competition are judged based on the grooming and the handling by the owner in the show ring.

Then during the show off between the first and second place winners in the junior and senior division for showmanship, Elzinga was awarded the Grand Champion prize.

This is Elzinga's second year of competition in the Market Steer Program at the Emmet County Fair. Other Charlevoix County youth participating in the steer program were: Liz Heath, Sherry Jones, Kaye and Tom Hand of Charlevoix, Kelly Bascon and Bud Klooster of Atwood and Kaye and Tammy Tahyer and Jean and Sue Stoll of Boyne City. Second year participants were: Doug and Mark Drenth, Dave Elzinga, Rich Hand, Andy and Bob Keller all of Charlevoix.

A list of the exhibitors from Charlevoix County and the prizes they received follows.

Flying--popular sport, easy to learn

No fear of flying? Perhaps you want to become one of the more than 650,000 non-commercial pilots in the United States. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has a new pamphlet that tells you how you can go about learning to fly. You can send for a free copy of A Flying Start by dropping a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 681 E. Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

You can get aviation training in various ways. You could go out to your local airport and take lessons from a FAA certified instructor. If you do it this way, you'll have to make your own arrangements to go to ground school, or you can learn the rules on your own.

Probably the easiest way to learn flying is by enrolling in a flight training school. There are about 2,500 FAA approved flight schools that offer structured training courses. These courses enable you to earn your pilot's certificate in fewer hours than at schools that are not approved by the FAA.

Before you can earn a pilot certificate, you must get a student pilot certificate. For this you have to be at least 16 years old; you must be able to understand, speak, and read

English, and you must have a medical certificate. You can get a medical certificate from any FAA Authorized Medical Examiner or you can obtain forms from any FAA General Aviation District Office. Directories listing the 7,000 medical examiners are available at all FAA offices and at many airports.

After you get your student certificate, have your ground school training underway, and take your first solo flight, you can qualify for advanced flight training. Although you will be able to fly alone, at this stage you may not carry passengers, and you cannot land at certain busy airports.

Finally, you'll be able to qualify for the private certificate. You must be 17 years old and have a minimum of 40 hours flight time (or 30 hours in an FAA approved school).

JIMMY BOGGS WORKS his magic trick the "Queen of Hearts." Jimmy and his sister Tammy held a backyard carnival with the help of some of their friends to raise funds for muscular dystrophy.

Boggs hold carnival for M.S. fundraising

"Step right up and see the magic show, or try the pie throw."

Those sounds came from the backyard of the James Boggs residence this week as Jimmy and Tammy Boggs held a carnival to help raise funds for the fight against muscular dystrophy.

"We wanted something to do. You know, something that was worth something," Jimmy, 13, said explaining how the carnival got started. "Actually, it was my sister's idea. She wanted to have a circus and raise money for us. But instead we decided we shouldn't keep the money but send it to something good."

So when the two children saw an ad on television about backyard carnivals for muscular dystrophy, they sent away for the kit explaining how to hold one. The rest is history.

Jimmy and Tammy set up as many different types of booths as they could think of. They had a fortune teller and a magic show with Jimmy playing the part of the magician.

"I like doing stuff that surprises people," the middle school student said explaining how he got into the magic business.

His two favorite tricks are the "Queen of Hearts" where the queen card is magically converted from three pieces into one card, and the "Flying Ace."

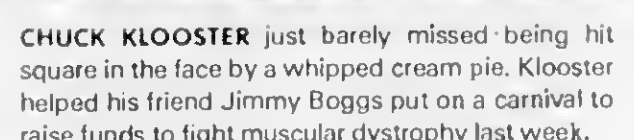

The Boggs also had a ring toss, a dart throw set up complete with prizes.

"We thought we should make the games worthwhile since they are paying for them," Jimmy explained. "So we bought prizes from different stores downtown."

One of the most popular booths was the pie throw. For quarter carnival goers could throw a miniature pie tin full of whip cream at a waiting victim. Sometimes it was hard to tell which was more fun, being the thrower or the receiver, who got to clean up the whip cream.

"We came up with the pie throw because we knew we wouldn't have to give any prizes for it," Jimmy said.

Helping Jimmy with the three-day carnival were other Eaton St. residents, Eric Dziedzic, Chuck Klooster and Mark Mosley.

CHUCK KLOOSTER just barely missed being hit square in the face by a whipped cream pie. Klooster helped his friend Jimmy Boggs put on a carnival to raise funds to fight muscular dystrophy last week.

MARK MOSLEY takes aim with a dart at the balloon board. This was one of many games at the backyard carnival.

Commissioners suggest changes for planners

Some suggestions for change in the operation of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission have been made by members of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

The planning commission recently revised its bylaws to improve its operation and effectiveness. However, now members of the county commission are planning to make some further changes.

The new changes were discussed at a recent meeting of the board of commissioners. Planning Commission members suggested that the bylaws be amended to reduce the size of the board from 11 to 7 members and to appoint members to represent the following areas: agriculture, business, industry, labor, environment, recreation and government or transportation.

The Committee members also asked that all people involved in the sale and transfer of ownership of real estate be ineligible for membership on the planning commission due to conflict of interest. Two members presently on the committee, Walter Thorsen and Edward Wojan.

John Kujawski, county commissioner and real estate agent, objected to the exclusion of people involved with real estate.

"If you exclude everyone involved in a real estate transfer from membership on the planning commission you'll have to exclude judges and lawyers, too," Kujawski said. "And those people are some of the pillars of the community."

Thorsen also said that he was concerned about the elimination of certain professions from the commission and that said that he had called the state attorney general's office to get an opinion about the suggested change in the bylaws.

"As chairman of the planning commission, I'm going to take any action on these suggestions until we hear from the attorney general," he told the commissioners.

"I know that I always try to think of the county when I am working on the planning commission and I would say that all the members do."

Thorsen pointed out that the planning commission always has written its own bylaws.

Oscar Ward, a county commissioner who supports the revisions, said that the changes had been presented in good faith in an effort to make the planning commission more responsible to the county commissioners and the people.

"It's true that in the past the planning commission has written its own bylaws and they have been accepted," Ward said. "In truth they have written their own ticket."

"Now they are receiving a little opposition. They haven't wanted to change even though it is in the best interests of our people."

Charlevoix County residents find cost of college greater than ever

Residents of Charlevoix County whose sons and daughters will be heading for college soon are finding that the cost will be greater than ever.

Colleges in all parts of the country have raised their rates again, citing their own increased operating expenses for faculty salaries, fuel, supplies and maintenance.

The new rates, according to figures obtained in a survey of 2,750 colleges and universities, will boost the already high cost of such education.

For residential students at four-year private institutions, the average increase is $242, and, for those at public colleges, $115.

The big problem is how to pay for it. Many parents, especially those with two offspring going to college at the same time, find themselves in a financial bind as a result.

For Charlevoix Community families, based upon the number of local youngsters who are college-bound this year, the added cost will amount to approximately $87,000.

The nationwide survey shows, according to the College Entrance Examination Board, that the overall cost is about four percent higher on average, than it was in 1976.

With the increase, the total costs of private four-year institutions now average $4,965 for resident students, compared with $4,663 previously. At public colleges it is $3,005, as against $2,890 the year before. For commuting students the figures are about $500 lower.

Included are tuition, fees, transportation, books, miscellaneous expenses and room and board.

According to the latest estimates, some 630 young men and women from the Charlevoix County area will be going to college this year.

The total cost involved, for local parents, is approximately $2,169,000. This is based upon the assumption that half of the students will be going to private colleges and half to public ones.

Because higher education has become so costly, many young people have had to change their plans. Some are settling for two years rather than four year schools. Others have had to forego college entirely, at least for the present.

Road commission to recycle pavement

The Charlevoix County Road Commission has gone into the recycling business. It is using a new system of resurfacing whereby stretches of existing worn pavement are taken up, pulverized, mixed with bituminous oil, re-laid, compacted, then covered with a layer of new pavement.

Road Commission Engineer-Director Irvin H. Sturm reports that a section of Six Mile Road in South Arm Township has been resurfaced by the recycling method, and part of North Shore Drive in Walloon Lake will soon be repaved by the same method.

Results of the recycling process will be closely observed, Sturm says, to determine the advisability using it more often.

"It minimizes the use of new material," Sturm adds, "and therefore saves not only money but energy and natural resources."

Improper lane usage, and following too closely. Indications are that drunk driving and speeding will be the major concern of the nearly 300 highway patrol officers in the four states. It will be the first time that four states have teamed up in such a program.

Michigan to join 3 states in Labor Day highway patrol

Vacationers heading south to their homes in Southern Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois over the Labor Day weekend will be well observed by State Police in those states.

Highway patrol officers are co-operating in a special holiday effort called "Operation Care" to patrol the Interstate Highways beginning on Friday and carrying through Monday midnight.

C-A-R-E (Combined Accident Reduction Effort) will focus attention on enforcing the nationwide 55 mile an hour speed limit and concentrating on drunk driving.

Petoskey, Michigan

Little Traverse Bay has quiet beauty and unforgettable charm. When the setting sun spreads its radiance over the waters, it is indeed lovely from the vantage point of the limestone cliff on which the city of Petoskey now stands. The setting sun provides a spectacular show. The Indians created a legend about it. Since the first settlers and sightseers arrived over one hundred years ago, the beauty of the sunset has been a thing of wonder and awe to all.

Very few white people had seen a sunset over Little Traverse Bay on that late fall day in 1863, when the first train whistled to a stop at the end of its line.

On board was a reporter for a Grand Rapids newspaper, who in reporting on the wilderness scenery, dubbed it Petoskey's Million Dollar Sunset.

The metamorphosis of Petoskey was rapid. It grew from a small Indian settlement at the mouth of Bear River, to a dynamic, busy village catering to the needs of sightseers and other homesteaders. To house the visitors, the Arlington and other luxury hotels were constructed overnight. Roaming houses for the less affluent were soon to follow. By 1890 a substantial number of shops had sprung up along the main street, creating a very unique pioneer shopping area. Along the Bear River waterpower was harnessed to run sawmills, flour mills, hardwood flooring industries, butter bowl factories, and furniture making industries. The limestone cliffs along Little Traverse Bay provided Petoskey with time, a natural resource of great importance to the industrial development of the town. Little steamers plied the Bay, and the summer visitors who registered at Petoskey hotels and roaming houses took advantage of the many excursions offered. The most popular trip was the Circular or Inland Route. This lengthy excursion took the traveler up the coastline of Little Traverse Bay into Lake Michigan, around to Mackinac Island, on to Cheboygan and then down the chain of rivers and lakes to what is now Conway. Until the quaint little dummy trains were in operation, the excursionists were jolted back to Petoskey from Conway by wagon and team.

In 1880 the system was in full operation and trips were being made every fifteen minutes. By 1905 two trains ran from Petoskey to Harbor Springs at half hour intervals. Many of the people who had come to see the area on the train liked what they saw and became regular summer visitors. By the 1900's the shift from tourism to settled summer communities was in motion. Many resorts developed around the Bay and inland lakes of the area. The new-fangled summer resorters spelled the doom of the delightful little streamers on the Bay, the little dummy trains, and the luxury hotels. Many of the hotels burned and were not rebuilt, the dummy engines were sold for scrap, and the steamers sailed off over the horizon.

Although the modes of transportation have seen drastic change, Petoskey's magnetism remains. There is still an element of charm and friendliness in shopping adventure which belongs uniquely to Petoskey's Gaslight District. One may still marvel at the beauty of Little Traverse Bay and experience the wonder of the Million Dollar Sunset.

Shirted to a T

Some people wear their hearts on their sleeves. Others have their feelings written on their faces.

Still others let people know how they feel with T-shirts. There seems to be a T-shirt for all reasons. T-shirts tell who people are, where they are from and where their loyalties lie.

T-shirts may also tell what people's favorite rock groups tennis shoe or soda pop is and even if they are pregnant or not.

For the avid T-shirt reader, there have been plenty of the cloth billboards around this summer as everyone—young and old, male and female—got into the act. For those of you that missed the T-shirts, we offer a page of some of our favorites.

RENADA GRATH of St. Ignace lets everyone know her number with this T-shirt. She wore it to the Beach Boys concert at Castle Farms.

ANITA HENDRICKSON'S T-shirt shows a different type of communication. She is sporting a display of the signs used in hand language in communicating with deaf people.

MIKE DINAN of Troy is walking advertisement for this tennis shoe.

T-SHIRTS CAN LET other people know your colors, too. Here Jon Holmes, a former member of the Michigan State Spartan Marching Band, lets the world know where his loyalties lie.

ROCK GROUPS are making it big on T-shirts these days, too. Betty Nietopski of East Jordan, shows off her Chicago shirt. Chicago performed at Castle Farms this summer.

T-SHIRTS also can tell you a lot about a person's interests. Joanne Bertrand of Bay City and Charlevoix shows off her Peanut League T-shirt for Courier photographer.

MARK DINAN of Troy, doesn't seem to care too much about his Farrah Fawcett T-shirt. He's more interested in a little something to eat.

AND THERE ARE SHIRTS that tell people where you've been. Jim Rathbun of Midland, is letting everyone know he's been to Mackinac Island.

Do Business Where Business Is Being Done

Teri Lynn Wells marries Richard Wilson here

Teri Lynn Wells and Richard Wilson were joined in marriage during a double ring ceremony Aug. 20, at the Community Church of God.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Wells of Charlevoix are the parents of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. Richard McKeon of Newark, Tex., are the parents of the groom.

Rev. William P. Selbert performed the ceremony before 150 guests and Mrs. Brendan LaBlance was the organist.

For her wedding the bride chose an organza gown with a V-neckline and a bodice of overlaid venise lace. The dress also featured full bishop sleeves trimmed with venise lace.

The full circle skirt ended in a chapel length train that was also trimmed with venise lace. Her finger tip veil was attached to a Juliet Cap of venise lace.

The bride carried a cascade arrangement of pink carnations, snowdrift pomp, daisies and baby's breath.

Andrea Brown served as maid of honor. She wore a blue nylon organza print halter gown with matching ruffled cape. She carried a single blue rose.

Kathy Mosoryak was the bridesmaid. She wore an identical pink gown and carried a single pink rose.

Michael Wilson served his brother as best man and Randall Wells, brother of the bride, was groomsmen. Larry Cross and Shaun McDonough were ushers.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Wells wore a rust colored A-line gown and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses. The groom's mother wore a pink gown with a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

The bride's parents held a reception at the American Legion Hall following the wedding. Julie Wells, cousin of the bride, cut the cake and Connie Whitley took care of the guest book.

Following a Northern Michigan honeymoon, the couple will make their home in Charlevoix. The bride is a student at Charlevoix High School and the groom is a two-year veteran of the U.S. Coast Guard.

LOOKING FOR A WAY TO STAY YOUNG?

How many times have you heard someone comment "I wish I had the youth I had at twenty with the maturity I have now?"

The search for staying young is an ancient as history. The Summerians in the fourth millennium B.C. gave up and turned to cosmetics. Ponce de Leon found Florida, but the fountain of youth eluded him. Today we continue the search via pills, tonics, and rejuvenators.

Time, the old gypsy, will always win, however, with careful planning and determination we can make it a difficult race. The minutes, hours and days can be on our side. Everyone ages every day, but with a little moderation our life expectancy can be 70 years or more.

Remember the mark of an "old" man or woman is creaking joints, aching backs, and a myriad of complaints.

One key word for staying youthful is exercise. The push-button age we live in is great for easy living but think what it does to the muscles. We need regular exercise to improve muscle tone. But it goes even further than that. It crases fatigue and boredom.

Boredom is one of the greatest enemies of youthfulness and a short cut to "old age". Exercise helps to control inches and reduces nervous tension. It is much more effective than a cigarette or a double martini.

The heart, lungs and digestive system all benefit by exercise.

Exercise falls in all categories from vigorous activity such as tennis and volleyball to callisthenics and gardening. If you are out of practice and want to get back into the race, train properly for the action. Begin with small doses of exercise and gradually increase them.

Determination is a must. If you don't have it, develop it or you will never be able to give time a rough race.

The American Medical Association suggests the following steps if you want to stay young:

1. See your family doctor regularly.

2. Watch your diet.

3. Get adequate rest for both your mind and body.

4. Pursue physical exercise.

5. Fill your days with productivity.

6. Participate in community affairs.

7. Plan and save for tomorrow thus avoiding another short cut to "old age" — WORRY.

Think of your body as your machine. In order to keep the parts in good working order they have to be well cared for and used frequently.

The secret of staying young is to make a habit of good physical and mental health.

We have the choice of giving up without a struggle or making it a hard race. It is never too late to stop counting the candles and begin a routine to stay young.

Area women unite to organize at-large League of Women Voters

The Little Traverse Area unit-at-large of the League of Women Voters of Michigan met recently with representatives of the State League to learn how they might become a full-fledged League affiliated with the State and National Leagues.

Mary Dee Riecke of Midland and Peg Kauffman of Traverse City explained the structure of the League. It will be a four-hour work session with local women who are members of the Michigan League seeking local LWV status.

Two essential actions required of the local group are: (1) a membership drive to enlarge the group, and (2) an in-depth study of local government structure and activity.

Doris Schaller, president of the local group, arranged for luncheon at the Petoskey-Bay View Country Club, over which the group continued discussion of plans.

In an effort to increase membership, the local group voted to hold an evening meeting in September. It will be held in the Westminster Room of the Presbyterian Church in Petoskey on Thursday, September 8, at 7:30 p.m.

All meetings are open to the public, both men and women.

Local artists to exhibit at Detroit fair

Two Charlevoix County artists, Susan Bolt of Charlevoix and Linda Beers Aydlott of East Jordan, will participate in the 1977 Lafayette Park Art Fair in Detroit on September 10 and 11.

Ms. Bolt is a potter and painter and Ms. Aydlott is a jeweler. They will be among 50 artists and craftpersons exhibiting their work at the fair. All traditional art media will be represented, including painting, sculpture, pottery, photography, printmaking, and jewelry, along with some unique contributions — dulcimer crafting, face and body casting, wooden and fabric toys, and porcelain and batik dolls. Many of the artists will demonstrate their skills by working at their craft during the fair.

The all-volunteer committee which plans, organizes and stages the fair sees it as a way of showcasing the best of Michigan artist-craftpersons.

Contributions for park stage continue to pour in to group

Donations for the new Park Stage Fund are continuing to come in, according to Clarence Odmark, who is coordinating the committee working on the fund.

Odmark said more than $325 had been sent to him since he announced that he would be reorganizing a committee to work on getting the stage expanded and a bandshell constructed in East Park.

The former Charlevoix High School and Charlevoix City bands director said he had gotten together a group of interested residents who are willing to work as a committee on the expansion project.

The first step the committee is taking is to get a nonprofit corporation status so that all donations to the group will be tax deductible. The group will also be electing officers and exploring alternative methods of raising funds for the project, Odmark said.

The group would also like to get the stage expansion and bandshell designed architecturally so that the members will know how much money they will need to raise.

The Charlevoix Common Council is still considering accepting a $17,000 grant from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation of the U.S. Department of the Interior for improvements at Mt. McSaubia Recreation Area.

"We're not dragging our feet on this, we're just at a dragging point in the grant process," Joe Morris, chairman of the Recreation Committee of common council explained.

"We have to clear certain questions so we can get an additional access road to the area before we go ahead with the grant," Morris said. "We have plenty of time on the grant funds, which must be matched by city funds, are proposed to be used for the construction of a multipurpose building and ice skating and hockey rinks at the recreation area. Minor preparation for the construction of the skating rinks has begun."

Little gifts combine to make great things at Charlevoix hospital

They say that good things come in small packages. And at the Charlevoix Area Hospital that's true, too. Donations totaling more than $24,000, all unsolicited, have come to the Charlevoix hospital in the past year and remarkably, about $14,000 of that has been in the form of small gifts averaging $15.

Richard Krueger, hospital administrator, says these spontaneous donations, which are added to the Equipment Memorial Fund, are not only warmly welcomed, but rather unusual.

"In my experience with other hospitals, we did not have this type of general public support," he said.

"It makes us feel very good that people do this and think of the hospital in this way."

"People feel Charlevoix Area Hospital is important to the community. It's their way of recognizing that we do a good job providing the best possible health care," Krueger continued.

"Approximately $10,000 has been donated to Charlevoix Area hospital on such occasions as anniversaries, birthdays, marriages, retirements, and for two scholarships, according to Ms. Novotny.

"Some is earmarked for certain equipment or the Building Fund, the rest is just plain donations."

Asked to explain how a donation is given on an occasion such as a birthday, Ms. Novotny said a donor sends a contribution to the hospital noting the individual's birthday. The hospital in turn sends the person celebrating the birthday a printed card stating that a donation in their name was made to the Charlevoix Area Hospital and names the donor.

"People are very pleased when they receive such a card from the hospital," Ms. Novotny observed. "We note donations on all sorts of occasions and we send cards to both parties."

Krueger was asked what is behind this giving situation. "Some of it tradition," he explained.

But, Krueger acknowledged, Charlevoix Area Hospital has a "special atmosphere."

Director of Nursing Services, Kathryn Boss reported that a visitor from Detroit affirmed that, as she was being discharged from the hospital: "When I first came here I wasn't sure if this was really a hospital," the visitor exclaimed. "Everyone was smiling. The spirit was so good, I thought it might be make believe. I was waiting to see if Marcus Welby would walk out of the next room."

Krueger added, "People recognize good nursing care and good personal care. They know if the personnel have a nice manner. People know if their room is clean and if the meals are good, whereas they might not understand all the fancy diagnostic medical things that happen."

Laughingly he added, "So we get donations to our funds and the nurses fill up on candy from grateful patients."

Community support for the hospital is a tradition, particularly for members of the Chicago and Belvedere Clubs who played an important role in establishing the hospital.

The Belvedere Club, through a Hospital Benevolence Committee, has been carrying on form of individual donations.

The Charlevoix Hospital Women's Guild played a major role in community support. It has permitted the hospital to purchase twelve sets for patient rooms they are now in the process of purchasing three all beds to replace the crank style hospital beds.

Women's Guild also has scholarships a year, nurses training and for any hospital training.

Donations, large and small, along with help from like the March of Dimes enabled the hospital to purchase a fetal monitor.

The hospital employees have played an important role in raising funds for equipment. In the of the fetal monitor they pitched in holding a bazaar.

A Neonatal Intensive Center, for newborn with serious problems, purchased similarly to March of Dimes donations.

Hospital employees donated a special wheel chair in memory of Dolores Fischer who was a nurse's aide.

Memorials and donations have enabled the hospital to acquire two auto (sterilizers), and IV measure Intervenor, a radiant heater table, nursery, a new stretch, the emergency room.

rocking chair for the mothers in OB, and four electric beds.

While the hospital is deeply involved in long range planning for expansion of its lab, X-ray, inhalation therapy and emergency rooms, funds donated to the Building Fund are being allowed to accumulate until these plans are completed.

Thus, Krueger explained, donations not otherwise earmarked are used by the Equipment Fund to purchase additional vital articles.

Mrs. Boss added that it is not unusual for people to donate equipment directly to the hospital.

A CHARLEVOIX AREA Hospital nurse adjusts some equipment at the hospital. Some donations to the hospital are combined in the equipment or building fund to purchase needed items.

Commercial opportunity complete with this four bedroom, one bath Swiss chalet. Ideal for office, automobile sales lot, mobile home sales, contractors headquarters, etc. All this plus land contract terms available.

Rub-a-dub-dub--or, how three men built a tug

By PAULA HOLMES

Cliff Biddick is one of the proudest sailors on Lake Michigan.

And he should be. Biddick is the skipper of the tugboat "Resolute," which he built himself with a lot of help from some friends.

The boat, which made its maiden voyage last week after being under construction for 16 months, can be seen moored at Irish Boat Shop, where Biddick works.

Or, you might catch a glimpse of the tug or hear the bellow of its deep horn as Biddick proudly skippers it across Lake Charlevoix or around Round Lake.

Biddick, his father, also Cliff Biddick, and a friend, Kirk Post, began work on the tugboat almost two years ago on Christmas Eve. They went up to Mackinaw City to pick up the hull of the old fishing tug "Cheerio," which was eventually to become "Resolute."

They trucked the hull down to Charlevoix and waited a month before seriously tackling the project.

"It was engineless and full of fish guts," Biddick recalled. "We could have outfitted a whole new tug box with the things we found in the bottom of the boat."

Six truckloads of junk, five tons of steel and several months later, the three men were ready to start patching the metal hull and to replace everything from the bare hull on up.

"We learned to weld as we went along," Biddick explained.

"We would weld the hull, put the boat in the water and watch the water come through the patches and then really begin to weld," he laughed.

Rebuilding a tugboat is not a new undertaking for Biddick. He rebuilt a 24-foot wooden tug four years ago. But, he sold the wooden tug to finance the purchase of the metal hull.

Needless to say, Biddick is sold on tugboats.

"I like tugs. They're neat. And I guess they're the smallest ship you can own," he said a grin spreading across his face.

Biddick said he decided to build the tug because there was need of a work boat around the boat yard. And he wanted to have a boat big enough to haul in disabled boats from Lake Michigan.

The new boat, a 40-footer, has four times the horsepower of the old tug. It's 4,200 pound engine has 250 horsepower and once powered the motor ship "South Shore."

The bow of the tug has been reinforced for ice and has one-quarter inch hull plating with three-eighths inch frames on eight inch centers.

The three men spent weekends, evenings, early mornings, coffee breaks and lunch hours working on their project. And as their work progressed other people around Irish boatyard would pitch in and help on whatever needed being done.

Biddick's brother made the doors for the tug, cabin, his mother helped paint and a friend designed the wooden ship's wheel used to guide the boat across the lake.

"We must have just shy of a million hours of work in it," Biddick estimated as he surveyed the tug.

The group set Memorial Day as the deadline for completion of their project, but they missed it.

"We wanted to get it down this weekend for the Red Fox Regatta," Biddick explained. "We wanted to use it for the committee boat."

So one last month of long hours was put into the boat to get it operational. Biddick said there is still lots of work to be done on the boat and he figures that will keep him busy for a while. But he's already working on plans for a radical new boat design.

He hopes to begin work on an aluminum hull boat in the future. And he's sticking with the tug design.

"They're not your run of the mill toy boat," he explained.

CLIFF BIDDICK mans the wheel of the newly completed tugboat "Resolute." Biddick, his father and a friend Kirk Post revamped the old fishing tug for use as a work boat.

THE TUGBOAT "Resolute" steams her way along Lake Charlevoix to the Charlevoix Yacht Club. The boat was used as a committee boat last weekend for the Red Fox Regatta.

For senior citizen housing Commission studies land swap

A trade off of land in the Belvedere Club for the location of a proposed senior citizen housing complex in exchange for the closing of Belvedere and Ferry avenues became dead and streets at the beginning of club property.

Ralph McFae, president of the housing commission, said the commission had approached the Belvedere Club last spring asking the board of trustees to consider selling five acres of its land on the southwest portion of Belvedere Club property at the corner of Alice and Garfield streets to the city for the senior citizen complex.

The board of trustees responded last week by suggesting that the club would be willing to swap the land the housing commission wished to buy for a deed to the portion of Belvedere and Ferry avenues that run through the club.

F. Carl Schumacher, member of the Belvedere Club Board of Trustees, said in a letter that members of the Belvedere Club recognized the need for a senior citizen complex in the city and wanted to help the city get the project off the ground.

Schumacher said the board of trustees was becoming increasingly concerned about security and safety within the Belvedere Club property.

The trustees believe one way to curb problems is to close off the club to through traffic by having Belvedere and Ferry avenues become dead end streets at the beginning of club property.

"This proposed trade off seems to be fair, equitable and offers real advantages to you (the housing commission), the City and us," Schumacher said.

McFae said the proposal had been explained to the Charlevoix Common Council, but no action had been taken.

"The council cannot commit itself to this trade until the citizens have had a chance to express themselves," McFae pointed out. "The housing commission is now earnestly asking for the opinion of the people of Charlevoix about the swap."

McFae suggested that people for and against the proposal write to their aldermen or contact one of the following members of the housing commission: Robert Cook, Marge Dewidde, Ralph Hamilton, Ralph Shapton or himself.

"If people would rather have senior citizen housing than they would Belvedere avenue, then we'll have it," McFae said.

The housing commissioner said the property that the Belvedere Club was willing to swap was valued at approximately $100,000.

"This would represent quite a savings to the housing commission and that money could be used to construct the housing complex," he said.

McFae said there is a crucial need for a senior citizen housing complex within the city. A recent survey conducted by the housing commission resulted in responses from more than 30 residents who said they would consider becoming tenants of a proposed senior housing development.

A professional market analysis recently conducted by Ruggie Associates of Mt. Pleasant also indicated a definite need for elderly housing facilities in the city, McFae said.

McFae said the housing commission recognized the controversial nature of the land swap with the Belvedere Club, but he said the swap presents a solution to a long standing problem of the housing commission.

"Because of the confining boundaries of the city, it is extremely difficult to acquire a building site of adequate size and in a desirable location at a reasonable price for a senior citizen development," McFae said.

The housing commission is pursuing funding from the Farm Home Administration for the construction of a 60-unit housing complex. Rent subsidies will be provided for eligible tenants through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Charlevoix Airport in line for state funding

The Charlevoix Municipal Airport has been included for funding in the proposed Michigan Aeronautics Commission budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

The state aeronautics commission has asked for funds for the construction of taxiways, construction of a VOR (Visual Omni Range) system and for the lengthening of the existing runway. The state commission has also asked that funds be approved for the acquisition of crosswind runways, according to Alvin Ronger, engineer working on the airport master plan.

Ronger said the aeronautics commission budget requests must be approved by the state legislature before any of the funds can be released.

If the budget is approved, the city must apply for the funds and agree to pay its share of the construction costs, Ronger said. He said the funds for the various construction projects at the airport would probably be available on an 80-20 basis with the city paying 20 percent of the costs.

Ronger said the master plan for airport development must also be completed before any funds will be granted to the city for improvements at the airport. He anticipated that the master plan would be finished by January.

The engineer explained that the master plan would become the blueprint for the improvements at the airport and would set up a timetable for the improvements.

A second public hearing on the master plan was held last week. Ronger said a group of 30 people made up of members of the Charlevoix Common Council, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners as well as interested pilots from the area discussed the recommendations he had proposed in the first portion of the airport study.

Ronger had recommended that crosswind runways, additional hangar space, expanded automobile parking and expanded aircraft parking be added to the airport.

He also recommended that new navigational aids such as VOR be installed.

The group at the meeting favored the lengthening of the existing runway over the construction of crosswind runways.

"They seemed to feel that the money would be better spent improving the existing runway than constructing new ones," Ronger said.

He said there was also a great deal of interest in the construction of a new hangar and parking areas for cars and airplanes.

The group also favored replacement of the nondirectional radio beacon and the installation of a VOR.

Charlevoix School voters go to polls Monday

The polls for the special Charlevoix School District election will be open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday at the Charlevoix Elementary School on Division St.

All registered voters in the Charlevoix School District are eligible to vote in the election.

The Charlevoix Board of Education is seeking approval of one mill for operational expenses. The mill is needed to balance the budget. The school district is in the red financially because it received less state aid funds than were expected last year.

The school also needs funds for maintenance which needs to be done at all three schools and for a reading program the school district would like to set up at the middle school to help children who are having reading problems.

Teachers enjoy summer vacation, too

If teachers had to write essays about their summer vacations, four teachers in the Charlevoix School District would probably write books on their one-week trip to the island of Roatan.

Sally Drost, first grade teacher at Charlevoix Elementary School; Roger Gowell, math and science teacher at the Charlevoix High School; Pete Spies, biology teacher at the high school; and Henry Wagner, science and math teacher at the Charlevoix Middle School, all participated in the trip along with spouses and friends.

And for all of them it was a lifetime.

"It was an experience you just can't repeat," Wagner said he couldn't the trip. "You couldn't go back for a long time because it would never be the same."

Roatan is part of the Bay Islands situated off the coast of Spanish Honduras. Surrounding the island are some of the clearest waters in the world. Exactly what every divers dream of.

"It's crystal clear water," Traversa Hospital and trip coordinate," said. "We had up to 120 feet of visibility. "That's great when you consider that up here we might have 50 feet of visibility at the most."

The divers were also able to make deeper dives than they were normally used to. Their first dive was 120 feet deep and their deepest dive was 180 feet deep.

"We dove through a hole in a wall," Wagner explained. "And when we came through the hole, we couldn't see anything below us. It was completely black."

Drost had heard about Roatan from another diver and took his family there for a visit last year. This summer he was ready to go again. But he wanted to get a group going so that the rates would be cheaper.

The Drost's live with the Wagners and Wagner is a good friend of Gowell's. Gowell does a lot of diving with Spies. By the time the friends got done talking with each other they had a group ready to go.

The divers said they were impressed with the lushness of the tropical island. They saw wild parrots and tasted various tropical fruits.

They also ate a lot of lobster. "Lobster there is like eating chicken here, I think," Wagner said.

The group also had a night dive

"At night the coral come alive," Gowell explained. "They're a nocturnal animal. The coral looks completely different at night."

The plankton acted as if it was phosphorescent, shimmering in the water after the divers had turned their lights out.

"You could see your whole hand," Gowell said.

While the teachers couldn't bring back specimens for their classes, they did capture much of their underwater adventure on film. Many of them plan to use it in class and just to remind them of the trip.

"It was really a let down when we came back," Drost said. "A monster just will never understand."

"There's just no comparison. Diving is one of the best sports there is."

Walloon Lake Association takes development stand

Growing awareness and concern about the threats of certain types of government of Walloon Lake has prompted the Walloon Lake Association to take a stand on development.

The lake association's 12-member board of trustees has prepared a message to present the future real estate developers on the lake in the form of newspaper ad.

Development is trying to prevent any more from coming in.

"We want to get our position known early enough so that we believe that such developments create pressure on the lake far greater than the pressures created by single family lake front cottages because they give a large number of families access to the lake through a small corridor of lake front property.

"We have been concerned for about four years about development on the lake," Warren Parker, executive director of the Walloon Lake Association, said.

"We've seen what development has done to lakes elsewhere and we are now taking a position to make sure that it doesn't happen to our lake, too," Parker continued.

"We are not an extremist group, but we do feel a responsibility to work with future developers to achieve something that will be satisfactory to everyone concerned," he said.

Parker pointed out that Walloon Lake is a very fragile and sensitive lake to begin with.

"For the given surface area of the lake, there is much more development potential than for the same surface area for a lake that is oval shaped or round," he said.

"Because of this we feel it is not reasonable land use to have funnel or corridor development on the lake. It just makes a super concentration of people relative to the lake which the association's committee will use when making its guidelines will be taken from studies conducted of Walloon Lake by the University of Michigan Biological Station.

Parker said the U-M group had been studying the lake for about 10 years.

Parker said the trustees had also met with attorneys and realtors to discuss development guidelines for the lake.

Parker said the association was willing to meet with any developer to discuss reasonable guidelines. He said that if an agreement could not be met that the lake association might attempt to take legal action.

"I think that's been the history with lake associations," Parker said. "They don't take any action until it is too late and then all they can do is take legal action."

Students enjoy trying out language skills in Mexico

How do you order a meal if your waitress only speaks Spanish?

Very carefully, unless you are a member of the Charlevoix High School Spanish Club.

Eight members of the club and their teacher JoAnn Kravutske, recently returned from a week long trip to Mexico, where the students had a chance to test their communication skills.

The students said that in most cases the Mexican people could also speak English so they didn't have any trouble communicating.

"Most of our meals were already planned for us as a part of the trip," Steve Mielke explained. "But one night we did have to order dinner on our own. We were lucky though and got a waitress who could speak English pretty well."

Other students said they would meet people on the streets who would want to talk with them and then they would have to use their Spanish.

"I couldn't remember my tenses real well, but I got the point across," Michelle Robinson said.

While in Mexico, the students visited Mexico City, Acapulco and Taxco, a silver mining center which boasts more than 400 silver shops.

They visited the pyramids of Mexico, cruised in the bay at Acapulco and watched the cliff divers and stayed in a Mexican-type hotel at Taxco.

It was at Taxco that the students had their greatest opportunity to display their knowledge of the language, Miss Kravutske said, adding that some of the students returned home with some fine pieces of jewelry gained at a good price as a result of their bargaining ability.

"If you know the language well enough to bargain, you can get some good buys," Miss Kravutske said. "The kids did alright."

The students said they enjoyed the entire trip, but they preferred the resort town of Acapulco and the cliff divers.

EIGHT MEMBERS of the Charlevoix High School Spanish Club recently returned from a trip to Mexico. Talking over old times and looking at souvenirs are: Sally Dishong, Steve Mielke who is sporting an Acapulco T-shirt, Michelle White, who is holding a purse Sally purchased in Mexico; Rich Borths, who is also sporting an Acapulco T-shirt, and Michelle Robinson. Missing are: Karri Moerland, Robert Warner, Kevin Wilks and JoAnn Kravutske, teacher.

THE DOORWAY to the Native American Recovery Center isn't very noticeable, but it holds a lot of hope for Charlevoix area people who are fighting alcohol and drug problems.

By PAULA HOLMES
If you weren't looking for the Native American Recovery Center (NARC), you would walk right past the door and on down the street. The entrance way to the upstairs offices at 206 Bridge Street is overshadowed by shop windows and obscured by a decorative brick front. But for people looking for help, the doorway stands out as if it were surrounded with neon lights. For the alcoholic it is a place of hope.

NARC provides counseling and supportive activities for alcoholics and their families, particularly Native Americans. The organization is funded through an $85,000 grant from the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and through the State of Michigan. NARC is an outgrowth of the Committee for Action for Rural Indians, which was founded in Petoskey in 1971. The alcoholism center opened offices in Charlevoix in 1975. It is one of 154 alcoholism programs for Native Americans in the United States and was one of the first programs to be established in the Northern Michigan area. "I feel we have made a great impact as far as detoxification is concerned in this area," Mrs. Kane said. "And we do everything we can to help that person maintain sobriety."

Most of the counselors are recovered alcoholics and they relate well with the clients," Louise Kane, director of NARC, explained. "They've been there. They know what it is like."

"Our goal is total sobriety for the individual," Mel Pearl, assistant director, explained. "And we do everything we can to help that person maintain sobriety."

Sheriff George Lasater said he had noticed a decline in the number of Native Americans in the county jail since the first of the year as compared with 1976 statistics. However, he said he didn't know what to attribute the decline to.

The sheriff said NARC may have been a deterrent in that it gave his department another resource to work with and to use as a referral center.

Once a person, Native American or any other race, begins coming to the counseling center, the counselors work to get them involved in other activities as well as with the counseling.

"We try to get the person back on their feet by trying to find them a job and making them an active part of the community," Pearl explained. "We also set up a buddy system where another one of our clients works with this person and takes them to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings or other activities and is supportive of them."

Mrs. Kane attributed much of the center's success to the activities that have been provided for the clients. More than half of the people going through the center maintain long term sobriety.

We try to set up situations where the clients can go and have a good time but where no alcohol is involved," Pearl explained. "We want to show them that life is not just in the bottle."

Pearl said NARC sponsored a picnic recently at Whiting Park and more than 140 people attended it. He said a Christmas party held last December was attended by 400 people from all over Northern Michigan.

"The more things we can do to help that person maintain sobriety," Mrs. Kane said, "the more we can do to help that person maintain sobriety."

Church to begin 'Family Building' program

By EUG OHLIE
The Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix will launch a Family Building Program during the month of September.

The Reverend Larry Grooters explains that the program is being undertaken to answer a need.

"Many people today are concerned not only about the future of the family," he says, "but about finding creative ways of coping with family problems now."

"Parents often find that children and young people reject the traditional values of the home and the community—or that they react to those values with apathy and boredom only to drop them at a later time. People within families often yearn to communicate clearly with each other and cannot," he adds.

"Often grandparents find themselves in the middle. Divorce is a fact that hits many households and will not go away. The church finds itself in the position of wanting to strengthen and fortify the family, while at the same time ministering to the hurts and needs of the newly separated and the parent without a partner."

"Not every family has such needs, however, and some families find themselves wanting to make what already is a good structure, a solid structure, better—a good marriage a great marriage—adequate communication good communication."

It is to these needs that the Family Building Program will address itself. It will offer practical helps for those who wish to enrich the quality of their family experience. It will also seek to give spiritual guidance, practical aids, and recreational opportunities for families.

REV. LARRY GROOTERS of the Community Reformed Church and Tom Terry of Charlevoix Emmet Intermediate School District, review materials that will be used as part of a presentation for a family building program presented at the church.

Belize. He is a graduate of Olivet Nazarene College. Special musical numbers will be presented each night.

The Reverend Earnest The Reverend Richard Cornelius of Midland will conduct the revival services.

Besides serving in several pastorate, Reverend Cornelius served as a missionary for five years in British Honduras, now known as Knight, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, invited everyone in the community to view the film and attend the revival services.

Retirees may wish to file for tax credit

Older Americans may now want to amend their 1976 income tax returns to claim the retirement income credit.

Previously, under the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the retirement income credit could not be used on 1976 tax returns since it was replaced by the tax credit for the elderly.

The IRS also advises taxpayers who claimed the tax credit for the elderly on their 1976 returns to file amended returns.

"WHICH IS IT—THE SEPTIC TANK OR THE SAUERKRAUT?"

Great care needed when making sauerkraut

Remember the taste of sauerkraut, the good old fashioned way? Many people are still making it that way. It is important that great care be taken when making sauerkraut. It is highly susceptible to spoilage since it must ferment from five to six weeks.

The cabbage is mixed with salt to start the fermenting process. Three tablespoons of salt are used for five pounds of cabbage. Mix the salt and cabbage well. Hands or big spoons will do the mixing job best. After the mixing is complete, fill a big container with the salted cabbage, press down on top of the cabbage until juice appears. It is important that air not get to the cabbage while it is fermenting. To prevent air from getting into the container fill a big plastic bag with water and let it settle down on top of the cabbage.

When you get gas bubbles in the kraut you know the fermenting process is taking place. Mook says you should allow the kraut to sit at room temperature until this process completely stops.

You are now ready to remove the kraut and cook it. When the kraut is heated to simmering, the micro-organisms will be destroyed. The sauerkraut can now be packed into hot jars. Leave a half-inch head space, put lids on and process in the boiling water bath. Start counting time as soon as the jars are placed in boiling water, and process 15 minutes for pint jars, 20 minutes for quart jars.

Sauerkraut may also be frozen. Since it has such a pungent odor, it should be packaged extremely well before freezing. Otherwise the entire freezer may smell like sauerkraut.

Sauerkraut problems: -Soft-sloppy sauerkraut caused by not using enough salt, air pockets in the fermenting container, or the temperature when processing was too high.

-Pink sauerkraut caused if the salt is not evenly distributed, or if the sauerkraut is not properly covered when fermenting.

-Dark sauerkraut caused when the cabbage is not washed properly, or not packed down when fermenting. Other causes might be salt evenly distributed or temperature too high when processing.

Cooperative Extension Service Programs are open to all without regard to Race, Color or National Origin.

People returning to caves

"Cavemen" evokes images of a matted figure in rough furs, crouching before a rude fire in some craggy recess. But what about a Frenchman in a smoking jacket, enjoying his pipe in an easy chair in front of his fireplace? Or a leisure-jacketed Texan reclining on a sofa, listening to stereo and perhaps dialing a sunset outside his artificial window?

Or the schoolteacher diagramming sentences on a blackboard for her class, and the Swedish workman operating high-speed lathe? All are 20th-century cave-men.

Cave-dwellers increasing Caves probably were man's earliest form of shelter. Footprints made 15,000 years ago are preserved by a natural film of calcite in the cave of Peche-Merle in southern France, and primitive paintings equally old have been found on cave walls there and elsewhere.

People still are decorating caves and living in them. The ranks of cave-dwellers may even be growing, as more families discover there are some advantages to living underground.

Today's cave-bayer is no troglodyte. Instead of being reclusive, he or she usually is a homeowner or business executive attracted by the lower maintenance and the quiet of a suburban home, office, or factory.

Sweden long has had large industrial plants carved into mountains, and other nations have followed suit. In one rock-solid optics factory outside Stockholm, instruments on the walls keep workers informed of the weather above their heads.

Dust-free Environment An American company that makes delicate instruments for space projects moved underground in Long Island to escape dust and vibration.

A junior high school was built underground at Lake Worth, Texas, to get away from the roar of jet bombers from a nearby air base.

A Texas architect who had designed more than one cave-house contended that living beneath the earth's surface is therapeutic because, "There's no noise, no air pollution, and no whirling world outside your window."

When one housewife moved into her custom-built underground ranch house outside Dallas more than a decade ago, she found her furniture seldom needed dusting and the house never required a new coat of paint.

She had no insect problems and flowers thrived in her patio garden-aided by artificial lights. Electronics enabled her to create sunrises, bright days, or starlit nights in her fake windows.

Outside Paris, dozens of French families have turned old limestone caves into "weekend cottages," complete with fireplaces whose chimneys poke through the fields 60 feet above.

The Women's Guild of the Charlevoix Area Hospital will launch its annual membership drive at a Membership Coffee to be held at the LaCrosse Condominium Lounge on Thursday, Sept. 22.

Mrs. William Squire of Boyne City, Guild president, has issued an invitation to residents of the area to attend the event scheduled from 10 a.m. until 12 noon and, at that time, to purchase a membership in this service-oriented organization.

In announcing the drive, Mrs. Squire said "You can be a working or a silent partner by becoming a member of the Guild whose prime purpose is service to the hospital and its patients. Your dues will enable us to continue our constant efforts to up-date equipment, refurbish furnishings and to participate in the volunteer activities that make the Guild a working service organization."

Volunteers are involved in two phases of the Guild's activities at the hospital. One is the floor patient volunteer aid which fills a host of services which release the nursing staff for patient care. The other is serving as sales persons at the Guild's gift shop, The Show Case, which recently was moved to its new location adjacent to the main waiting room at the hospital.

The gift shop, The Show Case, offers for sale patient needs as well as many appropriate gift items. The shop, along with TV rentals, are the Guild's main fundraising projects.

The following portrays the projects sponsored by the Guild, the volunteers and the results of their efforts, all accomplished through membership in the Women's Guild of the Charlevoix area hospital.

Cross country team looks good this year

Who are those young men you see running across the fields and up and down city streets?

Probably members of the Charlevoix High School Cross Country team. Members of the team have been getting in shape for the season during the past two weeks, according to Coach Pete Spieles.

Spieles said the team has been spending some time working out on the track as well as running cross country. The team works on sprints at the track building up their heart and lungs.

On other days, team members alternate and work on strength and endurance by running distances, the coach said. He said he was also planning to put the team on a weight program, but he hasn't started yet.

This year the team will also be running on the Belvedere Club Golf Course one day a week over a three mile course.

"This is to help the team work on their timing," Spieles explained. "You need to know how fast you should run each mile in order to pace yourself for the race."

Also as a part of their training this year, the team members participated in the Mackinac Island Road Race. The team ran around the island Labor Day weekend.

Spieles said the team looks very promising this year. The Charlevoix team finished second in the conference last year and the coach hopes to do as well this year.

"We will miss Wally Drenth, our all-star," Spieles said. "But we have some real promising kids coming up."

"We will have some depth this year and the team appears to be really competitive," he said. "Somebody is always pushing somebody and it makes them have to work harder."

Returning lettermen on the cross country team are: Mark Russell, Jeff Drenth, Gene Morrison and Ron Hilton. Besides losing Drenth, the team also lost Nat Klooster, who graduated last year.

Spieles said he has 12 boys running now and he hopes to end up with around 16 team members. He encourages any interested student to come out for the team. Practices will be held right after school.

For the privacy seeker. This three bedroom one and a half bath home offers all the advantages of one of Charlevoix's most unique areas. Close to Lake Michigan (2 blocks) and close to the city. Maximum privacy on this heavily wooded lot with it's own stream. This attractive package price at $29,500.

Using bow and arrow not easy

American Indians weren't the great shots with bows that Hollywood films have made them out to be.

In battle, they preferred close combat with clubs, tomahawks, knives, or spears instead of trying to tell their foes a distance with arrows.

When hunting, careful stalking was necessary to bring a brave as close as possible to his prospective dinner before risking a feathered shaft.

Of course, the Indians were only working with homemade equipment. Given today's fiber-glass-coated, compound bows with contoured grips, adjustable sights and stabilizers, and precision-machined aluminum arrows, the tribes might have turned back those Westbound wagon trains.

Space Age Technology

Even the English longbowmen who punched holes in the myth of armored invincibility by trouncing 13 times their number of French knights at Agincourt in 1415 could not have equaled the accuracy archers now attain with Space Age armament.

Using modern equipment, Darrell Pace can put a quiver-full of hollow metal arrows in a bull's-eye nearly a football field away. The American teenager won a Gold Medal at the Olympic Games in Montreal, officially becoming the world's best bowman.

To hit targets at ranges of 90 meters, or 97 1/2 yards, Olympic contestants use a three-piece, take-down bow consisting of a central grip and double-curved upper and lower sections.

Stabilizing rods protruding from the bow hold sliding weights that can be set to keep the bow from twisting when the archer releases the string.

Graduated Sights

The molded grip includes an adjustable notch in which the arrow rests, and a vertical bar whose peep sight is raised or lowered to give the right trajectory for specified distances.

A brightly colored nocking point on the Daeron or Kevlar bowstring assures that each arrow is positioned exactly the same way, for more uniform shots.

The arrows are precision drawn, aluminum alloy tubes with metal points and plastic vanes-instead of feathers-to make the shafts fly true.

In a nod to tradition, the core of the bow still is wood, usually a thin strip of maple. It is overlaid with a matrix of strong plastic in which glass fibers are embedded.

These laminated bows, approximately four feet tall and with pulls of 28 to 35 pounds, are accurate at greater distances than the 15th-century longbows that stood six or seven feet tall and had pulls of 65 to 70 pounds.

statistic right. I think we are slowly achieving that since criminal complaints this year as compared to the same time last year have more than doubled. Any success we have had this first eight months belongs to 20 and-a-half other people who work for the department. They have made it work, especially Mr. Stockwell, the best undersheriff a Sheriff could have.

COURIER: Have you moved into the Sheriff's quarters in the jail?

LASATER: No, and I'm not going to. I don't think it's a good place to raise children. I'm still living in Boyne City although I've been trying to find a house in the Charlevoix area. So far I haven't found one that I could afford.

COURIER: How large a family do you have?

LASATER: My wife, Margaret, and I have three children. Amy is 11, Thomas George is eight, and George Robert is seven. My wife is a substitute teacher in the Boyne City school system.

Volunteer floor workers, volunteer sales personnel and volunteers for other projects were able to make layettes for needy babies, slippers for patients, toys for pediatric patients, tray favors for all holidays and Christmas decorations throughout the hospital.

Mrs. Squire concluded by saying "A community is its service. Join us in a very important and functional one by becoming a member of the Women's Guild of the Charlevoix Hospital now."

City hires employees under CETA

Nine new CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) have been hired by the City of Charlevoix, City Administrator Allen Sandberg said.

The CETA employees are being hired with extra funds that the city recently received through the CETA program. The new employees will be used on several projects around the city.

One of the first projects will be to replace the ski poles at Mt. McSaba. Recreation area. Also at Mt. McSaba the new employees will be clearing an area for an ice skating rink.

The CETA employees will assist city crews in the lowering of water services throughout the city so that the pipes won't freeze up in cold weather. The new employees will also be working on burying electric cables.

When Labor Day arrives we know it is time to say goodbye to our summer friends and to look forward to their return another year.

Mrs. S. E. Chamberlain returned Wednesday to her home in Webster Groves, Missouri, after spending the summer in her cottage at Sequanota.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tessman of St. Petersburg, Florida, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Christenson.

Diane Alexander and college roommate MarLu Davis of Traverse City spend the weekend with the former's parents Mr. and Mrs. Sam Alexander.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Folkens of Stockton, Ill., were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Brink.

Mrs. Lorena Beene is making her home at the Van Pelt Nursing Home in Atwood. We miss her from our community.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hanson of Clarkston called on old friends recently. Paul's parents George and Mable Hanson owned and operated a cherry orchard several years ago on M-66 and were active workers in the community. Friends and neighbors extend their sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Philip Myner on the death of his brother Joseph Myner in Sault St. Marie.

Paving completed on streets

The paving of city streets has been completed for the summer, according to Charlevoix City Administrator Allen Sandberg.

Tri-City Asphalt completed the paving program for the city during a three week period. The city spent approximately $20,000 resurfacing certain sections of streets throughout the town.

City crews are currently tarring and chipping various bad spots remaining on unpaved streets. Tarring and Chipping is the patching of holes with a mixture of tar and stone.

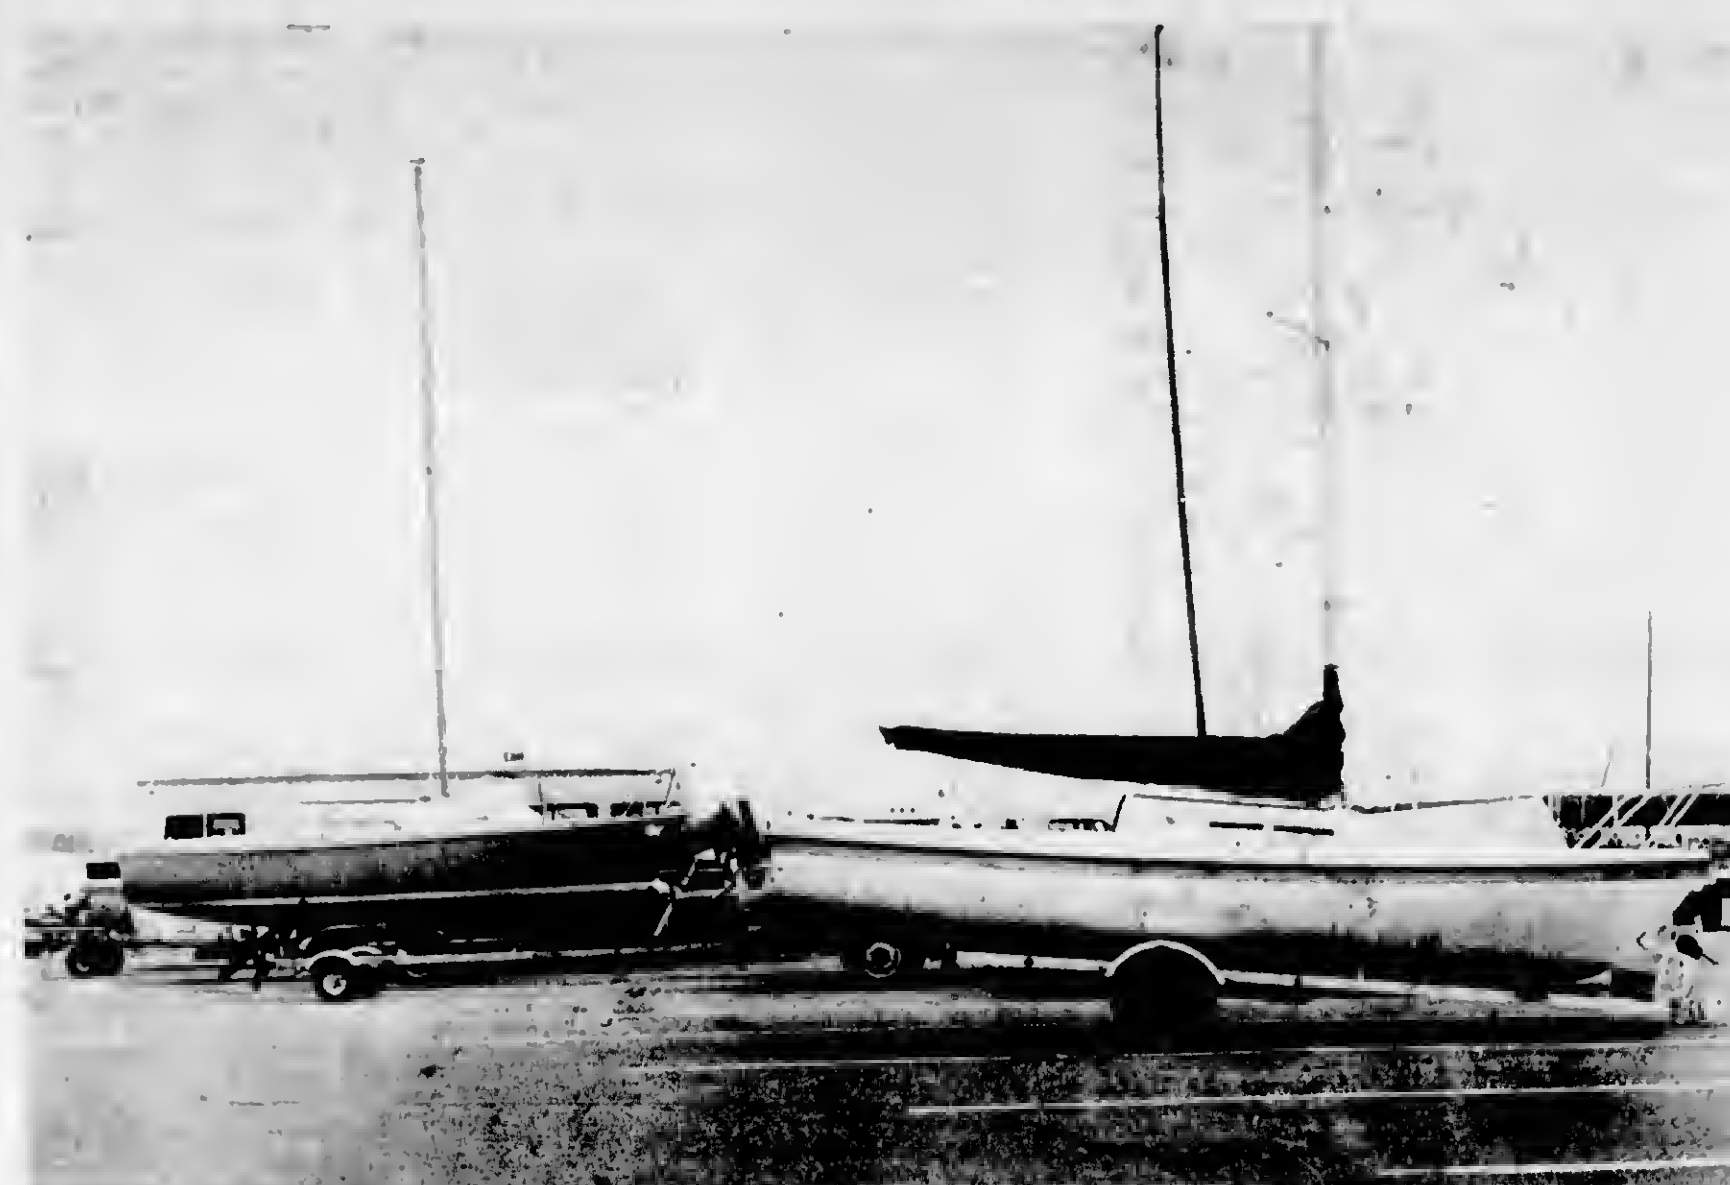

Electric crews working on burying cables

City of Charlevoix electric crews have been hard at work burying some street lights on the north side, according to City Administrator Allen Sandberg.

Sandberg said the crews had finished burying and burying the lines for street lights on Dixon Avenue and were working in the Meech Street area and one other street where the lighting has been poor.

The city administrator did not estimate when the work would be completed.

Charlevoix not ready to give up summer

THE BOAT LAUNCHING areas by Ferry Avenue Beach showed signs of the end of summer as trailer after trailer was loaded up with boats headed for home.

WHILE SUMMER may be over, Charlevoix seems to be refusing to give it up. People were still touring the city boat slips and the slips were still full of boats enjoying the last nice days of the season.

Local businesses experience better than average summer

Summer came early to Charlevoix this year and with it an early influx of tourists.

However, August weather turned out to be the coolest in history, and the number of tourists declined a bit.

With it all, however, Charlevoix' summer tourist season was better than last year's.

That is the consensus of opinion voiced by most motel and restaurant people surveyed by the Courier last week.

No definite amount of sales increases could be determined, but one motel source indicated that it was "probably about 3.5 percent for the season" at his place of business.

July seems to have been the best month all around, with June showing the greatest increase in business over last year.

The cool weather in August is causing some business people to feel apprehensive about the coming weeks, fearing that there may be an early fall.

However, the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce reports that it already has 150 reservations for the first boat color tour, on October 1, and two motels report they are "well booked" for the color season.

Local shops are not as unanimous in their assessment of summer business, with comments running from "up some" to "a lot of shoppers but not as many buyers."

Most of them are looking forward to the color season, though. One shop owner volunteered that "fall tourists seem to spend more money than summer tourists."

After 19 years with Freedman Artercraft Josephine Stutzman retires

JOSEPHINE STUTZMAN got plenty of help celebrating her retirement from Freedman Artercraft. Here her husband Joseph helps during the celebration in her honor at the Grey Gables.

Things were a bit different for Josephine Stutzman when she got up Monday morning. For the first time—in 19 years, Mrs. Stutzman didn't go off to work in the bookkeeping department of Freedman Artercraft Engineering Corp.
"I'm going to do all the things I haven't been able to do," Mrs. Stutzman said of her retirement during a celebration in her honor at the Grey Gables last week.
"I'm going to take up gardening and hand work and we're going to do some traveling, too. In fact, we're leaving for west next week."

The bookkeeper said she planned to just plain relax, too.
"This winter I think I'll just stay in bed at 7:30 a.m. and laugh when everyone else has to get up and dig themselves out," she quipped. "I won't miss that."

"Oh, I bet she'll be up at 7:30 with nothing to do," a co-worker said. "Knowing Josie, she won't be able to stay in bed."

Mrs. Stutzman said she has seen a lot of changes at Freedman's over the last 19 years.
"I've seen a lot of people come and go," she said. "I've seen a lot of changes and a lot of moves."
There have even been some changes in her own department. When Mrs. Stutzman started at Freedman's she handled all of the books herself. Now the department has a computer and four workers.
The plant has grown, too. There was a time when it was down to 17 employees total, Mrs. Stutzman said. Now there are about 130 people working in the Charlevoix plant.

Mrs. Stutzman got her start at Freedman's on a piece of good and bad luck.
"I was getting bored with the job I had so I went over to Freedman's to put in an application," she recalled. "The lady that took the application said there weren't any openings at the time and the only way I could get in would be if one of the girls fell down and broke her leg."

Within a couple of days Mrs. Stutzman received a phone call from Freedman's asking her to come to work. One of the women had fallen and broken her leg and they needed a replacement.
Mrs. Stutzman moved to Charlevoix in 1928 with her parents. She went to business college in Chicago and worked for General Motors in Chicago and Detroit before returning here.
She and her husband have two children, a daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Hurt who is a business teacher in Allegan and a son, Gary Stutzman, who is the Charlevoix High School band director.
They are also expecting their first grandchild within the next few months.
"That'll keep me busy, too," she said.

Willie Hable, a 4-year-old with the biggest dimples this side of the Mississippi, was all smiles as he talked about his first day at school.

Kindergartners find school to their liking

By LAURA GLASS
Wednesday, Sept. 7. The day most mothers had been awaiting for several weeks, the First Day of School.

The day hundreds of kids headed off to start a new year of education, well equipped with paper, pencils and gym shoes.

The day mothers of kindergartners shed a few tears for their little "grown-ups" and the day mothers of seniors shed tears for their grown ups, too.

We've known this day was coming for a long time. The last few weeks of summer always show signs of the preparation for school—Olson's has a sale on notebooks, paper and pencils, shoe stores get huge new

Senior housing site needed, but not swap of land and roads

The question of where to locate senior citizen housing in Charlevoix has been a hard one to answer. The Charlevoix Housing Commission has been working on a solution for more than three years without much success.

Many of the available sites in town did not meet the requirements set up for the location of senior citizens by the federal and state agencies loaning construction funds. Other lots, which met the various requirements needed to obtain special funding for the construction of a senior housing complex, have been priced too high to make it feasible to construct senior housing on the property.

It's been a frustrating last couple of years for the housing commission and the Charlevoix Common Council. And it's been hard on the senior citizens, too.

Many of the senior citizen residents in this community subsist mainly on social security checks. They need a housing complex like the one that has been proposed in order to ease the strain on their tight budgets.

Once again the housing commission has found a site it feels may be suitable for the location of a senior housing complex. The commission members are considering swapping the parts of Belvedere and Ferry avenues that run through the Belvedere Club for a five acre parcel of land that has been lying vacant on club property for more than 100 years.

The housing commission had approached the club last spring to see if it would consider selling the parcel to the city at a reduced price. The Belvedere Club Board of Trustees felt the swap would be more in order.

solving two problems. The swap would afford the club more privacy and the city would finally have the property it needs for a senior citizen housing complex.

To close off Belvedere and Ferry avenues to through traffic just is not feasible. Yes, there are other ways to get to Ferry Avenue from the north side of town than just on Belvedere Avenue, but they are less direct. And the chances are the traffic that now uses Belvedere Avenue would end up winding through neighborhoods that are much more populated.

As it is, Belvedere Avenue has very few driveway entrances, small children or other people on it. However, other streets in the area have numerous driveways emptying onto them and are heavily trafficked by pedestrians.

To compound the traffic problems on these streets by adding more cars would not be a good idea. Also, the route to Belvedere and homes along Ferry Avenue would not be as direct as it is from Belvedere Avenue and people are bound to get lost compounding the traffic problem even further.

Also police and fire protection may be seriously hampered if the streets are closed off within the Belvedere Club.

Perhaps, because the project is so important to the city the Belvedere Club would consider selling the vacant property to the housing commission at a reduced price. But closing off parts of Belvedere and Ferry avenues is a price too high even for such a worthwhile project.

If the housing commission cannot obtain the property it should look at other parcels within the city.

Mr. and Mrs. McMillan oppose land swap

Dear Editor:

In regard to the land swap which is proposed to benefit senior citizens, I recall having read that among the criteria for selection of a site the following considerations are important:

A convenient shopping center is a must for groceries, clothing, etc.

Places of worship, recreation and town activities as well as beauty parlors, barber shops, pharmacy and restaurants within walking distance as well as clinics, medical and dental, be within reasonable distance from the domicile.

If the Alice-Griffith area is accepted, how can these facilities be made available? Low income senior citizens cannot afford to patronize such and many may not have autos, or be able to drive.

A downtown highrise, perhaps at the Erber Garage lot, would offer access to most, and with a superb view of the lake from the upper levels.

Lots now for sale at a comparative lower price would be near the new shopping center but would be secondary in choice for other facilities at this time.

To deny access to Ferry Ave. & Belvedere does not seem to be a democratic approach. Already a delightful view of Lake Charlevoix has been eliminated by permitting shrubbery and trees to blot out the scenery to all except those so fortunate as to live on the bluff or those able to utilize the beach.

Very truly yours,
James & Frances McMillan

I think I'm safe in saying that I have devoted the last 15 years of my life to jeans.

I've shrunk 'em, ravled 'em, patched 'em, bleached 'em, softened 'em, aged 'em, and pounded the wrinkles into submission. Cooped up in a utility room with nothing but jeans for that long can make you strange.

"If you ask me," I said to my husband, "jeans have gotten out of hand. They're all anybody wears anymore."

"What's the matter with that?"

"I read the other day where a bride went through her entire ceremony with her fly open."

"You exaggerate."

"I do not exaggerate. I went with your daughter the other day to one of the places with wall-to-wall, ceiling-to-floor jeans. I was the only one in the entire store with a skirt. I looked like a chair. Someone tried to put a wad of bubble gum on my knee."

"Why are you buying more jeans?" I asked her. "For once, why don't you buy a nice wrap-around skirt and a T-shirt with a little sweater knotted around your neck like Marlo Thomas? Aren't you sick and tired of sounding like you're trying to start a fire without matches everytime you walk across the floor?" If you don't want to consider me, think of your Grandmother who asked me just the other day if we couldn't chip in and buy you a pair of legs."

"Look Mom," said our daughter, "I'm an individual person. When I dress I want to be unique. Don't you understand? I want to be me."

"She said this surrounded by 25,000 pairs of jeans all alike. I'm worried," I said to my husband. "If jeans get any tighter, you know there's a place in New York where you actually lie down a car bed under a mirrored ceiling and three salespeople zip you into your jeans? According to them your eyes should bulge when you put them on."

"The fat has to go someplace," he said logically.

"You haven't heard the worst of it. Our daughter came out of the fitting room, flung her jeans at me and said, 'Mom, you'll have to shrink 'em two inches in the waistband, three inches in the hips and four inches off each leg. Then, rip out the pocket, take out the hem and fray the legs so they'll drag on the ground, wash them 15 times just to soften 'em up and bleach them for 15 minutes in the sun.'"

"Why are you buying them?" I asked tiredly.

"Because," she said. "They're perfect!"

If it Fittz

by Jim Fitzgerald

"It is not easy being a sportswriter, especially when you are writing about a new sport," I explained to my wife when she asked what happened to my can of beer.

We were at Memorial Park in East Detroit to see my first slo-pitch softball game. The Detroit Caesars were playing the Cincinnati Reds. Ed Hayes bought the beer.

Ed is public relations director for the Caesars. Years ago he was sports columnist for the old Detroit Times and I was his admiring reader.

So it was a kick to find him behind a large beard at the popcorn counter. I immediately began asking him questions concerning this new variety of baseball.

"Don't they sell beer at this counter?" I asked.

They didn't, but Ed found a counter where they did. While he was treating, Ed quoted an incredible statistic from the world of sports. He said he had never once in his life had a drink of alcohol.

I admitted I had never heard of a sports writer who didn't booze at least a little bit. Ed explained that he had been the designate guy in an exceedingly wet sports department.

It was necessary that someone always remain sober enough to distinguish a lute smash from a blazing fast ball. Ed got the beer because his desk was nearest to the wall thermometer.

I didn't find it easy to take notes on Ed's startling revelations. We were standing and I had a can of beer in one hand and a box of popcorn in the other.

To free my pencil hand, I stuck the popcorn under my left arm. I used the beer can as a desk for my note pad, holding the can with three fingers and the pad with the fourth finger and the thumb.

Considering how many years it has been since I wrote sports on a regular basis, I thought it was a splendid performance.

I could see the admiration in Ed's eyes, especially when I kept writing as we walked.

"You are spilling your popcorn all over the ground," my wife said. "Are we playing some kind of Hansel and Gretel game?"

"The box was closed at both ends when I put it under my arm," I explained. "Obviously I applied a little too much pressure in the elbow area, causing one end of the box to pop open. You must remember that the last baseball game I covered was in 1959. It will be a while before I completely regain my timing and touch."

A few minutes later, after buying more popcorn, Pat and I were seated high in the bleachers behind home plate. "This will require a switch in tactics," I said.

I put the can of beer and box of popcorn between my legs, above the knees, for between linings.

This freed both hands for taking notes. The Caesars hit three home runs and scored seven runs in the first inning, and I recorded all the action with a dexterous thoroughness reminiscent of a young Joe Falls.

You might wonder why I didn't share the popcorn with Pat, letting her hold the box.

She refuses to share popcorn with me at movies or ball games, because she doesn't like the way I eat it. She insists popcorn should be eaten one or two kernels at a time.

Like most normal people, I grab a fistful of popcorn and then slowly open the fist as it is pressed against my face. In one minute you get more popcorn in your nose than I get in my mouth in one hour," she explained on our first date. "This is unfair to me. You must promise to always buy me my own box of popcorn, or I will never marry you."

Now you know why our wedding vows were different than most. But back at the slo-pitch game...

At the start of the second inning, Pat had a question for the sports expert. "What happened to your beer?" she said.

Good Lord. It was gone.

I could see the foam foaming far below, on the ground under the bleachers. When I had relaxed my thigh muscles enough to allow my fist inside the popcorn box, I had apparently forgotten to keep the upper muscles tense enough to hold the can of beer secure.

A man cannot return to sports writing after 16 years and expect to immediately be as good as he ever was. Besides, this was a new game.

"I am not used to night baseball," I explained. "I lost my beer in the lights."

Onward and Upward.

Meet Charlevoix

...Perry Smith

Perry Smith is a life-long resident of Charlevoix and a retired rural mail carrier. Here the Courier talks with him about "this and that".

COURIER: How long were you with the Post Office?

SMITH: I went to work for them in 1948 and took Rural Route 1 in 1959. I retired last February. It was the best job I ever had. I really enjoyed it.

COURIER: How long a route was Route 1?

SMITH: When I started, it was 46 miles and 240 families. When I retired, it was 79 miles and over 500 families. Almost every time you drive out that way now, there's a new house.

COURIER: What area does Route 1 cover?

SMITH: Norwood, Marlon, Barnard, and you go in and out of Antrim County twice.

COURIER: Do you miss the people along the route?

SMITH: Oh, yes, but I see some of them often, even go to visit some. I watched the kids grow up from birth to marriage, although I questioned their sanity when they decided to get married. I got the pick of the garden and lots of baked goods from the girls, and spirits. Even though I miss the people, I'm not going to miss the job in the winter months. When the snow is blowing, I'll just look out the window and feel sorry for my replacement, Bill Seese. I miss the group in the Post Office, too. They pester one another and play jokes. They're a good bunch.

COURIER: What's the best golf course in the area?

SMITH: The Belvedere. It's in such beautiful shape right now, it's too bad summer is over.

COURIER: Any other hobbies?

SMITH: I have a boat and do some fishing. I sing in St. Mary's choir.

COURIER: What about gardening?

SMITH: I leave that to my wife and daughter. I like the looks of our garden.

COURIER: You said you just bought some lumber. What are you going to do with it?

SMITH: I'm doing some work on the back of the house. I'm not a carpenter, but if I look painful enough, I can get some good help.

COURIER: Do you belong to any organizations?

SMITH: The VFW and American Legion.

COURIER: Have you ever had a political job?

SMITH: No. I never had any political aspirations. I'd rather battle a grizzly bear with a buggy whip.

COURIER: What did you do before you went to work at the Post Office?

SMITH: I ran the city golf course for two years then went into the Army. I served in New Guinea, the Philippines, and Australia. I got out New Year's Day, 1946. Then I drove a gas truck for W. H. Wallace before going to the Post Office. I used to do a little moonlighting by tending bar at the Belvedere Club for parties. It helped in raising four kids. The Belvedere Club even let me use the casino when two of my daughters were married.

COURIER: Tell us about your family.

SMITH: I married Billie Meyer. She graduated from high school in 1929, a year after I did. She's a year younger than I am, and I hear about it quite often. We have four kids. Perry, Jr. has been in the Air Force 16 years. He is stationed in Spokane, Washington, and has two children, Colleen lives in Racine, Minnesota, and has three children. Leigh Ann lives in the Air Force. Her husband is in the Air Force. They'll be home in a year with their two children. Connie works at Oleson's and has two children. I'd like to visit them all. Right now I'm trying to get my wife to go to Belgium to visit Leigh Ann and her family. I would hate to be raising kids these days. A lot of parents wish they hadn't voted to lower the drinking age to 18.
